Trade Chiefs Gather to Ask Government For Freedom

1,000 in New York For Congress of American Industry.

Conclave Theme Is 'Let Us Alone'

Industrial Leaders Will Speak Plainly on New Deal.

By Felix Bruner.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, Dec. 3.—Recognizing business as definitely on the upgrade, nearly 1,000 industrial leaders were gathering here tonight to adopt a platform for American industry, the keynote of which is expected to be a demand for freedom from governmental domination.

Meeting less than a week before the business conference called in Washington by George L. Berry, coordinator for industrial co-operation, to determine what steps, if any, should be taken to supplant the old NRA, industrialists attending the meeting here are expected to speak plainly. Their answer, which will be contained in a mass of resolutions, undoubtedly will boil down to three words: "Let us alone."

The occasion of the meeting is the annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers and the Congress of American Industry. The keynote is expected to be sounded by Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors Corporation, who will be the principal speaker at a dinner tonight. Among other industrial leaders on the program are E. T. Weir, chairman of the National Steel Corporation; James W. Hook, president of the Geometric Tool Co.; George H. Houston, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and Lammot duPont, president of the E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co. Among a large number of other speakers will be Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution; Dr. Neil Carothers, director of the College of Business Administration, Lehigh University, and J. Warren Madden, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board.

Critical Resolutions.

Committees composed of leading manufacturers and business men have been working for weeks in preparation of resolutions to be presented to the convention. They will be devoted almost entirely to the relationship of government and business, covering broadly the subjects of government finance, government competition with private enterprise, social security and proposals for revival of the NRA, or the substitutions of some other system of government regulation.

With the Congressional session and the Presidential campaign approaching, business representatives attending the convention are determined to make themselves heard and are expected to express themselves in terms even stronger than those used heretofore. This meeting is expected to mark another step in the march of business away from the New Deal and New Deal policies. This march started definitely a year ago at a similar meeting, which was followed by adoption at a special convention at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., of a platform critical of the New Deal. The move was further accentuated when the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the country's other large representative of organized business, definitely broke with the Administration on most of its policies.

Denies Labor Equality.

While the convention here may not take a completely negative attitude toward Berry's conference next week, it is expected to go on record as opposing a permanent council in which labor will have equal representation with business. Recent labor legislation is expected to come in for considerable criticism in resolutions.

Government spending is expected to be the main center of attack, with the argument that if private business is permitted to go its way without Government interference, it will be able to absorb most of the unemployed and thus make huge relief expenditures unnecessary.

Four Slain and Five Wounded As Ten Smash Out of 2 Prisons

Civilian and Two Convicts Die in Boston Break; Guards Knifed, Clubbed; Fleeing Felon Is Killed in Muskogee; Officer Shot.

By the United Press.

Boston, Dec. 3.—Striking suddenly, five desperate long-term convicts, armed with sharp tools and bludgeons, attacked their guards today, escaped from Massachusetts' ancient State prison by battering down a gate with a commandeered motor truck, and were recaptured only after three men had been slain and four wounded.

A lead pipe in the hands of one of the desperadoes crushed out the life of a civilan employe of the prison.

Bullets fired by a pursuing guard pierced the head and heart of one of the fleeing prisoners.

A second convict died of his wounds tonight in the prison infirmary.

The three surviving confederates face a possible penalty of death in the electric chair as prison officials moved swiftly to procure murder warrants against them in connection with the slaying of the civilian.

The dead:

Louis Richards, 27, Somerville, father of one child and a civilian employe of the prison. He was bludgeoned to death with a heavy pipe as the five convicts commandeered his truck in the prison yard.

Guards Stabbed, Clubbed.

Philip Maples, 32, Worcester, sentenced only last month to 16 to 20 years for robbery. He stubbed his toe shortly after the break and was shot throught the head and heart by a guard.

William P. ("Red") McManus, 27, Boston South-Ender, serving 20 to 24 years for armed robbery. He was shot through the chest and abdomen and died at the prison infirmary.

The wounded:

Charles P. O'Brien, 28, Dorchester, serving 18 to 29 years for armed robbery. He was shot in the calf of his left leg. O'Brien escaped from Norfolk State Prison Colony in 1932 and more recently was involved in another escape attempt at State Prison.

Another Hit With Pipe.

Edward J. Shaughnessy, a guard. He was stabbed by one of two fugitives armed with sharp instruments apparently stolen from the prison workshop.

Michael O'Donnell, a guard, who was slugged with a piece of pipe.

William McDonald, a trusty and life-term prisoner who already has served 20 years. He also was slugged while working on the truck on which Richards was slain.

The other convicts involved in the break were Frank Joyce, 20, Boston, serving 16 to 24½ years for armed robbery, and Edward McArdle, 24, serving 8 to 10 years for armed robbery and assault with in-

President Still Secretive About 'Great Bankers'

Expresses Unconcern as to Where Convention Is Held in 1936.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.,
A Staff Correspondent.

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 3.—President Roosevelt today declined to make public the names of the "great bankers" who, he said in his Atlanta speech, told him in the spring of 1933 that the country could stand without danger a national debt of between 55 and 70 billion dollars.

Nor has the President any intention of making the names of these "great bankers" public, he said. Aside from newspaper inquiries, he has not received any request to identify those whom he contended last Friday were so optimistic about the limits to which the national debt could rise, the President said at his semi-weekly press conference.

Bankers Who Conferred.

Mr. Roosevelt, however, said he has a list of names, and some letters on file and added the suggestion that it might be worthwhile to look up the financial journals of that period. The latter suggestion was taken as significant, but none of the financial writers here could recall anyone who made such predictions about the limits of the national debt.

An examination of the financial journals for March and April, 1933, it was believed, would indicate those bankers who conferred with the President, either individually or in groups during that critical period. Among the "great bankers" who conferred with the President in that period who came to mind here today were W. W. Aldrich, president of the Chase National Bank; James H. Perkins, president of the National City Bank; Howard Bruce, president of the Baltimore National Bank and Democratic na-

Historians Hit 'Red' Charges Against Book

School Board Deluged With Telegrams Defending Becker.

Its Officials Deny Report on Investigation to Be Made Today.

Telegrams deluged the Board of Education yesterday as representatives of 13 universities came to the defense of Carl L. Becker, author of a high school textbook, "Modern History," which is under fire here because of alleged pro-communist passages.

They started coming late Monday night and continued until the board offices in the Franklin Building closed at 4:30 p. m. yesterday, and by that time, 22 telegrams, bearing 28 names, and five letters had been received.

The writers included historians as prominent as Charles A. Beard, Sidney B. Fay, Arthur M. Schlesinger and Charles Seymour, and another was the former member of the National Industrial Recovery Board, Walton H. Hamilton, now chief of NRA's consumers division.

"It's all a complete surprise to us," said Charles B. Degges, board secretary.

Officials Are Surprised.

School officials joined in saying they did not know why the storm had risen so suddenly. Robert A. Maurer, Board of Education member who is chairman of the board committee investigating three textbooks, including Becker's, and eight supplementary readings, had a theory:

"They probably assumed that we might make our report to the board tomorrow, but we won't. We're going ahead deliberately, and we're making progress, but we realize that we couldn't get a report in shape to submit that soon."

Maurer said the report would be submitted to the school board at its meeting on December 16. This will still be far in advance of the time the subject of communism normally comes up in the school curriculums.

No Hearings Asked.

Meanwhile, Becker, a Cornell University professor and past president of the American Historical Association, was reported to be on his way to a local hotel. Late last night he had not arrived.

School officials said they had not asked him to come, and added that he had not asked any hearing for today's board meeting, although some of the telegrams indicated that the writers thought he had been summoned.

Maurer said he had not communicated with Becker—"nor he with me."

Honduras Seizes Leaders of 'Revolt'

Charges Accused Had Help From Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Dec. 3—Imprisonment of alleged leaders of a planned revolt was announced tonight by the Honduran government, which asserted the conspiracy had been frustrated.

An official statement said the alleged conspirators had co-operation from abroad and that they had been warned some time ago to cease plotting. The government, asserting the conspiracy was formulated by Liberal Party members, announced:

"President Tiburcio Carias, having taken this warning step, declines all responsibility for happenings which may occur in the future."

Standard Oil's Deal With Italy To Forestall League Reported; Ickes Denies Asking Fuel Ban

Secretary Says He Spoke of 'Munitions' in His November Talk.

Hull Cracks Down Upon Arms Makers

Warns Them to Register Under Law or Face Legal Action.

By the Associated Press.

A threat of swift legal action against any arms maker or exporter who violates the neutrality act came yesterday from Secretary Hull, coincident with a new stir over the matter of oil shipments to Italy.

Secretary Ickes, disavowing that he spoke for the Administration or sought to interpret its "foreign policy," last night reiterated in a statement that American oil producers should operate strictly within the Government's neutrality policy. He did not, however, expand that view.

Asserting he had been misunderstood at a press conference last November 21, when he was quoted as promoting a voluntary oil embargo against Italy and Ethiopia, Ickes moved to align himself with the Administration policy of discouraging "excessive" exports to the belligerents. Only arms shipments are embargoed.

"War Munitions" Meant.

Secretary Hull's threat of legal action was directed against makers or handlers of arms or ammunition not registered with the State Department by last November 29, as required by the neutrality act. He said 86 firms or individuals had listed themselves, but "presumed" others had not.

Secretary Ickes' statement last night followed a stormy press conference during the day. At that time he asserted he had been "misunderstood" at his November 21 press conference in urging oil producers to withhold shipments of "war materials" to the belligerents. His words, he said, were "war munitions." Oil is not classed with munitions. Reporters present at the previous conference understood him to use the former phrase.

In his formal statement Ickes said he had replied last month, when asked what American oil producers should do:

"They ought to co-operate in letter and spirit with the efforts of the Government to keep us from furnishing war munitions to belligerents."

Government Policy.

The policy of the Government has been to ban flatly only arms shipments and to "discourage" the export to belligerents of "abnormal" supplies of other materials.

The Interior Secretary said his press conference attempt yesterday to "clarify a previous misunderstanding has itself been misinterpreted in some quarters." His words had stirred wide international reaction, and apparently referring to this, he added:

"Naturally, I have not undertaken to speak for other departments of the Government relative to foreign policy. I have no intimation from any other Government department of any change in the Government's policy."

In Rome, where sharp resentment was voiced over the remarks originally attributed to the Interior Secretary, official circles expressed pleasure over his new statement.

In League of Nations circles at

Tri-Power Peace Conference Believed Premier Laval's Aim

He Is Considering Inviting Hoare and Aloisi to Discuss With Him a Plan for Settlement Being Drawn by British and French Experts.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 3.—Diplomatic observers said tonight Premier Pierre Laval of France was considering calling a tri-power conference in an attempt to break the European deadlock on a search for Ethiopian peace.

M. Laval, these sources said, may invite Sir Samuel Hoare, the British foreign secretary, and Baron Pompeo Aloisi of Italy to meet with him either in Paris or on the Riviera.

They would then discuss a technical plan for settlement of the conflict which is being drawn up here by Maurice Peterson and Comte Rene Saint-Quentin, the British and French foreign office African experts.

Such a conference, diplomats pointed out, would circumvent Italian and British reluctance to be the first to make a peace gesture by allowing "both to make it at the same time."

Officials said no indications of the nature of the work being conducted by Peterson and Saint-Quentin had been given to Italy and any active negotiations would have to wait until their study has been completed.

M. Laval, they said, hopes to discuss the preliminary work of the two experts with Sir Samuel Hoare when the latter comes to Paris Saturday, as well as to examine the possibility of his plan for a three-power conference.

So far, it was stated in diplomatic circles, the French premier has made no progress in his efforts to find a peace plan before an oil embargo against Italy is voted at Geneva.

This is because both Great Britain and Italy are waiting for the other to make the first move, it was explained.

Furthermore, M. Laval is spending much of his days planning his cabinet's defense in the French Chamber of Deputies, and his meeting with the British and Italian ambassadors have been temporarily suspended.

The French premier, replying today to a newspaperman's question

Subsidiary Held Ready to Ship Petroleum From Rumania.

Teagle Announces 'Agreement' False

Pact Allegedly Based on Granting of Monopoly on Fascist Trade.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Rome, Dec. 3.—The United Press was informed by unimpeachable sources tonight that the Italian government and the Soccieta Italo-Americana del Petrolio, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, have entered into a "gentlemens agreement" to circumvent any League of Nations oil embargo.

In the event of oil sanctions being adopted at Geneva, it is said, the S. I.-A. P. will supply Italy with all the petroleum she requires in return for a 30-year monopoly of the Italian market.

The oil would be supplied from wells controlled by Standard Oil outside the United States in order not to conflict with Washington's policy of discouraging oil shipments to the Italo-Ethiopian belligerents above "normal."

Rumanian Sources.

It is understood the oil chiefly would be obtained from Rumanian wells controlled by the American oil interests and shipped to Italy by way of Hungary, which abstained from League sanctions.

The agreement further stipulates that other shipments may be made from the Far East directly to Eritrea and Italian Somaliland to avoid traversing the British-controlled Suez Canal.

Italy's mechanized armies in east Africa thus would appear assured of a continuous supply of their vital oil.

Standard Oil, through its subsidiary, is understood to have agreed to extend to the Italian government a credit of 1,000,000,000 gold lire ($81,000,000)—for purchase of this oil.

The agreement would become effective when and if the League declares an oil embargo. The Geneva "sanctions general staff" of 18 meets December 12 to consider this sanction.

To Build Plant.

As soon as the embargo is applied S. I.-A. P. would be given the 30-year monopoly covering Italy and her colonies for sale of all petroleum and by-products which are required over and above what domestic Italy is able to produce in Italy or Albania. Italy has a close working arrangement with Albania.

The amount Italy will be able to produce is unknown, but officials of the A. G. I. P.—government-controlled company for exploitation of Italian oil—are confident that before the end of the year they can obtain 300,000 tons of crude oil from their Albanian wells.

An 8-inch pipeline has been completed to the Albanian port of Valona, where huge reservoirs now are under construction to receive oil which will be shipped thence to Bari, where under government subsidy of 70,000,000 lire ($5,670,000) the A. G. I. P. will build a refinery.

The company plans to construct a "hydrogenation" plant from German plans permitting distillation of 80 per cent gasoline from crude oil.

May Cut U. S. Monopoly.

Experts believe if the Italian project in Albania is successful it may cut deeply into the projected American monopoly.

According to official figures, Italy in 1934 imported crude oil and by-products to the value of approximately 176,000,000 lire ($14,256,000). This amount increased to about 226,000,000 ($18,306,000) during the first 10 months of 1935.

This business would go exclusively to the S. I. A. P. in event the agreement, concluded last week, is effective.

Announcement of the "gentleman's agreement" will, of course, be a subject for denials, but after three days of careful checking the United Press is confident the information given to it is correct.

The news admittedly will have

Allen Proposes Congress Give Vote to District

Referenda Would Be Only Advisory Under Plan of Commissioner.

District residents would be given the right to vote on District matters referred to them by the Commissioners under the provisions of a bill made public yesterday by Commissioner George E. Allen.

The bill will be introduced in the next session of Congress and he will seek to have it enacted, Commissioner Allen said. He made it clear the measure was his own idea. He hopes the other Commissioners will support it, but he is going to push it whether they do or do not, he said.

The referenda would be called by the Commissioners at such times and on such questions as the Commissioners specified. Not more than two might be called in any one fiscal year, but "any number of matters or questions" might be submitted at any referendum.

Results of the voting would be advisory, but not binding on the Commissioners under the measure. The voting "shall not be binding upon the Commissioners nor compel them to do any act or refrain from doing any act," the bill said.

The measure would empower the Commissioners to call a referendum limited to any part of the District. This was a direct result of the proposal to hold a referendum on the question of licensing sale of alcoholic beverages in Takoma Park, D. C. This plan was frustrated when the Distirict Supreme Court, at the behest of the Takoma drys, issued a temporary injunction on the eve of the proposed referendum. The Commissioners dropped the scheme.

Voters must be citizens of the United States, 21 or more years old, have lived within the District for at least a year immediately preceding the referendum and must not have any other voting privilege in any other place, "in any matter whatsoever;" and, in the case of a neighborhood referendum, must, in addition, have resided in the neighborhood for at least three months prior to the referendum.

A registration day for voters shall

Federal Court Asked to Enjoin Board on Arms

Suit Says Hull 'Extends' Export Bans Illegally By Statements.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 3.— Suit to nullify additions claimed to have been made to President Roosevelt's arms embargo in statements by Secretary of State Cordell Hull was filed late today by Philip Giordano, an employe of Generoso Pope, publisher of Italian newspapers.

The plaintiff's injunction petition asserts that statements about shipment of oil, cotton and other commodities constituted an order issued unconstitutionally.

The Federal district court was asked to enjoin Hull and other members of the National Munitions Control Board from enforcing such extensions.

An order was signed tonight by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard ordering the Cabinet members to show cause next Tuesday why they should not be restrained.

Former Judge Francis X. Mancuso, Giordano's attorney, said that the suit was not aimed at the Presidential order, which he considered proper, but was intended to restrain what he called improper extensions of that order to include scrap iron, cotton, oil, coal and other materials which he said Congress in its debate on the joint resolutions indicated it wished to exclude from its embargo provision.

"Congress had a right to pass the neutrality act," Judge Mancuso said. "However, if any member of the National Munitions Board has extended the list, then we say that the executive branch of the Government is usurping the legislative power."

Giordano's suit lists as defendants Secretary Hull, Secretary Henry Morgenthau of the Treasury, War Secretary George H. Dern, Navy Secretary Claude A. Swanson, Commerce Secretary Daniel C. Roper and Harry M. Durning, collector of the port.

Judge Mancuso said in comment on the suit that he felt it would be sufficient, for purposes of claiming great harm would ensue if an

3-Year-Old's Pennies Start 1935 Post Toy and Doll Fund

Appeals Paint Dreary Picture of Christmas Many Homes Expect Unless Plea Is Heeded Again This Year.

From the little tin bank of a 3-year-old girl yesterday came 100 shining copper pennies—to start The Washington Post's Toy and Doll Fund again this year.

Once more this fund, sponsored by The Post, will do its part in seeing that no needy child in all the city is without a toy or a doll at Christmas.

When Washington's more fortunate children gather around their Christmas trees, merry in their delight over the gifts of good St. Nicholas, there could be another picture in other homes, of children coming downstairs on Christmas morning to find not a single top—the most cheerless sight in all the world.

But this is only a bad dream unless citizens fail to rally behind The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund, and other efforts to prevent such tragedies to childhood in Washington.

With hundreds and thousands on relief or deprived of such assistance through relief cuts, the outlook for a toyless Christmas is dark indeed in many homes.

But Washington is a generous city and its people have come to the rescue year after year as the need is pointed out to them.

The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund thus provides a way to put a doll into the arms of every yearning little girl—a toy in the stocking of every little boy, to the delight of his heart.

All gifts of money or toys received by The Post's toy fund will be distributed to individuals assisting children, after the fact of real need has been established.

For many years The Post has conducted such a Christmas effort for the benefit of the needy children of the city. Thousands of residents have co-operated most generously with gifts to this fund year after year.

Last year more than 17,000 toys were assembled and distributed through agencies associated with the Council of Social Agencies, American Legion posts, children's institutions and in answer to indi-

Server Meets Mrs. Roosevelt, But Lugs Away the Summons

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 3.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had a smile for a process server today.

With an air of nervousness, the server approached her during a luncheon of the national public housing congress.

"I beg your pardon, Mrs. Roosevelt," he said hastily, "but may I serve this summons on you?"

Mrs. Roosevelt smiled pleasantly, accepted service and requested that the summons be delivered to 331 Madison avenue, the address of the Democratic national committee.

The summons, a bulky, 4-pound document, was in the $850,000 damage suit of Sunnyside Gardens—a low-cost housing development—against bondholders and directors of the City Housing Corporation.

Mrs. Roosevelt's name was thirteenth on a list of 164 defendants charged with misrepresentation and excessive charges in the New York housing development.

The process server, 24-year-old Mason Kassel, said later:

"I think Mrs. Roosevelt has a very charming personality.

"I approached her and said 'I do not wish to cause you any inconvenience and if you prefer you need not accept service at this time and place.'

"She smiled and said 'I wouldn't like to cart this thing around with me all afternoon. Would it be possible to send it to 331 Madison avenue?' I found out that was the Democratic national committee.

"The summons weighs 4 pounds and contains 360 pages."

Uncle Sam, a Versatile Fellow, Takes a Fling at New Cocktail

A new cocktail is about to be born, and Uncle Sam is its godfather. Secretary of the Interior Ickes announced yesterday that a "specialist" in his department was working on the recipe and doing all his own tasting.

The Public Works Administration, of which Harold Ickes is director, has financed a distillery in the Virgin Islands to produce the brown rum which, before American prohibition, made the islands both famous and prosperous.

The Government's liquor-making venture, according to Secretary Ickes, is nothing short of fine. A shipment of 25,000 gallons was recently sold to be used for blending by another rum concern, and the United States Government can now boast of having rum which is 18 months old "and getting older every day."

Rum, he pointed out, should age five years before being marketed, but could be used for blending purposes before that. The Government hopes to popularize Virgin Island rum in America in preference to the products of foreign countries. PWA has also built a hotel in the island and is attempting to advertise the climate, scenic attractions and picturesque inhabitants of the islands in an effort to divert to them some of the profitable American winter tourist trade which now goes to Cuba and British and French Caribbean islands.

In the early days of the World War the islands were purchased from Denmark for military rather than commercial reasons. At the time it was rumored that both England and Germany wished to purchase them for the purpose of establishing a naval base in the Caribbean.

Treasury Bars Scheme of AAA To Waive Taxes

'Friendly Gesture' Viewed as Likely to Be Held New Deal Retreat.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

High official quarters disclosed yesterday that a proposal to suspend all collection of processing taxes for at least a month had been made by the farm administration and rejected by the Treasury.

These sources said the suspension move was given "careful and serious consideration" as a gesture toward friendly processors and those unable to finance suits to enjoin collection.

Taxes paid by 70 per cent of the Nation's processors, it was said, were shown in a recent study to be tied up in court depositories pending a final decision on AAA's validity by the Supreme Court expected in January.

One reason for abandonment of the move to suspend all collections until the court rules, out of deference to the paying 30 per cent, was reported to have been a feeling that the public might have misinterpreted it as an AAA retreat in anticipation of an adverse decision.

Authority Questioned.

One question reported raised was of the authority of an administrative branch of government to suspend collection of any tax levied by Congress.

Meanwhile, a Texas planter and the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers assailed the Administration's farm program as "radical" and "unconstitutional" in briefs filed yesterday with the Supreme Court.

Lee Moor, the planter, expanded his attack on the Bankhead cotton control law to include all agricultural relief legislation. He forecast a march on Washington by a "bonus army composed of the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker" if the program is upheld.

The cotton manufacturers as a "friend of the court" contended the agricultural adjustment act nullifies the division of power between States and the Federal Government, and extends almost unlimited Federal power over local affairs.

"If Congress may levy taxes to be paid to farmers," Moor argued, "it may also levy taxes to pay lawyers, merchants, manufacturers, doctors, peddlers, barbers and mechanics.

Cites Non-Farmers' Claims.

"If it is of public importance that farmers should live in comfort with a minimum of effort, and that the purchasing power of farmers should be increased, it is of importance that all individuals shall so live."

Validity of the AAA is challenged in the Hoosac Mills case, to be argued orally next Monday. The law taxes processors of basic commodities to finance payments to farmers who participate in crop-reduction programs.

Moor is attacking the Bankhead law, which imposes a penalty tax on cotton ginned in excess of production quotas, in a suit to compel a railroad to haul cotton lacking tags to show this tax had been paid. The Government recently obtained permission to argue that the case can be decided without passing on the law's validity, but that if it can not, the law is valid. Oral arguments will follow the Hoosac Mills hearing.

"There never has been such a brazen, deliberate, gigantic attack upon State's rights in the history of the Nation; if it is successful all barriers are removed and the road is open for Federal regulation and control, under the transparent and insidious guise of a tax, of all industry, all agriculture and all business * * *."

5 Killed, 35 Injured As Auto Strikes Truck

Muskogee, Okla., Dec. 3 (AP).—Four unidentified Negro children and an unidentified Negro woman, all from the Deaf, Blind and Orphans School for Negroes at Taft, were killed when a truck in which they were en route to Muskogee for a Christmas parade was wrecked today.

At least 35 were injured, some seriously. Archie Edwards, the driver, said the truck was struck by a hit-run automobile and then careened into a steel bridge.

Between You and Me

Thinking Out Loud Unwise; Ickes' Dilemma An Illustration; Convention Scramble On.

By Raymond Clapper

HALF of the Roosevelt Administration's trouble has come from free and easy spending. The other half of it has come from too much free and easy talking.

Many officials have tongues set for hair-trigger action. Someone has called them push-button talkers. You push the button and they start talking.

Those of us in the newspaper business ought not to complain about that. It makes double news. Once when one of these officials says something. And again when he has to crawl back.

The latest instance of this is Secretary Ickes and his disavowal of an earlier statement that was generally interpreted as calling upon the oil industry voluntarily to withhold shipments of oil to Italy. Ickes says his original statement was "misunderstood." It isn't necessary to quibble about whether he said "war materials" or "munitions of war" shouldn't be shipped to Italy. He was asked about oil. The question was put at a press conference on November 21. It was not a "planted question" because it was asked by a reporter who does not happen to be friendly to Ickes.

At the time, it appeared that Ickes was speaking with inside knowledge of the Administration's policy and that his remark was part of the campaign to shut down on shipments of raw materials. It came the same day that the Shipping Board warned its operators that if they persisted in shipping to the belligerents they might have financing trouble at Washington. But after further inquiry, it was obvious that Ickes was speaking without prearrangement and was voicing only his personal view. That took most of the significance out of his remarks. Still there were so many repercussions that he has now had to explain that he was "misunderstood." All he meant to say was that everyone should abide by the neutrality law—which does not cover oil at all.

It doesn't matter much except that it illustrates the danger from the Government's point of view of officials talking loosely and giving horseback opinions on all sorts of Government policies.

Secretary Ickes is not the only one who does it. It seems to be in the blood of most New Dealers. Harry Hopkins had to crawl after a recent attack on Gov. Landon's relief policy. Hugh S. Johnson got himself into no end of trouble and helped start NRA downhill by picking up and adopting the "crack-down" phrase, which was first used in a question put to him by a newspaper reporter. Aubrey Williams, WPA assistant administrator, has given anti-New Dealers frequent texts by thinking out loud too often. In the midst of the Administration's campaign to reassure business, Dr. Rex Tugwell made a speech to California left-wingers which gave the conservative critics a new lease on life. Even President Roosevelt has been unable to restrain himself at times. Too much Administration barking has made the bite seem worse than it is.

Many New Deal officials forget that what a Government official says is accepted by most persons as a studied statement of policy. That makes it dangerous for an official to think out loud.

This trouble is likely to cause increasing embarrassment as the Presidential campaign becomes more heated. There are some in the Administration who are aware of the danger. Moves already have been made toward attempting to co-ordinate the talking in Washington so as to avoid a repetition of what happened around the Tower of Babel.

St. Louis is preparing to go after the Republican National Convention when the national committee meets here December 16 to make its decision. It has a new air-cooled auditorium. But its chief claim is that it has no Presidential candidate. Chicago and Kansas City are preferred by many Republicans, but there are complications. Meeting in Chicago the convention would be on the home grounds of Presidential Candidate Knox. Meeting in Kansas City, the convention would be in strongly pro-Landon territory.

Democratic national committeemen are reserving hotel space in Philadelphia. It isn't final, but there is some heavy influence in favor of launching the Roosevelt re-election campaign in the birthplace of the Constitution, just for the looks of the thing. Failure of the Democrats to carry Philadelphia in the recent city election slowed down the drive to take the convention there, but it hasn't killed it. Not as long as Senator Joe Guffey and Philadelphia's New Deal publisher, David Stern, are able to be up and about.

Commotion has been stirred up within Catholic circles since Notre Dame announced it would confer an honorary degree on President Roosevelt next Monday. The editor of the Baltimore Catholic Review in a page 1 editorial expresses regret that the degree has been offered. He says this feeling is widespread among friends of Notre Dame. Resentment is due to President Roosevelt's refusal to interfere in the Catholic dispute in Mexico.

The editor of the Catholic Review states that he has just returned from Notre Dame and that the degree is being conferred purely in gratitude for the independence of the Philippines, a Catholic country. He says the offer was extended before the President's recent letter was sent to the Knights of Columbus rejecting an appeal for intervention in the Mexican church dispute.

But to even things up, the Protestant Lincoln Memorial University in Tennessee recently made Roman Catholic James A. Farley a doctor of philosophy.

That's nothing to what happened to the House chaplain, the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, a short time ago. He was driving in Pennsylvania. A traffic officer stopped him. Dr. Montgomery, a Methodist, was wearing his clerical dress, which the officer mistook for that of a priest.

"That's all right, father," the officer said apologetically, "but I would advise that you drive very slowly because the next officer up the line is a Protestant.

Industry Chiefs Convene to Say 'Let Us Alone'

sary. It is expected that it will be argued that the Roosevelt policies have definitely retarded recovery.

There also is expected to be considerable demand that the Administration get back to the Constitution and avoid what some of the leaders here term "technical evasion." Control of production is expected to be condemned, as will also be the regulation of business financing.

Wants "Cease and Desist."

In connection with Government financing, the subject of budget balancing and a return to the gold standard are expected to be given particular attention.

The attitude of leaders of the meeting is summed up in a report of the committee on the relation of government to industry, prepared for presentation to the convention. It said:

"The President of the United States has recently said that the time has come for a 'breathing spell' for industry. Industry wants more than a breathing spell, with its obvious implications of a revival of regulatory legislation. What is needed is not a temporary truce; it is a permanent peace. What is needed is not a temporary cessation of regulatory legislation; industry asks in the familiar language of the Federal statutes a 'cease and desist' order and a removal of straitjacket legislation, which will give private industry, private labor and private initiative in every form a real chance to demonstrate its capacity to work out its own salvation.

Convention Program.

"It is no time for experimentation. Industry cannot operate efficiently when it is constantly besieged with new legislation, regulation, restriction, Government competition and taxation in all its forms. Contrary to the impression which is being manufactured by some who have an object to attain thereby, industry does not ask for any new legislation conferring upon it exemptions from established laws. As between the present anti-trust laws, which have been judicially interpreted over a period of 45 years, on the one hand, and new legislation of the type of the National Industrial Recovery Act, which purported to grant limited exemptions from the anti-trust laws, we unhesitatingly choose the anti-trust laws."

In connection with Government financing a report containing a 14-point program announced last week will be presented to the convention. It calls for drastic cuts in Government expenditures, opposes payment of the soldier bonus, discontinuance of Federal grants to States, and numerous other fiscal reforms.

The convention will open tomorrow morning with talks by C. L. Bardo, president, and James A. Emery, general counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers. They will be followed on the program by Bruce Barton, advertising agency executive. Dr. Moulton will speak at the luncheon meeting. Taxation will be the general subject of the afternoon conference, with Arthur A. Ballantine, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, as the principal speaker.

Government and industry will be the subject of the morning session Thursday, and the afternoon will be devoted to discussion and adoption of industry's platform.

ICC Haul Rule Relaxed to Add Rail Business

Clause Is Eased on Traffic From Atlantic Ports to Central Territory.

For the second time in five days, the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday relaxed inflexible provisions of the "long-and-short-haul" clause of the interstate commerce act to permit lowering of rates, in an important attempt by the railroads to regain and hold traffic.

Reduction in shipping rates over circuitous rail and rail-water routes, between North and Mid-Atlantic ports, and central territory, was authorized by the commission.

"The continued participation in a reasonable share of the available traffic should not be discouraged if the routes are feasible and their use does not place a burden on traffic generally," a majority of the body held.

The first step in modifying the rigid long-and-short-haul clause, which, in effect, forbids lower rates on a long haul than for shorter hauls on the run, was taken last week when the commission permitted establishment four days a week of lowered rail rates on citrus fruit moving from Florida to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston.

Held "Constructive."

In railroad circles generally this development was regarded as a constructive step in the direction of regaining lost rail traffic and putting the industry back on its feet. It was viewed as an important aid to the railroads in meeting the competition of trucks and water carriers.

Although how far the roads might go in this direction was a matter of speculation, similar rulings of a transcontinental import, affecting such commodities as lumber moving from the West, were said not to be improbable.

A statement made by Federal Co-ordinator of Transportation Joseph B. Eastman in a recent speech was almost prophetic as regards the I. C. C. action.

Along with improvements in facilities, service and methods of operation, Eastman said he expected to see "a radical change in rates and charges."

Calls Structure Complex.

"The freight rate structure of the railroads in particular is the complicated product of conditions of former days," he said. "Many of those conditions no longer exist or have been greatly modified.

"They have been superseded by new conditions created or influenced by the new means of transportation. Already this freight rate structure shows signs of much disturbance and unsettlement. It is bound to suffer revision, and order will gradually be established on a new and, I hope, much simpler basis. The revision will have an important and, perhaps, profound effect on industrial conditions, but I am not yet clear what that effect will be."

The revision made possible by the citrus fruit decision would bring the all-rail rates to New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore down to the same level as rates over truck-water routes.

"Sailing Days" Approved.

Under the so-called "sailing day" plan advanced by the railroads in the citrus fruit case, and approved by the commission, the lowered rates will be in effect only on Monday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week. Higher rates will be in effect on other days.

The commission's decision referred to the "sailing day" plan as an effort on the part of the railroads "to carry out our suggestions with respect to adopting methods to increase their traffic and to effect economies in operation, and we would not be justified in interfering with their discretion in the matter unless we are convinced that the results of their action in some particular will violate the provisions of the law. The possibility of such a violation under the applicants' proposal is not apparent."

As a result of the citrus ruling, rates to the North Atlantic ports will be lower than to intermediate points. For example, on the traffic from Lakeland, Fla., the rate will be 1 cent higher at Riverdale, Md., than at Boston, although the Boston haul is 561 miles greater. The rate from Fort Pierce, Fla., to New York, will be 50 cents a 100 pounds, while the rate from Fort Pierce to Charlotte, N. C., will be 60 cents a 100.

The Interstate Commerce Commission ruling pointed out that the railroads had attempted in many ways to meet the new truck-water competition, but that, as these efforts had left rail rates higher than those of their competitors, hey had met with little success. They viewed the new move as an important attempt to regain at least part of the traffic.

Dissenting from the majority report were Commissioners Claude R. Porter, W. E. Lee and W. M. W. Splawn, while Commissioner C. L. Caskie concurred only in part, taking the view that the "sailing day" plan "has no precedent in railroad freight service."

Yesterday's modification of the long and short haul clause will effect a lowering of rates over circuitous rail and rail-water routes between central territory, including Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and Michigan—and New York and New England ports, and between central territory and mid-Atlantic and North Atlantic ports.

Forcing shippers who use the longer rail-water route to pay the higher rates charged from intermediate points for all-rail shipments, would not relieve intermediate points from lower rate competition, the commission pointed out.

No Prejudice Found.

"Since the differentials do no more than place the ocean-rail routes in position to obtain a fair share of the traffic moving from the more distant points, it seems clear that shippers using the superior all-rail service from the intermediate points are not unduly prejudiced by the lower ocean-rail rates from the more distant points," the report read.

The commission argued that while the intermediate shippers are at a rate disadvantage, they are afforded a superior service.

Neither the citrus fruit ruling, nor yesterday's lond and short haul modification, approved any specific rates.

Dissenting from yesterday's ruling Commissioner Frank McManamy held that under the new rates "unduly circuitous routes will be enabled to participate in the traffic with resultant wasteful competition," Commissioner William E. Lee dissented in part.

Prophet Confirmed; Forecast Own Death

Kankakee, Ill., Dec. 3 (AP).—Henry ("Spot") Chamberlain, 79, who believed so strongly in his own predictions that he recently purchased a casket, was killed today when a descending elevator struck him on the head.

Chamberlain amused his friends with prophecies on every question—frequently forecasting weather, national events and sports results.

Several years ago he told them he would be dead before 1936, and recently bought the casket when his heart began to cause trouble.

Today, waiting impatiently in a hotel for the elevator, he put his head through a broken pane in the door. The descending car struck him.

Snow Due to Fall On Capital Today

Snow will swirl in the streets of the Capital today. But there will be no need to get out sleds and overshoes because the Weather Bureau last night didn't believe it would amount to much.

The forecast was for occasional flurries, with the flakes in all probability melting as soon as they strike the ground. Much colder weather was forecast for this afternoon and tonight.

Snow fell yesterday in many sections of the Middle West, the Associated Press reported. A light fall in the Chicago area made streets and highways perilous.

Flurries were reported in Illinois, Minnesota, North and South Dakota and eastern Wisconsin.

Yesterday the mercury ranged between 30 and 35, the lowest was reached at 6 a. m., the high at 3:30 p. m.

Special Group To Investigate Long Machine

House Committee Plans to Go to Louisiana for Election Inquiry.

By Robert C. Albright.

The one and only Huey P. Long is dead, but the remnants of his Louisiana political machine will be placed under close scrutiny by a special House campaign investigating committee, it was learned last night.

Representative William J. Granfield, of Massachusetts, chairman of a group given unusual powers by the House last session to investigate campaign expenditures, will leave for Louisiana this week to undertake a "preliminary survey" of political conditions.

At least one other member of the committee, Representative James Marx Wilcox, of Florida, will accompany him. If conditions are what they are represented to be in a number of petitions filed with the committee, a more sweeping inquiry into Louisiana election machinery may be ordered.

"I am going to Louisiana with an open mind, because I have been asked to go," Representative Granfield said yesterday. "I am not going there as the instrument of any group—either those in power or those who now happen not to be. We will make a study preliminary to Louisiana's January primaries, and may or may not report our findings to Congress. We are interested in only one thing—assuring an honest election.

Granfield did not appear enthusiastic over the venture. He pointed out that no primaries have yet been held, and the committee necessarily will be circumscribed in any inquiry that it makes. But he has little doubt as to his authority under the broad House resolution to make the preliminary study.

Long Foe Prompts Inquiry.

One report is that Representative John N. Sandlin, of Louisiana, anti-Long head of the State's House delegation, and an ardent Administration supporter, had a hand in broadening the House resolution so it would permit the Louisiana inquiry.

The resolution was framed while Long was still very much alive, and making daily attacks on President Roosevelt and his New Deal. Sandlin, who virtually dictated the Administration's Louisiana patronage during the pinnacle of Long's own reign, has announced he will run next year for the six-year Senate term, to succeed Long. One of Huey's former lieutenants, Speaker Ellender of the Louisiana House, will run against him.

The late Kingfish's machine is still supreme in Louisiana politics and is following out instructions of their former chief to place candidates in the field against each of the anti-Long members of the present House delegation. That delegation is now predominantly anti-Long, with only two of its New Orleans members in any way aligned with Long sentiment.

"Fair" Primaries Sought.

Although the Administration officially has no concern in the special House committee's inquiry, it was said in one quarter that it naturally is interested in "fair" election primaries in January.

Appeals for an investigation of political conditions in Louisiana preliminary to the January primaries have been received by the committee from a number of Louisiana individuals and organizations, including the League for Honest Elections and the Young Men's Democratic Club.

The theme of most of the petitions is that "a republican form of government no longer exists in Louisiana."

Although a rift developed in the Long machine soon after their leader's violent death in September, the group now apparently is working harmoniously together.

Britain Pays Tribute To Princess Victoria

London, Dec. 3 (AP).—The court went into mourning and Parliament paid quiet tribute today to 67-year-old Princess Victoria, sister of King George, who died early this morning at her country home.

The funeral will be held Saturday at Windsor Castle, The lord chamberlain announced the court will observe full mourning for three weeks and semi-mourning for three weeks thereafter. All members of the royal family conceled social engagements. The King and Queen deferred their departure to Sandringham, remaining at Buckingham Palace; and the King did not open Parliament.

correspondence on the communism issue bulged with Becker messages yesterday, not one had been received, up to last night, in defense of Harold Rugg, author of the other two textbooks originally attacked by the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Failures at Wilson.

School officials were going ahead with plans for today's board meeting at 3:30 p. m. in the Franklin Building in the belief that no one would solicit a hearing on the issue.

The most controversial topic scheduled to come up today is the question of appointment of a professor of history and social studies for Wilson Teachers College. Dr. W. W. Habberton, appointed at the November 20 meeting, decided to remain at the University of Illinois instead, and the personnel committee will thresh out again the issue of whether a District man should get this District job.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, school superintendent, is also anxious to clear up today the matter of the eleven Wilson Teachers College graduates who failed the June teachers' examinations that 14 of them took. He filed a report on November 6 absolving the college of any blame for the graduates' poor showing, and the board has still to act on the report.

Other matters to come up are routine—plans for transportation of physically handicapped children, use of trackage of Chesapeake Beach Railway by school children, establishment of an additional dental clinic.

The telegrams yesterday were addressed to Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board, and half of the historians and editors who sent them misspelled her middle name.

Noting the charge of communism levied against Becker, some of the telegrams were:

Charles A. Beard, of New Milford, Conn.—"Only a blind partisan can see communism in his writings. If the schools are to teach truth, they must fairly present both sides of every important question that appears in the course of any historical period covered by instruction."

"Makes Martyr of Becker."

Dixon Ryan Fox, president of Union College, Schenectady, N. Y.—"In making a martyr of Becker, the committee would make itself ridiculous before the country, like Mayor Thompson of Chicago."

Edward P. Cheyney, professor, University of Pennsylvania, and past president of the American Historical Association, joined by Prof. Lingelbach—"No responsible author of a book on modern Europe can omit a description of Soviet Russia. This would leave pupils not only ignorant but more open to Communist propaganda outside of school."

W. T. Root, head of history department, University of Iowa—"For a complete refutation of communism in both theory and practice, read Becker's 'Every Man His Own Historian' (Crofts, 1935), pages 125 to 131."

Guy Stanton Ford, dean of graduate School, University of Minnesota—"In war-time, choose him to write the account of American ideals and history for translation and circularization abroad to head off radicalism and explain our democracy."

Charles Seymour, provost, Yale University: "He is the outstanding American figure in the study of political thought."

Authors of Telegrams.

Other messages came from Edgar S. Furniss, dean of Yale's graduate school; Arthur M. Schlesinger, of Harvard; Dean George C. Sellery, of the University of Wisconsin; F. H. Hodder, head of history department, University of Kansas; Sidney Packard, Merile Curtis, Walter Baines, Leona Gabel, Vera Brown and Harold Faulkner, all of Smith College; Wallace Notestein, of Yale; Kent Roberts Greenfield, head of history department, Johns Hopkins; Max Farrand, of New York; William Anderson, University of Minnesota.

Also from L. B. Shippee, head of history department, University of Minnesota; G. G. Andrews, University of Iowa; Charles E. Clark, dean of law school, Yale; Livingston Farrand, president of Cornell University; Sidney B. Fay, of Harvard.

Also from Henry S. Canby, editor, the Saturday Review; Henry C. Bourne, editor, American Historical Review; F. C. Crofts, of New York, publisher; Eugene Davidson, editor, Yale University Press; William L. Westermann, of Columbia University; W. Stull Holt, of Johns Hopkins, and Walton H. Hamilton, NRA consumers division chief.

Would Oust Board.

Resignation of the entire Board of Education and of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, was demanded last night by the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, which met in the Fourth Presbyterian Church.

The association charged that "it has been plainly demonstrated" that Dr. Ballou had recommended textbooks advocating communism and that the board had approved those books.

It voted to send a resolution urging appointment of a new board and a new superintendent to the President, the chairman of the House and Senate District committees, and to the members of the District Supreme Court.

The association also voted to ask the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to close a liquor store which, it was said, is located within two blocks of Hubbard School.

Army Opens Air Maneuvers, With K. P. and All, as in War

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

After waiting for the "enemy," most of the 60 pursuit planes taxi out for a take-off at Miami, Fla. (above) as Army air maneuvers opened yesterday. Teachers Told To First Make ChildrenHappy

Education of Emotions Is Essential, Declares N. Y. Psychiatrist.

More than 500 District teachers, members of the District Education Association, seeking ideas, got this message at Roosevelt High School last night from a psychiatrist of the New York State Department of Education, Dr. Frederick L. Patry:

"The major task of education is to discover the techniques of happiness. First make the child happy, and then educate him. We have been stressing the teaching of the intellect, but education of emotions is also essential, and, as it has been said, the intellect is a mere speck on the sea of emotions."

Prim, sedate men and women, they sat there, and Dr. Patry counseled them:

"Every teacher should be a doctor of happiness."

And to create that happiness for the child, he said, the child should be supplied with good health, a feeling of prestige, social security, success in achievement, a challenge to call forth his abilities, and adequate facilities for specific interests, creative expressions and group expressions.

Out of the meeting grew a suggestion by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, presiding, that teachers' training schools should stress more an understanding of psychology, although Dr. Ballou noted his own belief that happiness was more of a "by-product" of education than a "direct objective."

Questions flocked from a panel composed of Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital; Robert A. Maurer, member of the Board of Education; Norman J. Nelson, principal of Woodrow Wilson High School; Dr. Paul J. Ewerhardt, director of the child-guidance clinic; Miss Mildred Dean, school supervisor of classical languages; Mrs. A. I. Kinnear, principal of Eliot Junior High School; Mrs. Lucian Jordan, chairman of the District Parent-Teacher Association's educational committee, and Dr. Winifred Richmond, psychiatrist at St. Elizabeths.

Failure of Nazi Repression Forecast by Lutherans Here

Lutheran clergymen in Washington believe they foresee with certainty at least two results of attempts by the Nazi government to remove from power leaders of German Protestant church groups.

The first is failure of the attempts, already foreshadowed in yesterday's defiance of Nazi restrictions on authority by leaders of the Confessional Synod.

The second is great rejoicing at the Nazi failure by clergymen throughout the world.

Every Lutheran pastor reached by The Post last night for comment on the latest fight by German churchmen for preservation of their traditional independence held virtually this view.

The existing setup of the German Protestant Church which the Hitler government is seeking to depose was outlined by the Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel, pastor of Christ Lutheran Church.

Outlines Structure.

The German church is a state church, dominated by provincial leaders as opposed to a centralized national regime Hitler is attempting to impose, he pointed out. The leaders of the Confessional Synod have certain powers some of which are unknown to church leaders in America. These include church taxation, collection of funds, convocation of synods and examination of all evangelical theological candidates.

In general, the aim of the Nazi government, Dr. Wenchell said, is to wipe out existing church rule and traditional church doctrine and to replace them with Nazi rule and Nazi doctrine.

Imposition of Nazi doctrine, Dr. Wenchell explained, would mean the embodiment in the German Protestant creed of certain ancient pagan beliefs, the denial of the divinity of Christ and of the authenticity of the Bible, particularly the Old Testament and those portions of the New Testament deemed expostulory of Jewish faith.

Dr. Wenchell found both German church leaders and the laity showing "surprising stamina" in their resistance to Nazi encroachment, a resistance that he believes to be so strong that he said:

"Hitler is taking on something which will prove his downfall eventually.

Opposition Grows.

"Opposition from the conservative church elements is growing," Dr. Wenchell went on. "I found it when I visited Germany last summer not only among the members of the clergy but among the people. Originally, I believe, the opposition came from some 4,000 church leaders. I understand their number has increased to 7,000.

"The paganism movement is on the downgrade. It is losing momentum."

Dr. Wenchell's entire sympathies, like those of the Rev. Carl C. Rasmussen, pastor of the Luther Place Memorial Church, and of every other cleric interviewed, are with the German churchmen.

The role of the prophet is dangerous," Dr. Rasmussen said. "We see what has happened in Russia, where the church has been pretty thoroughly suppressed. However, I have the feeling that Hitler has undertaken something far more difficult, for he has Catholic as well as Protestant groups to oppose."

Dr. Rasmussen recalled Bismarck's attempts at Catholic suppression. He recalled his failure. He found Bismarck a stronger man than Hitler. His reasoning led him to believe Hitler's failure assured.

Blackwelder Agrees.

The Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Reformation Lutheran Church, agreed. He said:

"Hitler already is soft-pedaling this thing. He will retire from the religious field. He will find that there is one group he won't be able to regiment."

The Rev. Gerhard E. Lenski, pastor of the Grace Lutheran Church, saw the ghost of Martin Luther in the fight.

"Many of those who are opposing Hitler have behind them the power of those traditions Luther himself set up. Hitler hasn't much of a chance of frightening those fellows away. But this last move of Hitler is more determined than any he has made before. His aim is to remove moral independence. If this last effort goes through, the church will no longer be a church, but an arm of the Nazi government."

The Rev. Henry W. Snyder, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, found not only Luther, but the German people, at the side of their embattled clergy. To the clergy, he said, the people are more loyal than to Hitler.

"They are pretty loyal to Hitler, but he is going beyond what the people will stand for. He may be able to do this for a while, particularly under the present military setup, but eventually he will find that he has bitten off more than he can chew. He has the whole organized church against him."

German Synod Defies Nazis, Ordaining Five

Protestant Confessional Group Ignores Order, Inducts Ministers.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Dec. 3.—Leaders of the German Protestant Confessional Synod, following their announced defiance of Nazi dictation, ordained five ministers today.

The government took no action to disturb the ceremony in suburban St. Anne's Church, in spite of the announcement by Hans Kerrl, head of the Department of Church Affairs, that the synod could not induct ministers.

The ordination followed a declaration by a spokesman for the synod that its members would not abide by Kerrl's ruling, which took from them all administrative and authoritative rights.

Hardships in Store.

Several hundred members of the synod heard the Rev. Otto Dibelius tell the ministerial candidates:

"We do not know what hardships the near future may have in store for us, but we shall cling to our God."

Reminding them of the seriousness of their personal positions and that of the church, Dibelius admonished the young clergymen to "do everything of an administrative, spiritual and authoritative nature if God demands it."

He took as his text Elijah's flight into the desert, saying "We believe there will always be those biblical 7,000 who do not bend their knees before false gods."

Risked Possible Arrest.

Dibelius and the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, leader of the synod, both of whom administered the oath, risked possible arrest and dissolution of the group. There was no intervention at the ceremony, however, and Niemoeller later instructed the members of his theology class as usual.

Although Nazis said Kerrl's order depriving the synod of its major functions was in the interest of evangelical church unity, a spokesman for the synod declared Kerrl had been told November 27 by Bishop Karl Koch that the synod could not co-operate with Kerrl if this action were taken.

The Nazi church director asserted that "one organ alone can govern the church and give it spiritual leadership," and stated the Confessional Synod and other opposition organizations, while continuing in existence, would be without power.

Kerrl stated his church committees would be given two years to unify completely the Protestant Church.

Warsaw Colleges Re-open.

Warsaw, Dec. 3 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—Warsaw colleges were reopened today after having been closed two weeks as a result of anti-Semitic rioting.

Nazi Minister Fixes 'Mongrel' Degrees

Berlin, Dec. 3 (U.P.).—Minister of Interior Wilhelm Frick decreed today that persons with two Jewish grandparents hereafter officially shall be defined as "mischling (mongrel), first degree."

Those with one Jewish grandparent are "mischling second degree." Persons of German or kindred blood will be known as "uniformly German-blooded."

Frick recently explained that the Nazi aim was "not to bleed the Jews white, but merely to separate them." There will be no complaints after the separation is accomplished, he believed.

Other Nazi officials likened the new designations to the terms "mulatto" and "octoroon" employed in the United States for persons of mixed white and Negro blood.

Luella Miner, Educator, Dies in China; Was 74

Tsinan, Shantung Province, China, Dec. 3 (AP).—Luella Miner, American educator who devoted all her life to China, died of pneumonia today at the age of 74. She founded China's first college for women, the Women's College of the Peiping University, in 1905. Until recently she was dean of women and professor of religious education in Shantung Christian University.

Prof. Miner was born October 30, 1861, in Oberlin, Ohio, and, as an alumna of Oberlin College, received an honorary degree of doctor of literature from that institution in 1914.

Anglo-America Trade Treaty Move Launched

Commercial Pact With Britain Is Believed Possible Soon.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 3. — The United States has undertaken preliminary work for a reciprocal trade agreement with her greatest foreign customer—Great Britain, an authoritative source disclosed tonight.

This move follows the conclusion of a trade agreement between Washington and the Dominion of Canada.

The two governments have had no exchange of views, understandings or conversations regarding the treaty, but it was learned that independent surveys are under way in London and Washington to determine the practicability and benefits of a reciprocal agreement.

British board of trade experts are preparing a basis in London for possible discussions. Corresponding experts in the Department of State, Commerce and Agriculture in Washington, it was stated, have had the work under survey since late summer.

Announcement Expected.

An early official announcement of an effort to work out a trade arrangement is expected by informed quarters from Washington, after which the negotiators would get down to work in earnest.

Negotiations at the beginning may be conducted on both sides of the Atlantic, but officials believe they probably will be concluded in Washington.

While the Canadian negotiations took 2½ years to complete, it is believed the Anglo-American work may be speeded up to a possible conclusion next summer.

Obstacles Seen.

Officials here recognize the great obstacles confronting the two countries because of the many interlocking British trade agreements with other nations, but it was agreed the time is ripe for an Anglo-American treaty, if one ever is to be effected.

The Ottawa empire agreements, which dealt a staggering blow to American sales to Great Britain, will expire in 1937. Some of Britain's more important trade agreements, like those with Denmark and Argentina, likewise expire soon. The British are already seeking revision of their Russian trade arrangement, as well.

An American agreement therefore might be dovetailed into the British economic situation now, whereas a year or more hence it probably would be impossible because of continuances of the more important trade alliances.

Exports Listed.

American exports to Great Britain, which have fallen off to scarcely 15 per cent of their great post-war totals, begin with raw cotton and tobacco and include a wide variety of raw materials, machinery, semifinished products and some metals. British exports to the United States are essentially finished manufactured goods.

Trade in 1934 reveals how clearly the depression has struck the Anglo-American exchange of goods. In that year the United States shipped about $400,000,000 worth of products to England, and took about $85,000,000 in British goods.

This is comparable with United States sales of $848,000,000 and purchases of $330,000,00 in 1929 and $1,825,000,000 sales and $514,000,000 purchases in 1920.

No Pact in Sight.

State Department officials said here last night that no reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and Great Britain is now in sight, nor have any official overtures been made to that end by either government.

It was stated that departmental experts have been gathering statistics on commodities coming into the United States from all nations, with a view to possible future use under reciprocal trade powers voted by Congress, but that this did not necessarily imply any conversations with Great Britain. Officials said they had no means of knowing what Great Britain was doing in that direction.

as to whether there was "anything new" in negotiations with Premier Mussolini of Italy, said:

"If there were something I think I would certainly have heard about it."

"Seem Like Premium."

One diplomat explained the current difficulties this way:

"For Great Britain and France to propose a settlement giving Mussolini more than was offered him at the Paris conference in August would be to give the appearance of putting a premium on aggression.

"And for Mussolini to signify his willingness to take less than he turned down before he started fighting would be to discredit his regime."

In other sources, a re-born Anglo-French peace plan to give Il Duce a slice of Ethiopia was reported—but with indications it is far from satisfactory to the Italian dictator.

Pact to Provide Italy's Fuel Laid To Standard Oil

Deal With Unit of U.S. Firm Would Upset League Ban; Teagle Denies Plan.

important repercussions in Washington and Geneva.

It should affect seriously the league's attempt to achieve collective oil sanctions December 12. Russia and Roumania have indicated they will not participate unless assured of at least tacit participation by the United States.

Teagle Denies Pact.

New York, Dec. 3 (U.P.).—Walter C. Teagle, president of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, tonight categorically denied that the Italian subsidiary of his company had entered into an agreement with the Italian government to supply Italy oil in event League sanctions on oil were enforced.

In a formal statement to the United Press, Teagle termed such agreement as impossible of fulfillment and said it sounded like a piece of preposterous propaganda.

Teagle's statement follows:

"The only information regarding the reported agreement between the Italian government and the Societa Italo Americana Del Petrolio for guaranteeing Italy her supplies of oil in return for a term monopoly is that telephoned us by the newspapers.

"I can unequivocally deny that any such arrangement has been considered. So far as I know it has not even been proposed to our Italian company. Officers of that company know that such a contract would not only be impossible of fulfillment, but also would under no circumstances be accepted by us.

"It sounds like a preposterous piece of propaganda."

Officials Here Silent.

News of an agreement by which a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey planned to supply oil to the Italian government despite possible League of Nations sanctions, created consternation in official circles last night.

State Department officials received the report with obvious interest, eager for details of the plan by which petroleum from American-controlled wells abroad would be shipped to Italian Africa to lubricate Premier Mussolini's war machine. They declined all comment, however.

They merely reiterated that the Government is pursuing a policy completely independent of the League of Nations, intended to keep this Nation free from foreign entanglements.

Likewise officials refused comment on another new complication in the delicate neutrality situation—an injunction suit filed in New York by an assistant of Generoso Pope, Italian-American publisher seeking to prevent the Government from imposing any embargo on oil, cotton, copper and scrap iron destined for Italy.

"Big Bluff" Suspected.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Geneva, Dec. 3.—International circles tonight considered the reported oil agreement between Italy and the Soccieta Italo-Americana del Petrolio, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, a "colossal bluff."

They argued that, if such an agreement existed, Italy and the Standard Oil Co. would not allow all the details to become known even before application of a possible League of Nations embargo.

The League could quickly check and flow of oil from Rumania to Italy via Austria and Hungary, it was said.

Rumania has been one of the most fervent advocates of sanctions and backed the proposal to ration exports from League countries to non-sanctionist nations in order to prevent re-exporting to Italy.

Therefore, League leaders feel certain that Rumania would agree to restrict her exports of oil to Austria and Hungary to normal requirements if the suspicion arose that Austria or Hungary would re-export to Italy.

It also was doubted here that the company would establish a credit of 1,000,000,000 lire (approximately $81,000,000) for Italy when Italian credit is dead throughout the world.

Italian Fighters Get Increase in Wages

Rome, Dec. 3 (AP). — Italy's troops in Africa got a slight raise in pay today through an official decree.

Those in Eritrea will get five lire or about 40 cents a day, and soldiers in the more dangerous Somaliland will be paid six lire.

Conscripts in this country get eight soldi, or about 3¼ cents a day. Those who went to fight Emperor Haile Selassie started at four lire a day.

Selassie May Ask Mediation in War

Intervention By Coptic Patriarch Is Expected.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 3.—An authoritative religious source today disclosed that the supreme head of the Coptic Christian Church, at the request of Emperor Haile Selassie, probably will begin conversations with the Italian minister here in mid-December in an attempt to end the Italo-Ethiopian war.

The Emperor, it was said, sought the intervention of Patriarch Johannes, whose authority extends over Ethiopia, proposing that "the most favorable moment to begin conversations will be between December 10 and December 15."

The request was understood to have been made through Abuna Cyril, high bishop of Ethiopia, last Wednesday, the day before the king of kings set out for his new headquarters at Dessye, 175 miles northeast of Addis Ababa.

Cadiz, Spain (Wednesday), Dec. 4 (AP).—British air squadrons simulated a raid on Gibraltar early today, with all ground lights out and motor cars halted for an hour on the streets. The planes sought to evade searchlights from warships anchored in the harbor, while thousands of citizens watched silently from the shore.

Laval Accused Of Aiding Plot For Civil War

Chamber Session in Uproar as Leftists Attack the Fascist Groups.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 3.—Charges that Premier Pierre Laval was guilty of "complicity" with so-called Fascist leagues, which "are preparing for a civil war," were hurled by Leftists today during a disorderly session of the Chamber of Deputies.

The tumult of insults shouted by both sides became so violent at times that the session had to be suspended to calm the unruly deputies.

Radical Socialists, who hold a balance of power, joined in attacking the government and one deputy, Marc Rucart, shouted at Laval, "we do not have confidence in you, Mr. President of the council."

Major Test Due.

But the possibility that Laval would ride out the storm when a vote is reached, probably Thursday, was indicated by the failure of radical Socialists to agree on a motion criticizing him. The Premier already has won two votes of confidence from the new Parliament session, but the "Fascist" issue now under consideration is regarded as his greatest test.

Laval, defending himself, expressed "reprobation" of the acts of which Fascists were accused by Leftists. But he was warned by the latter that if the government failed to take a strong stand, the Leftists would vote it out of power.

Charges Gun Practice.

Henri Guernut, a radical Socialist, accused the "Francists," one of the nationalist leagues, of "importing" an Italian Fascist leader to participate with them in target practice in preparation for the "civil war."

A Communist, Arthur Ramette, accused Laval of being an accomplice of the Nationalists, such as the Croix de Feu, growing World War veterans' organization.

Leon Berand, minister of justice, defended the government by asserting existing laws failed to give authorities sufficient power to curb activities of po'itical leagues.

French Ship Maneuvers To Be Near Italian Isle

Toulon, France, Dec. 3 (AP).—France's Mediterranean fleet, composed of more than 50 warships, sailed today for maneuvers off the coast of Corsica, which is but 20 miles from Sardinia, island owned by Italy.

Maneuvers will last for at least ten days, authorities announced. The fleet is commanded by Vice Admiral Georges Mouget, aboard the cruiser Algerie. Authorities said five destroyers will be sent to Marseille after the maneuvers close instead of returning to Toulon.

Gaps in Defense Menace Britain, Throne Warns

Sanctions of League Force Arms Increases, King Tells Parliament.

By the United Press.

London, Dec. 3.—King George, in an address to Parliament read by the lord high chancellor, today urged that "deficiencies in the imperial defense" be remedied.

The situation raised by League of Nations sanctions against Italy in an attempt to halt its Ethiopian war necessitates these measures, the king said.

The king committed Great Britain to:

Firm support of the League and fulfillment in co-operation with other countries of the League Covenant with its article 16, penalizing a nation declared guilty of aggression.

Exertion of its influence in favor of Italo-Ethiopian peace acceptable to Italy, Ethiopia and the League.

"Urgently necessary" strengthening of the imperial defense forces in order to fulfill its international obligations under the Covenant and to safeguard the empire.

Clement R. Attlee, new leader of the Parliamentary Labor Party, criticized King George's address as "inadequate" in the face of the present international situation.

Replying to Attlee's criticism, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin promised the "fullest possible discussion of the most difficult foreign situation facing the country." He intimated that the discussion probably would begin Wednesday or Thursday, depending on Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare's recovery from his presient illness.

The King's address, which opened this session of Parliament, emphasized the importance of maintaining peace and protection. He reiterated that League obligations compelled the adoption of sanctions against Italy.

His speech opened with the customary:

"My relations with foreign powers continue to be friendly."

"My government's foreign policy will, as heretofore, be based on firm support of the League of Nations. They will remain prepared to fulfill in co-operation with other members of the League the obligations of the Covenant. In particular, they are determined to use at all times the full weight of their influences for preservation of peace.

"In pursuance of these obligations my government have felt compelled to adopt, in co-operation with some 50 other states, members of the League, certain measures of an economic and financial nature in regard to Italy. At the same time they will continue to exert their influence of peace acceptable to the three parties of the dispute—namely, Italy, Ethiopia and the League of Nations."

Turning to defense measures, he said:

Proposals to Be Made.

"Fulfillment of our international obligations under the covenant, no less than the adequate safeguarding of our empire, makes it urgently necessary that the deficiencies of my defense forces should be made good.

"My ministers will in due course lay before you their proposals, which will be limited to the minimum required for these two purposes."

The King then outlined the government's aims for the relief of unemployment and reorganization of the coal-mining industry, including "unification of coal royalties under national control." He sketched the government's plans for unemployment insurance, for farm hands and development of railways, airlines and educational and social services.

" . . . And I pray that the blessing of Almighty God may rest with your deliberations," he concluded.

The customary formal state opening of Parliament by the King was abandoned because of the death early today of Princess Victoria, the eldest of George's two sisters.

Ethiopian Army Marching Upon Foe at Makale

80,000 Regulars Advancing For Long-Awaited Decisive Battle.

By the United Press.

Asmara, Dec. 3.—Masses of armed Ethiopians tonight were reported marching upon Makale, advance post of the Italian northern front.

Italian outposts already have signaled approach of the Ethiopian advance guard.

Most of the Ethiopians were of the army of Ras Kassa, who has been massing forces south of Makale for weeks. He is believed to command more than 80,000 men.

Made Up of Regulars.

Behind Kassa's column is the army of the Ethiopian minister of war, Ras Mulu Gheta, which marched to the northern front from Addis Ababa.

The Ethiopian forces are reported marching straight for Makale from the direction of Lake Ashanghi, 60 miles to the south. They are regulars—not the ragged guerrilla warriors who have been staging night raids behind the Italian lines recently.

Large quantities of food, supplies and munitions accompany the Ethiopians in a caravan stretching out for miles through the mountains, according to Italian scouts and informers.

Selassie in Limelight.

The presence of Emperor Haile Selassie at Dessye, general headquarters for Ethiopia's northern forces, is connected with the advance, which has been anticipated by the Italians.

A powerful position between Makale and Dolo, a village several miles to the east, has been fortified.

Italian officers said news of the advance finds Italian soldiers in the finest spirits, ready to combat the Ethiopians, who heretofore have refused to meet the Italians in a decisive battle.

Many expect this advance to result in a major engagement.

Advance Long Expected.

The advance comes only a few days after a shift in Italian command placed Marshal Pietro Badoglio, famed World War strategist, at the leadership of Italy's forces.

The Italians have expected the Ethiopian advance from Lake Ashangi for a week as a result of concentration there of Ras Kassa's troops, estimated between 80,000 and 100,000.

At the same time, Ras Siyoum's forces, totaling about 30,000, were reported heading in the direction of Amba Alagi, where they would join Ras Kassa's army as a vanguard.

Whether Ras Siyoum had been able to accomplish this union could not be ascertained tonight.

Competition Too Keen, Seven Winners Named

Chicago, Dec. 3 (AP).—Because competition this year was so close, medical judges today were unable to pick a national boy and girl health champion of the 4-H clubs, representing 1,100,000 farm boys and girls in America. Instead, they selected four boys and three girls and declared them blue-ribbon winners.

The boys are Frederick Abel, of Gadsden, Ala.; Howard Cobb, of Greene, N. Y.; Charles Jordan, jr., of Route 4, Beloit, Kans., and J. Alton Riffle, of Pleasant Hill, Mo. The girls, June Castine, of Ridgeway, S. C.; Eloise Garrett, of Urian, Ala., and Marion McLaughlin, of Trenary, Mich.

Ickes Disclaims 'Asking Oil Ban; Sees 'Mistake'

Secretary Says He Spoke of 'Munitions' in Nov. Talk on War Trading.

Geneva the statement was interpreted as indication that the United States Government intends to live up to its neutrality law regardless of what the League does on sanctions against Italy.

In London, uneasiness that Secretary Ickes' statement might be a possible forerunner of a change in the United States policy which would render the application of sanctions far more difficult, was noted in authoritative quarters.

International observers here were divided as to how much importance should be attached to Ickes' action. Concededly he is not a spokesman on America's neutrality policy.

Even should the Administration continue to allow "normal" exports of oil and its products to Italy, however, only a comparatively small quantity would go there monthly.

Commerce Department figures yesterday showed that as against shipments of oil and its products to Italy in 1926 valued at $16,656,119, exports in 1934 had declined to $5,621,908. If the 1935 monthly average is maintained, the department said, exports this year would be valued at about $6,388,152. This is but a small percentage of Italy's annual oil import.

On Capitol Hill here it was disclosed that the drafting of a more drastic neutrality bill measure already was under way. Reliable sources said the bill would be introduced as soon as Congress convenes.

Its general provisions, as now tentatively written, were said authoritatively to call for:

1. Continuing the present temporary mandatory ban on shipment of munitions to all belligerents.

2. Providing discretionary power for the President to embargo certain other articles.

3. Placing a mandatory bar against loans and credits to belligerents.

4. Providing a mandatory order against United States citizens becoming passengers on belligerents' vessels.

5. Barring from American ports vessels of any nation whose vessels are found to have used the American flag as a blind to approach within striking distance of enemy craft.

Whether this bill would receive Administration indorsement, or whether it could pass both Houses in anything like this form were only matters of conjecture.

One problem which is still reported under study is what, if anything, to do about the movement of war-useful articles to or through adjacent territory, such as Mexico and Canada. Indications were that, in view particularly of this country's large trade with the British Dominion, some rather unspecific provision probably would be worked out.

The proposed new act also would require that the purchaser take the risk on other trading. That is, it may be provided that vessels trading in the danger territory take out insurance from the countries to which they are plying. This would enable the United States, the committee hopes, to escape being involved in disputes over war damage.

Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, in the Capital for conferences with Stephen Raushenbush, chief committee investigator, had only this to say to newspapermen:

"We are trying in a practical way to put our fingers on the causes of war. What we want to do is keep out of war. We want to sew this thing up in a knot."

Senator Steiwer (Republican), of Oregon, predicted that "neutrality legislation will almost immediately engage attention.

"The most definite reaction I got at home is the fervent wish of the people to stay out of the Italian-Ethiopian war," he said.

Secretary Hull, in threatening legal action against arm makers and exporters not yet registered with the State Department, did not name any particular company.

In a formal statement he said a number of firms presumably have not registered and expressed the hope that this had been due to "inadvertence." He added:

"However, should they fail to do so within a reasonable time I shall find myself obliged to send the names of the companies which are presumed to have failed to comply with the law to the Attorney General for such action as he may deem appropriate."

Suit Would Enjoin Munitions Board

injunction were not issued, to present "the interest of any citizen" in restraining the Government from unconstitutional acts.

The complaint, however, sets forth that the "order extending the embargo has brought prospect of Italian reprisals which "threaten the loss of export trade with Italy by the United States to the extent of $60,000,000 monthly," and therefore "threatens to deprive the plaintiff and other citizens of the United States of their property and rights without due process of law."

Judge Mancuso said the argument would be heard December 10.

Giordano, himself former editor of the Italian newspaper, Evening Bulletin, has lived in this country for 30 years and has been an American citizen for the last 20, relatives said.

Pope, apprised of the suit, said "I absolutely don't approve of it. If I thought anything should be done I'd do it myself."

He is the leader of the Italian-American colony in New York.

Pope scoffed at some reports that Giordano was his assistant.

"I have no assistant publisher. Dr. Giordano hasn't any title of any kind."

Folding Bed Kills Man.

San Diego, Calif., Dec. 3 (AP).—Frank Mathews, 41, was strangled to death late yesterday by a folding bed he was repairing in a hotel apartment. Heavy springs apparently had clamped the footrail down on his neck, forcing his face into the bed linens.

Ickes Reveals Wide Shakeups In Oil Agencies

George W. Holland Will Head Petroleum Board; Disputes Bring Shifts.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes announced wholesale revisions in the personnel of his oil-enforcement agencies yesterday and at the same time aroused speculation over the future of the Petroleum Administrative Board.

Reminded that the PAB would go out of existence about April 1 when the national recovery act expires, the oil administrator said he had not decided what would be done to continue or replace it. He declined to comment on the possibility that new legislation might be brought forward to sustain it.

The agency was created under NRA to administer the petroleum code, which the Supreme Court invalidated in the Schechter Case. In recent months, however, it has supervised activities of the Federal Tender Board in east Texas and has been making surveys of the oil industry. The tender board was created to enforce the Connally "hot oil" law prohibiting interstate shipments of crude and its products produced in excess of a State law.

Ickes announced that Norman Meyers, executive secretary of the petroleum board, and its director since Charles Fahy resigned as chairman, also would resign shortly to become chief of the oil section of the Securities and Exchange Commission. He will be replaced by George W. Holland, for 20 years a civil service man and more recently an oil attorney with the Geological Survey. Ickes termed Holland a "darned good man."

James A. Frear will become chairman of the tender board and G. W. Van Fleet, former head of Ickes' petroleum agency, No. 1, in east Texas, will take Davis' place. Thomas J. Kelliher will continue as head of the petroleum agency.

Ickes had little to say about the changes, but they were understood to have been prompted by jurisdictional conflicts between the agency and the board.

"Kelliher will represent the division of investigation of the department and will be concerned purely with investigations," Ickes said. "The administrative functions of enforcement will be taken by the Federal tender board and the division will be concerned only with investigations, just as it affects all sections of the Department of the Interior."

Postman Must Know A 'C. O. D.' in Disguise

By the Associated Press.

The postman henceforth must know what "remboursement," "reembloso" or "nachnahme" mean.

The Postoffice Department warned its men today on "the importance of carefully examining, before delivery, all parcels from the foreign countries with which the service is in operation for C. O. D. or its equivalent in the French, Spanish or German tongue."

Defense Outlay Of Record Size Will Be Sought

Army Increase Planned; Appropriation for 1935 Was 400 Millions.

By the Associated Press.

A War Department fund that would boost the Nation's spending for military defense to another peace-time peak was projected yesterday as the House Appropriations Committee started work on the 1936 money bills.

Insisting that "preparation makes for peace," Chairman Parks (Democrat), of Arkansas, of a sub-committee handling the Army measure, asserted he would seek "some increased expenditures" for the War Department. This year's appropriation was $400,000,000. Among other items the fund would provide:

Additional fighting planes for the Army Air Corps.

Completion of Hawaiian fortifications.

More gun emplacements for the Pacific Coast.

Additional housing in Panama and Hawii.

A larger outlay for pay and subsistence to care for an expansion of the Army ordered by Congress last session.

The 1935 appropriation for the other National defense branch—the Navy—was in excess of $500,000,000 last year. The size of next year's naval budget has yet to be formally outlined.

Parks said he anticipated little trouble in winning approval for larger Army expenditures. He mentioned no specified figure.

Hoare States Britain to Back 9-Power Treaty

Chinese Envoy Emphasizes Obligations of Treaty Signatories.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 3.—Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, was understood to have reaffirmed Great Britain's loyalty to the nine-power treaty in a conference today with the Chinese ambassador, Quo Tai-Chi.

The Chinese diplomat was reported to have drawn Britain's attention to its obligations as a signatory of the treaty, which guarantees the territorial integrity of China, in connection with Japan's alleged violation of the treaty in North China.

Authoritative quarters said a conference of the nine signatories would be desirable for China, although it was emphasized the Chinese in similar statements in other capitals had not demanded such a conference.

Great Britain is studying the next possible step, these circles said, and is watching the situation closely.

By the Associated Press.

Both the British and Chinese ambassadors to Washington have exchanged views recently with Secretary Hull on developments in the autonomy movement in North China.

The extent to which the Nine-Power Treaty figured in their discussions, however, has not been revealed. There has been no indication thus far that the United States is contemplating calling Japan's attention to its obligations under that pact or of summoning a conference of its signatories.

Officials Optimistic.

Shanghai, Dec. 3 (AP).—Both Japanese and Chinese official diplomatic sources expressed optimism tonight on the possibility of a settlement of the North China crisis, based on the Nanking government's reported plan for virtual autonomy in that region.

(Fifteen Japanese civilians, hurt when they clashed with Chinese police in a riot at the village of Choliuchen, were detained at the Japanese consulate in Tientsin. Officials would not discuss a report the Japanese were trying to incite an autonomy demonstration.)

As Gen. Ho Ying-chin, Chinese national government war minister, reached Peiping to continue his talks with North China leaders, a Japanese Embassy spokesman here said the outlook was promising.

Loans' Extension Asked by Southern Railway Would Continue RFC Indebtedness.

By the Associated Press.

The Southern Railway Co. yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commision to approve extension until September 1, 1938, of $14,493,540 of Reconstruction Corporation loans.

The first of the loans matured last September 14, while the last to mature will fall due next March 1.

Consolidation of the obligations into one loan was asked along with the extension.

The road reported a downward trend in its funded debt since 1932 and a concurrent drop in interest charges. On next December 31, it reported, the funded debt will stand at $287,786,040, compared with $301,188,100 on December 31, 1932.

The company said it expects to show a net income in 1936 even if required to meet costs of the railroad retirement and social security acts.

Expressing the opinion that "both acts are unconstitutional," the application set out that pensions under the retirement act would cost the Southern $1,199,471 next year, while additional taxes under the social security law would amount to $415,962.

Earl Maxwell Sorry He Left Sister at Home

Slaying of Father Would Have Been Averted, He Laments.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

A Staff Correspondent.

Pound, Va., Dec. 3.—Edith Maxwell, the 21-year-old school teacher who has been in the county jail since July for killing her father with a slipper when he tried to beat her, would have left these mountains years ago if her older brother, Earl, had had his way.

"I never wanted her to teach here," said young Maxwell today. "I lived in this part of the country long enough to know what my sister would be up against if she stayed around Pound. As long as she lived at home she would have been held down by Dad as if she were 3 years old."

Earl Maxwell left the Lonesome Pine country about 16 years ago. After a good many small jobs he became a traveling salesman out of Chicago for a soap company. Now he works out of New York for a wholesale candy firm.

"When Edith was in high school I used to tell her I was going to send her to school in Chicago," said the brother. "I thought she'd better take a business course. But when the time came Mother couldn't bear to give her up. She wanted her to go to school close by and then work near here."

One Sister in Detroit.

Another daughter had already gone up North. Alma Maxwell, a few years older than Edith, works in Detroit. With Earl away, that left only Edith and the two younger girls, Anna and Mary Catherine, now 16 and 11.

"Mother always had a hard time of it," said the Maxwell son. "Dad used to abuse her when he was drunk and he was drunk a lot of the time. Last spring I was going to take her to Chicago. She was looking so thin and unhappy I just couldn't stand it. But after we'd made plans for her to go, Dad stopped drinking. He never exactly went on the wagon but he got so he only drank beer and not much of that."

But one hot Saturday afternoon last July the elder Maxwell slipped. He drank so much beer that, according to his wife and youngest daughter, he came home "roarin' drunk."

It was the night of that same day that Edith and her father had their trouble. When the girl stayed out after dark with a neighbor boy she committed a terrible sin, according to 55-year-old Trigg Maxwell's way of thinking. As soon as she entered the family's white frame shack, perched above the twisting Pound River, he tried to beat her. Edith picked up a high-heeled slipper, one of an old pair she had given her mother, and whacked him on the head until he let her go.

Died an Hour Later.

An hour later Trigg Maxwell died. But that was after he and his daughter had made up. She had interrupted her father's muttering, "Why can't a man whip his own child," to tell him she was going to leave and not come back. And Trigg Maxwell had said:

"Mind down, now Edith, you've got a good home here."

The girl's answer was:

"Yes, pappy, but you fuss me even when I go to a neighbor's house. You can whip me when you're sober and I'll take it. But when you're drunk you try to kill me."

Then, within the hour, Pappy Maxwell died.

"If I'd only got Edith away from here when I first wanted to," Earl Maxwell lamented. "But Mother was so broken-hearted over the thought of her leaving that she decided to stay in Pound. By the time she finished high school she had made up her mind to be a teacher. Mother was glad because then Edith could work near home."

There isn't much a girl can do in Pound or in Wise, the county seat, except teach. There are precious few jobs for stenographers, typists or file clerks. Some of the girls become waitresses in the little cafes scattered through this coal-mining section of the Cumberland Mountains.

"I didn't want my sister to be a waitress," said Earl Maxwell.

So Edith three years ago went to East Radford State Teachers College at East Radford, Va. She was there from 1932 to 1934. Last winter she taught her first—and probably her last—term at the Mullins school on Bold Camp Creek.

The one-room building, formerly a barn, is about 3 miles up the road from Pound on the way to Clintwood, seat of Dickinson County. Seven grades are taught there. About 40 pupils are enrolled.

Helped to Furnish Home.

The young teacher received $65 a month. She had borrowed money to go to college, some from the school and some from an aunt who is postmistress in a small Kentucky town. As Edith taught she paid off on this debt. One month she would send money to be applied on her note held by the college. The next month she would send a similar amount to her aunt.

Edith also bought some clothes for Mary Catherine and fixed up the Maxwell house. She got a couple of linoleum rugs, some curtains, and a bookcase. For herself she bought a studio couch and slept on it in the living-room.

At the time of her trouble with her father she had little money saved, certainly not enough to cover the cost of her first trial. Mrs. Maxwell mortgaged what property she owned so the lawyers would have some hope of getting enough money to pay the bare expenses they incurred in that trial.

Now that Edith has been sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary as a result of the jury's verdict of first degree murder, the defense lawyers are preparing their briefs to appeal for a new trial. They intend to carry it to higher courts until they get one, "to the United States Supreme Court if necessary."

Meanwhile, the Maxwell's are wondering where the money for a new trial is coming from. Earl Maxwell says bravely that he'll pay for it. But traveling salesmen, even good ones, don't pile up fortunes by the time they're 31.

Riot Squad Balks Boston Prison Break

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Three Boston police, armed with riot guns, who were part of the cordon thrown around the Massachusetts State Prison at Charlestown yesterday after a group made an unsuccessful dash for freedom.

tent to kill. They were captured at gunpoint without bloodshed.

Richards, the slain truck driver, leaves a wife and a child, who will be 4 years old on Christmas Day.

Break Comes Suddenly.

The break, one of the most daring in the history of the old prison, which lies within the shadows of historic Bunker Hill Monument, was executed with a sudden thrust at midmorning.

All five desperadoes were at work in a print shop against the rear wall of the prison overlooking the Boston & Maine freight yards.

Secretly armed with sharp instruments and bludgeons, the quintet suddently bolted for freedom.

Richards' truck was backed up to the shop.

While one of the convicts killed Richards with a blow at the base of the skull, another battered McDonald, a third stabbed Shaughnessy and still another overpowered O'Donnell.

Truck Smashes Gates.

The five then jumped into the truck, drove it around the prison yard through the famed Cherry Hill section, where the late Jesse Pomeroy was confined a half century, and smashed through two gates. The second impact stalled the motor and a second truck, in charge of Miller (Babe) Wilson and William Mahoney, both former amateur boxers, blocked the convicts' paths temporarily.

By this time, alarms were sounded and reinforced prison guards took up the pursuit.

Naples, leading the fleeing prisoners afoot toward the freight yards, stubbed his toe. At the same time a guard aimed and fired twice. One bullet pierced Naples' heart and the other his head as he fell dead, his arms stretched over his head, apparently in token of surrender.

The remaining four made for the freight sheds.

Hundreds Join Chase.

Screeching sirens attracted hundreds of policemen, firemen and railroad detectives to the bloody pursuit and warned householders in the congested tenement district against invasions by the fleeing desperadoes. Thousands of curious milled outside the prison walls and scenes of wildest disorder developed.

Within the walls there was the monotonous drone of 900 yammering convicts. Prison officials took precautions against further outbreaks.

Finally, after less than two hours, all the remaining fugitives had been rounded up, McManus gravely wounded when he attempted to attack an officer while emerging from beneath a shed where he had sought refuge.

Clayton, Okla., Dec. 3 (U.P.).—Close pursuit of five fleeing desperadoes who broke out of the Muskogee Jail today forced them to abandon their gleaming yellow automobile and enter a heavy wood on foot.

Back at Muskogee they had left a companion fatally wounded and Chief of Detectives Ben Bolton seriously wounded.

The fugitives are Dan T. Heady, Leonard Short, Russell Cooper and Dewey Gilmore, all members of the bank robbery and kidnaping gang organized by Leo (Irish) O'Malley, of St. Louis, and Sonny Jarrett, a cellmate at Muskogee.

All Convicted.

The O'Malley gangsters "crushed out" of the jail with the aid of weapons smuggled to them this morning, Oklahoma officers believed. All were under Federal convictions in connection with the "double" robbery of banks in Okemah, Okla.

They added to their armament from the jail arsenal and were known to have obtained several shotguns, a machine gun, pistols and a bullet-proof vest. Their delay to seize guns gave officers time to attempt to block the jail break.

However, Bolton was shot in the face with a shotgun. Chief of Police Marsh Corgan escaped injury when the gunmen fired twice through a door at him, but missed. Corgan returned the fire as the fugitives ran down an alley and dropped Henry Blackburn, a mail-robbery suspect. Blackburn died.

Minister Manhandled.

The fugitives surrounded an automobile in which N. R. Hickman, Muskogee minister, was driving, and dragged the clergyman from his seat. They fled southeastward in this brightly colored car. Broadcast warnings enabled posses in several towns to pick up the trail.

The trail led through Wilburton and Hartshorne and then south into the rugged Kiamichi Mountain territory. The scarcity of roads in that region led authorities to predict that the desperadoes had gotten themselves into a "dead end."

Heady, Short, Gilmore and Cooper were convicted last week of participating with four others in the robbery of two Okema banks simultaneously. O'Malley, who already is serving a life sentence for the kidnaping of August Luer, Alton, Ill., banker, allegedly led the raid.

Muskogee officers immediately detained Mrs. Heady for questioning. They suspected she may have smuggled a pistol to her husband this morning.

Three Kidnap Warden.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 3 (U.P.).—Machine-gun-armed officers tonight threw hastily organized police lines across west Tennessee highways to capture three convicts who kidnaped a deputy warden and escaped from the Tennessee State prison today.

Ed Connors, the deputy warden who was taken as a hostage, was released unharmed near the prison. The fugitives commandeered his automobile, however, and sped westward toward Memphis.

Warden A. W. Neeley said the convicts are George Moss, sentenced to five years for robbery from Lauderdale County; Gus McCoie, sentenced to 15 years for robbery in Claiborne County, and Pete Dean, sentenced to five years for larceny in Davidson County.

The break was accomplished late today as Connors drove into the prison gate. The convicts leaped upon his car, overpowered him and drove the car outside the walls. They showed no guns, prison officials said.

Maxwell Girl's Defense Fund Raised to $417

Letters of Encouragement Pour in for Virginia School Teacher.

Letters of encouragement for Edith Maxwell continued to pour into The Washington Post yesterday as the fund for the defense of the Wise County, Va., school teacher, under 25-year sentence for the slaying of her father, passed the $400 mark. Twenty-two persons contributed a total of $36 for the day.

A typical letter said:

"I admire the way you are defending Edith Maxwell. Am sure I would have done the same thing to defend myself against a drunken father. I am giving $1 and wish it were $100. Am enclosing a letter to Miss Maxwell. Do not know her address and trust you will see that she gets it."

Tax Plot Charge To Be Heard Today

John W. Hardgrove and Henning R. Nelson, former Treasury Department officials, and Frank B. McElhill, tax consultant, will go on trial in the District Supreme Court today to answer a charge they conspired to disclose income tax information.

They are charged with having conspired to approach Thomas N. McCarter, New Jersey utilities magnate, with a proposition by which he could get a reduction in an extra tax assessment of $140,000. McCarter is said to have informed Treasury Secretary Morgenthau of what was going on; the special agents were assigned to investigate.

Former United States Attorney Leo A. Rover will clash with his successor in office, Leslie C. Garnett, who is to prosecute the case with an assistant, George McNeil. William E. Leahy will also take part in the defense work.

Town Rejects TVA.

Oxford, Miss., Dec. 3 (AP).—Mayor R. X. Williams today said that Oxford citizens voted 290 to 237 against signing a Tennessee Valley Authority contract in yesterday's referendum election. Oxford has its own city-owned light and power plant.

Mother Breaks, Livermore Boy Is Given Chance

Woman Accused in Shooting of Son Collapses At Her Home.

By the Associated Press.

Santa Barbara, Calif., Dec. 3.—Mrs. Dorothea Wendt Longcope, accused of attempting to kill her 16-year-old son, Jesse Livermore, jr., suffered a nervous breakdown today.

Dr. Albert Q. Spaulding was summoned to the Montecito home of Mrs. Longcope when she became hysterical and talked irrationally.

Through friends, Mrs. Longcope appealed to her divorced husband, Jesse Livermore, sr., Wall street trader, to summon by airplane a Dr. d'Avignon from Lake Placid, N. Y., to treat her son.

Mrs. Longcope was charged with shooting the boy in a drunken quarrel last Friday.

The boy's condition was critical tonight, although Dr. Neville Ussher and Dr. Irving Wills expressed belief he will recover unless complications develop.

A bullet from a .22-caliber rifle entered the youth's chest, plunged downward through the liver and stopped near the spine.

No attempts have been made to remove the bullet, and none will be made, the physicians said, until the youth gains strength.

The youth insisted the shooting was accidental. Undersheriff Jack Ross said he learned the mother fired the rifle after her son dared her to shoot him when she reprimanded him for drinking.

The boy's father, who came here from the East when informed of the shooting, is keeping his other son, Paul, at a hotel.

Although Livermore would not comment, it was reported he planned to take legal steps to regain custody of Paul and Jesse, jr., who were awarded to their mother at the divorce in 1932.

Shooting Story Rechecked.

Santa Barbara, Calif., Dec. 3 (U.P.). Police tonight traced mysterious discrepancies in the original account of the shooting of Jesse Livermore, jr.

The investigation centered around an important element in the case—the actual time of shooting, originally set at about 1:30 a. m. last Friday.

District Attorney Percy Heckendorf began questioning witnesses, and it was learned that inconsistencies were found in several accounts.

These included two potentially important possibilities:

Young Livermore may have been shot some time before midnight, instead of after 1 o'clock in the morning.

Spattered blood spots on the floor, some distance from where the boy lay when Undersheriff Jack Ross arrived at the home after 3 o'clock, indicated he might have been moved from the room where the shooting took place, and then brought back.

Suit Is Filed Here Against Utility Law

An injunction to restrain the Securities and Exchange Commission from enforcing the requirements of the Wheeler-Rayburn act insofar as they might apply to the Tennessee Electric Power Co. was asked in the District Supreme Court yesterday.

The company asserted it was seeking to absorb the Toccoa Electric Power Co., of Georgia, and that its action had been approved by both the Tennessee and Georgia utilities commissions but is being held up by the Federal Power Commission. If the consolidation is completed, the company said, it will no longer be a holding company within the terms of the act and will, therefore, not be subject to the act's provisions.

General Motors Lists 2 Salaries Over $200,000

8 Officers Paid Over $100,000; Revelation Is Protested by Firm.

By the Associated Press.

General Motors' top-flight salary list—showing total payments of $100,000 to $200,000 annually to ranking officers—was made public last night by the Securities Commission over the company's protest.

It revealed William S. Knudsen, executive vice president, drew $211,128 in salary and bonus last year, and Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president, $201,743. Twelve others received more than $70,000, with a sharp drop from that figure to $25,000 or less for some 20 directors.

This information was filed months ago with what commission officials said was a request that it be held confidential. Several hundred companies, similarly, asked secrecy for specified details of their business, which the law required that they furnish in registering their securities.

Considering each case separately, the commission recently decided that in about 250 instances it was to the public interest that the information in question — dealing sometimes with sales totals, net income and the like, as well as salaries—be made generally available. About 20, mostly minor, were made public last night.

At the same time, the commission issued its monthly report on stock-holdings and transfers of officers, directors and principal stockholders of registered corporations, showing a continuation—but in decreasing volume—of the practice of large gifts of securities.

This practice was noted after passage last summer of the revenue bill, imposing heavy taxes on such gifts to prevent evasion of estate taxes. The levies become effective January 1.

Knudsen's total remuneration consisted of $120,000 in salary and $91,128 in bonus. Sloan's included $118,800 salary and $82,743 bonus. Bonus payments consisted of cash and common stock. Other high total compensation figures, all to vice presidents, were:

Donaldson Brown, $134,687; John L. Pratt, $134,527; Charles F. Kettering, $140,495; Lawrence P. Fisher, $124,218; John Thomas Smith, $125,212; Richard H. Grant, $118,802; James D. Mooney, $118,306; William A. Fisher, $110,658; Albert Bradley, $98,253; Ormand E. Hunt, $98,003; Charles Edward Wilson, $98,018; Charles T. Fisher, $78,840, and John J. Schumann, $71,631.

Stock Transactions.

Reporting on stock transactions by officers, directors and principal stockholders of many large concerns, the Securities and Exchange Commission last night reported that many large corporation stockholders and officers were reducing their security holdings either by gift or sale.

Most important transaction was the sale of 29,500 shares of Beech-Nut Packing Co. common stock during the month by the Gold Dust Corporation. Re-entrance of the Van Sweringen interests into their former properties was shown in the acquisition of 40,393 shares of Cleveland Railway Co. stock by the Mid-America Corporation, newly formed Van Sweringen company.

Gifts of securities worth hundreds of thousands of dollars were reported durnig October. Among these were 1,100 shares of Air Reduction Co. common stock by Alden R. Ludlow; 6,000 shares of Curtis Publishing Co. common stock by Philip S. Collins; 13,000 shares of Detroit & Cleveland Navigation Co. common stock by James T. McMillan, and 2,000 shares of Loew's, Inc., common stock by David Bernstein.

Howard Takes Green to Task In Labor Strife

Typographical President Upholds Industrial Unionization.

By the Associated Press.

Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union, told William Green yesterday that activities of the industrial union committee "should not cause the least apprehension on the part of any one" who wanted all the Nation's workers organized.

Replying to the American Federation of Labor president's letter warning industrial union leaders that "grave dangers" might result from formation of a committee to further organization along industrial lines, Howard wrote:

"I would not be frank with you if I failed to say that I consider organization of the unorganized millions of wage earners as being so essential that it overshadows almost every other consideration."

Howard took issue with Green's suggestion that the industrial union should confine its fight against craft union advocates to the federation convention. He said:

"During the years I have been a delegate to conventions of the American Federation of Labor, I have observed the strongest cohesion in a controlling group for the purpose of determining every question from election of officers to selection of the city in which the convention is to meet the following year.

Treasury Issue Demand Is 4½ Times Amount

Morgenthau Says Banks' Response 'Holds Up President's Hand.'

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau called in reporters yesterday to announce that his December cash financing had been oversubscribed four and one-half times.

"I have good news on the financing," he said. "The figures tell the story of the success of the issue better than I can."

He then reported that purchasers had offered to buy $2,009,000,000 worth of a $450,000,000 issue of ten-year 2¾ per cent bonds, and $2,465,000,000 of a $450,000,000 isue of five-year 1½ per cent notes.

The flotation was offered Monday morning, and books were closed that evening. Asked for comment upon its success with reference to President Roosevelt's statement that bankers had told him the Nation's debt could be safely increased to from $55,000,000,000 to $70,000,000,000, Morgenthau said:

"I should say it holds up Mr. Roosevelt's hand."

Debt Passes 30 Billion.

The Secretary declined, however, to be drawn out on that subject, or to disclose the identity of the bankers, who were reported by the President to have made the statement while appealing for aid in the 1933 banking emergency.

The December loan will bring the gross Federal debt to a new peak of $30,500,000,000, and the Treasury's cash working balance to almost $2,000,000,000.

Morgenthau said the large balance was considered advisable "in view of the unsettled and upset conditions of the world."

He reminded newsmen that under Treasury regulation put in force a few months ago, banks were limited to subscriptions of not more than 50 per cent of their capital and surplus for any issue. This was intended to prevent them from offering to purchase more of an attractive flotation than they really desired to insure getting the amount they wanted.

Patriotic Units To Quit Group Over 'Politics'

Charge of Anti-New Deal Propaganda Leads to Coalition Clash.

The ranks of the American Coalition of Patriotic Societies, comprising 125 national patriotic organizations, were threatened with disruption yesterday by a controversy over the New Deal.

At least two groups announced they would withdraw from the coalition and probably start a rival organization which other associations would be invited to join. They are the National Patriotic Council and the American War Mothers. The United Spanish War Veterans Auxiliary may follow.

Rexford L. Holmes, secretary-treasurer of the National Patriotic Council, revealed the impending withdrawals after a resolution the two groups sponsored was tabled by an overwhelming vote. The resolution was hissed by several white-haired women and denounced by the president, John B. Trevor, of New York City.

After charging the president with disseminating arch-Republican and anti-New Deal propaganda under the letter heads of the coalition, Holmes offered the resolution, which concluded:

"That the coalition of patriotic societies do now, by vote of this body, definitely assure its membership of such discontinuance of political activity and resumption of its former and commendable channels of patriotic endeavor."

"Red" Teaching Opposed.

Earlier the coalition, meeting at the Carlton Hotel, adopted more than a score of resolutions urging retention of the anti-communism rider on the District appropriations act, and extension of the teachers' oath law to all States opposing ratification of the child labor amendment to the constitution, advocating the denial of relief to Communists and aliens, and proposing that the names of Communist candidates be prohibited by State statute from all city and State elections.

Other resolutions called for adequate national defense, larger armies and navies, increased civilian components to the military service, a larger merchant marine which would be 100 per cent American, enlarged R. O. T. C., a reduction of 90 per cent in the immigration quotas, finger-printing of aliens, severance of diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia and continued United States aloofness from the League of Nations and the World Court.

The resolution on the District anti-communism rider urged: "A law compelling the use of such time at present allotted by the Board of Education to the teaching of communism to the teaching of the American Constitution."

The only delegate to comment on the resolution was Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, who has led the anti-red demand for enforcement of the letter of the law by the school authorities. He warned the patriots against disguised teaching of communism.

Two Stir Debate.

The only two resolutions to arouse any opposition were the ones proposing a cessation of political propaganda, and continued opposition to the child labor amendment.

Explaining that he considered the efforts of the Roosevelt Administration in behalf of the amendment admirable, Holmes said:

"If this amendment will keep children out of mills and factories, I believe this resolution is inadvisable."

Gen. Fries shouted he was strongly in favor of the resolution and opposed to the amendment. The resolution was quickly and overwhelmingly adopted.

The other resolution was not even presented by the resolutions committee, as had the score of previous proposals, but was read from the floor by Holmes.

The sponsor stated that "vituperative political propaganda hostile to the Roosevelt regime," had been "reaching my desk from the Coalition of Patriotic Societies."

Holmes commented that the coalition seemed "to have descended from its high original purpose of opposing radicalism and advocating national defense into some sort of Republican club whose main purpose is to discredit the National Administration.

Trevor Answers.

Shortly before the meeting adjourned Trevor indirectly answered the attack without referring to it specifically. He said that this country is confronted with a political situation similar to the "autocracy" that faced the American colonists.

He pointed out that the program of the coalition provided for the dissemination of "accurate information of an educational character" and intimated that was what he had been doing.

Mrs. Noble Newport Potts, president of the National Patriotic Council, arose after Holmes presented the resolution in a vain attempt to stem the tide of resentment against it. She stated that she is a rock-ribbed Republican, but she had heard numerous protests from both Republicans and Democrats against the political activities of the coalition resident.

A few minutes after the Holmes resolution had been tabled Trevor was re-elected president along with the full slate of officers, including the following vice presidents: Mrs. G. H. Brousseau, Bainbridge Colby, Mme. Cantacuzene-Grant and John B. Pattangall. Frank B. Steele was re-elected treasurer.

Justice Josiah A. Van Orsdel, of the District Court of Appeals, was elected to the executive committee along with the following Washingtonians: Gen. Henry J. Reilly, William Tyler Page and Capt. Thomas Kirby.

be fixed not less than 30 days prior to the voting day and a list of eligibles shall be made public by an election board at least 20 days before the voting day.

The election board of three persons would be appointed by the Commissioners and would be paid $15 a day for each day actually serving in that capacity. Their terms would be for four years. A District residence of five years would be required.

The election board would govern election with all the authority usually given to such boards and would prescribe voting precincts with a view of embracing not more than 800 voters in a precinct, although not definitely bound by that number; prescribe polling places, keep records, appoint and remove election officials, prescribe rules and regulations governing the referenda, hear and decide challenges, receive, count and certify returns, call witnesses and administer oaths. Election officials would be paid $10 a day for each day actually at work at his duties.

Kentucky Court Rules Repeal Legally Voted

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 3 (AP).—The Court of Appeals ruled today that Kentucky's prohibition repeal amendment, ratified by a large majority at the November 5 election, was constitutionally submitted to the voters.

The decision removed a legal barrier raised by drys to prevent Gov. Ruby Laffoon from declaring the State dry amendment officially repealed. The State's highest court, with only one of the seven justices dissenting, overruled contentions of drys that the repeal amendment covered two subjects, repeal and reinstatement of local option, instead of one as required by the constitution.

President Still Secretive About 'Great Bankers'

tional committeeman from Maryland, and James P. Warburg, one-time financial adviser to the President, but now hostile to the New Deal.

The views of these bankers on the heights to which the national debt could go, however, were not known here nor was there any indication that the President had in mind remarks of any of these men when he made his Atlanta speech.

One newspaper correspondent suggested that perhaps Jesse H. Jones, RFC chairman, might be able to name the bankers who made the 55-70 billion prediction. The President replied that he thought Jones Jones yesterday was quoted as saying some of them. However, he did not know to whom the President referred.

No further light was thrown here on the mystery of who told President Roosevelt at the beginning of the New Deal that this country could stand without danger a national debt 2½ to 3½ times the size it was then and more than twice what it is now.

Jests With Correspondents.

Mr. Roosevelt held his press conference sitting at the wheel of his runabout automobile in front of the newspaper cottage here. He had just come from a swim in the warm waters of the resort. Earlier in the day he returned to Warm Springs from an overnight stay at the country estate of Cason Callaway, Lagrange, Ga., cotton mill owner, some 20 miles from here.

With his overcoat tightly buttoned around his throat, the President jested with the group of newspaper correspondents, parried questions and lamented the lack of news. He confessed he had loafed over the week-end and was not abreast with what had transpired at Washington.

Informed of a report that he had expressed a desire that the Democratic national convention should be held in Philadelphia next year, the President retorted that there would be similar reports naming every major city in the country before the choice is made. He said he has no preference for a convention city.

"But you are a candidate for re-election?" inquired a correspondent. Mr. Roosevelt replied that the Democratic national committee would select the party's Presidential candidate.

"Oh, Mr. Murphy," exclaimed a correspondent, referring to the late Charles F. Murphy, leader for many years of Tammany Hall, who when asked to reveal the party's candidates always said the convention would select them.

The President laughed heartily at this sally and, with gestures, recalled how Murphy used to say it was up to the party to select its candidates.

Assailed by Talmadge.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Dec. 3.—Gov. Talmadge today said that President Roosevelt should name the bankers who told him the country could stand a debt "of $70,000,000,000."

"It is not the duty of the President to listen to any banker or any other citizen as to how much debt the Nation can stand," the Georgia Governor said. "If he does quote any person he certainly should give their name and institution they are connected with."

He termed as "amusing" the President's statement that the peak of governmental expenditures had been reached.

Talmadge said the "most astounding" statement of the Roosevelt address was that "the majority of the people in the United State were living on a third-class diet and if we had a first-class diet it would require cultivation of more land than ever before."

"Does the President think the American people are asleep or dopey?" the Governor asked. "Recent news dispatches tell us of plans to cut crop production even more while imports are rising. Does this country owe a duty to a foreign nation greater than to its own people?"

Why Enthusiasm Lags.

President Roosevelt was elated to see the progress made in development of a model "resettlement" community at Pine Valley, Ga. But his enthusiastic comments conceal a rather bitter moral.

The project is intended to accommodate from 250 to 300 families. "In the United States there are not just 300 families that need some kind of governmental help to better their living conditions," the President said. "There are probably 1,000,000 families. The Government can't do this for all of them because there isn't enough money in the Treasury, but it can set an example not only to help those who are here, but the tens of thousands who are not." That idea of developing models accounts for a considerable number of costly projects undertaken by the present Administration.

Plans call for the expenditure of $1,500,000 at the Pine Valley settlement. In addition to houses for the settlers, a community center, water and electric light facilities will be provided. CCC boys have helped to clear and terrace the land. The most modern farm machinery has been purchased for the settlers with Government funds. When the project is completed it will undoubtedly be a model community. But what will it demonstrate?

The President visualizes counties following this example in the development of neglected areas. Nothing would please county authorities more. And, of course, farmers who are thus provided with homes at Government expense are delighted by the idea. Still it has not been brought within the realm of practicability, for the farmers do not have sufficient money to build communities of this sort for themselves and the counties find it impossible to collect taxes for that purpose.

Pine Valley becomes, therefore, nothing more than an excellent example of what can be done with a large sum of money. Only the Government has sufficient funds to indulge in experiments of this kind. If there were just some way to overcome the problem of financing such pretty undertakings on a grand scale, to say nothing of making them pay when they are once in operation, the enthusiasm over model experiments would not be so limited in scope.

Four-Year Contracts.

Since the Administration has decided to make "agricultural adjustment" a permanent policy, the extension of Government-farmer contracts over a period of four years would, in ordinary circumstances, be entirely logical. One difficulty that has arisen under the short-term contracts is the uncertainty of the future. Farmers have found it impossible to plan ahead. If there is any merit to governmental planning in agriculture, certainly it ought to be worked out on a long-term basis.

Just at present, however, the AAA is fighting for its life in the courts. The constitutionality of the whole adjustment plan has been challenged. As the AAA offers cotton growers a four-year adjustment contract, the Supreme Court is analyzing at least one of the major issues on which the fate of the farm experiment depends. Even if the adjustment contracts should not be affected by this and subsequent decisions, there is a possibility that the processing taxes through which the Government meets its obligations to farmers may be upset. The AAA has chosen a somewhat curious moment to launch a four-year contract policy.

In discussing a recent Supreme Court ruling, which granted a temporary injunction against the collection of processing taxes from several rice millers, the AAA announced that even an adverse decision by the Supreme Court on the constitutionality of these taxes would have no "effect upon the Government's obligation with respect to existing adjustment contracts with the farmers of the country." In the light of this statement, the cotton reduction contracts have the appearance of a scheme to keep the AAA in operation for the next four years in spite of anything the court may decide. If it is true that four-year contracts are also about to be offered to wheat, tobacco and rye growers, that impression would seem to be inescapable.

Still another difficulty ought to be faced by the AAA as it ventures into long-term agricultural planning. The policy now being pursued may be affected by next year's election. Are the officials now looking after the farmer's interests certain of their return to power, or are they planning to leave their successors the dilemma of continuing their program or repudiating Government obligations? It is easy to see that agricultural planning ought to be nonpartisan and that it should be geared to the needs of the country over a long period. But can a government subject to changing whims of the electorate provide that sort of overlordship?

Aside from the propriety of inaugurating a long-term policy on the eve of a Supreme Court test of its constitutionality, therefore, the AAA has taken a step which draws attention to its own deficiencies as a permanent planning agency. Commendable as are the new arrangements for division of benefits between landlord and tenant, they must not be allowed to obscure these underlying issues.

King to Parliament.

King George's address at the convening of the new House of Commons, chosen by the general election of November 14, clearly indicates the settled determination of the British government to continue the policy of sanctions now being applied to Italy. But this pressure, it is emphasized, is to be continuously paralleled by efforts to secure a negotiated peace "acceptable to the three parties to the dispute—Italy, Ethiopia and the League." Thus Premier Baldwin takes opportunity again to inform Mussolini that there is no issue in dispute between their two nations, but only one between Italy and the coalition of which Great Britain is a charter member.

In this reasoning there is nothing of either casuistry or evasion. "The government's foreign policy," said the King, "will, as heretofore, be based on firm support of the League of Nations." It is undoubtedly true that this support is firmer now than it was at the time of the Manchurian dispute, in 1931, but how this can be said to demonstrate any British insincerity is not clear. Four years ago the major members of the League did not feel themselves strong enough to act against Japan without any definite and formal assurance as to the American position. Now, entirely independent of the American attitude, they believe they have the strength to curb Italian aggression. The real reasons for this change deserve rather closer analysis than is being accorded to the subject.

Of course one factor is the positive jeopardy to British imperial interests involved in the present violation of the League Covenant. When that is noted, however, the conclusion that Albion is necessarily perfidious is still far to seek. In the League or out, no government is going to take action of a nature hostile to what it considers the national interest. If the League is to be a going concern it cannot therefore operate in an idealistic vacuum. Its machinery must be geared to the enlightened self-interest of its members. And to say that the League Covenant is now the basis of British foreign policy is simply to say that the League, for that nation, appears to be a very practical and valuable institution. Certainly this may be a tribute to the League as much as an indictment of British imperialism.

Obviously some much deeper considerations than Lake Tana, Egypt, or the route to India are behind a British attitude which is as firm now as it was wobbly in 1931. Common-sense alone would indicate that reasons other than skillful British diplomacy now induce some fifty nations to go along with a sanctions policy not attempted earlier against Japan. And of these many reasons two are perhaps predominant.

The first is the growing realization that unchecked aggression will in the long run inevitably undermine whatever stability treaty provisions have been able to give to the international relations of sovereign states. Unless some rules of international law higher than the will of the individual war lord can be firmly established, all treaty making and all contractual engagements between states might as well be abandoned. For the British commonwealth of nations, scattered throughout the globe and dependent for its very existence on the rule of law, this is no academic question. And from this viewpoint the lesson spread on the record by Japan in 1931 helps to explain British determination now.

A second major factor is to be found in the change of American sentiment. As long as our policy demanded "freedom of the seas" it was impossible for Great Britain to support a sanctionist stand. This would have been too likely to lead to an outright Anglo-American breach. But with the development of fervent neutrality sentiment in the United States the doctrine of the freedom of the seas has been tacitly abandoned. We now seem entirely willing to sacrifice traditional neutral rights whenever and wherever they threaten our entanglement in a dispute abroad.

With that withdrawal in American policy, a move forward on the part of Great Britain has become possible. King George intimates as much when he says that "the fulfillment of our international obligations under the Covenant" makes it "urgently necessary that deficiencies in the defense forces be made good." In other words, the British fleet is to be strengthened against possible need as an agency of League blockades.

Once the League members feel really assured that the United States will under no circumstances side with an aggressor nation, the problem of curbing aggression may for the first time be on the way to permanent solution.

Reform Begins To Hurt.

Washington's unemployed are already feeling the pinch of the new relief policy. Even though the District is specially handicapped by its dependence upon Congress for all appropriations, many other communities will find the retreat from the Federal dole equally or even more disturbing. The problem of caring for destitute families has not been solved. It has merely been transferred, in part, from the national to local governments.

The permanence of the reform symbolized by "liquidation" of the FERA last week will depend upon the fortitude and intelligence of the local officials upon whom this responsibility now falls. In many cases retrenchment will be essential. The first problem of local governments is to make the means at their command go as far as possible in alleviation of the most acute needs. In most instances this will imply a reduction of staffs, since direct relief cases have been greatly reduced by the transfer of men to WPA jobs. Beyond that, however, renewed efforts in the direction of Administrative economy and efficiency become imperative.

With relief allowances in the District reduced 25 per cent, hardships for some families are inevitable. The community is now face to face with the realities of this acute social problem, and it may be taken for granted that it will respond in a humanitarian spirit. The problem should be met, however, in accord with the District's ability to finance a relief program, and not according to some preconceived standard that contemplates unlimited borrowing for an emergency that may prove to be permanent.

It is obvious that new sources of local revenue will have to be found in the District as elsewhere. If the Nation is to be saved from another demoralizing era of Federal doles, the revenue problem must be courageously met by local authorities. In the long run the average city or State can obtain revenue as easily as can the Federal Government. Some localities are involved in extraordinary predicaments. But they represent the exception rather than the rule. Special arrangements will have to be made to give them aid, either through the State or national governments.

Otherwise, communities must learn to stand on their own feet. A relapse into the Federal dole system would be a blow to our system of local self-government from which the country would not soon recover. Moreover, it would mean that the country is unable to support its jobless families without slipping ever further toward bankruptcy. Some politicians are willing to take that position, as the current talk of reviving the Federal dole indicates, because they consider it expedient to do so. The real issue at stake, however, runs much deeper than political expediency. The manner in which local governments face up to that issue, while necessarily painful adjustments are being made, will be a factor of inestimable importance in determining the future of America.

After Two Months.

It was two months ago yesterday that Italian troops in Eritrea felt, according to a statement from Rome, "compelled to advance to new and better positions," near Mussa-Ali, "in view of the ever-increasing hostile attitude of the Ethiopians." Yesterday's dispatches from reliable correspondents indicated that the troops of Haile Selassie have actually penetrated well into Italian Somaliland.

Whether these reports are accurate must await further confirmation, but it is certain that the Italian forces have made relatively little progress in what was generally advertised to be a quick and conclusive campaign. The important railroad connecting Addis Ababa and the seaport Djibouti still runs unmolested to carry arms and supplies to ill-equipped Ethiopia. A correspondent of a British daily, returned to London, reports that credit for the much-trumpeted occupation of Makale actually goes first to a band of newspapermen who entered the town from the Italian lines ahead of the troops. In other words, victory has come where the Ethiopians do not wish to make a stand.

The Italians, who recently received a new commander, are as yet scarcely out of the plains. Before them stand the plateaus of inner Ethiopia where the strength and the wealth of the nation reside. Daily the news comes through of roads under construction, of extensive air reconnoiters, of the ease with which tanks are maneuvered, of troops being massed for attacks—much sound and fury signifying, to date, what?

The Educational Plant.

From the Morning Oregonian.

America's public school system (elementary and high schools only) cost only $78,094,687 to operate in the school year 1879-80, as compared with $1,504,668,982 in the school year 1933-34. The cost of operating the schools, per pupil, increased from $12.71 to $67. The total cost of the system was multiplied almost 20 times; the cost per pupil was multiplied almost five times.

In those years the increase in the number of teachers, supervisors and principals was not so great—from 286,593 to 869,518. But the average salary mounted from $195 to $1,217.

Enrollment in the public elementary schools gradually swelled from 9,757,118 in 1880 to 20,729,511 in 1934, but high school enrollment leaped from 110,277 to 5,656,412. Today the high schools are still growing, though now at a reduced rate, whereas the elementary schools have been decreasing in enrollment since 1930.

One point should be clear, that the time of monstrous growth is past and the time of intensification and improvement is here.

Deaths From Alcoholism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On a wall of the Boston Public Library is a painting which shows in the background a peaceful rural scene with light and colored clouds in the blue sky above. Advancing in the foreground a man and woman, simply clad, lead protectingly a small child. In the eyes of the three is a look of wonder as they gaze out upon a strange world.

In The Post of November 26 is a picture of an early colonial scene. From a church in the background men and women are shown homeward bound after a Thanksgiving service. Beneath the picture are the words "Coming Home From the 'Meeting House'" and below this the name of a brand of beer followed by the words: ". . . is something to be thankful for."

On page 2 of this same issue of The Post, under the heading "More Drinking Seen as Alcohol Death Toll Rises," one finds the following: "Alcoholism deaths in the District of Columbia declined from 25 in 1933 to 24 in 1935; Virginia's increased from 63 to 95, while Maryland's total stood at 70 for each of the two years. No estimate was made of the number of deaths from poison liquor, all alcoholic cases having been listed together.

The figures compiled by the Census Bureau for Health Service reports were said by one census official not to be altogether accurate, because there is every reason to believe many family physicians would avoid signing a death certificate attributing the cause to alcoholism if another listing were possible." At that, Virginia's record of increase was high—from 63 to 95. And would have been higher had there been included deaths due to drunken brawls and drunken drivers.

W. J. G. Restates His Point.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Well, it seems that I started something. Two of your correspondents have gently taken me to task for opinions I advanced last week on the Edith Maxwell case, both of whom seemed to have misconstrued the letter and spirit of my meaning.

"A Subscriber" says that I alluded to Trigg Maxwell as defending the rights of his own house. The idea I intended to convey, and still believe that the language, properly construed, would convey, that from time immemorial man has more or less considered himself as master of his house, and many there were who not only resented but resisted any and all interference with his plan of management. Now, whether that be right or wrong, it's a fact just the same.

We are told that this trait is more noticeable in the more sparsely settled and mountain communities than elsewhere now. Did Edith Maxwell know this? Did she not know the rules and "codes," if you please, under which her father ruled his household? If she did not, after having been raised there, and getting out for "outside education" and enlightenment, then I do not consider her worthy of all the sentiment and sympathy that is directed toward her.

We are told in the newspaper reports that ever since she went to New York and Detroit and came back with her hair bobbed, her jaws painted and eyebrows penciled her father had made home a veritable hell on earth for the whole family. I wonder, since he is dead and his voice stilled forever if such reports are worthy of belief! Human nature will tolerate only so much abuse. There is no record of where this "much abused" family ever called for help or appealed to the law for protection. Now we are asked to believe that he was one of the basest of specimens, too low to be classed as a human being.

Let's suppose that Trigg Maxwell had been killed by some outsider. In that event would not the family response had been that he "was a devoted father, loving and considerate husband?" Far-fetched supposition? Well, my dear sirs, visit the courthouses and read the newspapers and you will see that is the rule and not the exception in such cases.

Trigg Maxwell is gone. His eyes cannot behold his accusers; his voice cannot be raised in his own defense to tell the world what provocations he had to endure; or, are we to believe that he had no provocations? According to Virginia Lee Warren, his own son, who is bitter against him, said he was honest, "paid his bills promptly and had little left of his earnings." I wonder if that can be truthfully said about all his accusers.

"Subscriber" draws a beautiful picture of an ideal home, the bringing forth of children into the world, the relationship of parent and child, etc., which is altogether away from any idea that my letter conveyed. We are dealing with facts as they are, not as they ought to be.

If we want those people to live our kind of civilization we must go in there, teach them and train them instead of condemning them for not doing what we say they don't know. We should not measure them with our yardstick unless we furnish them that yardstick, and explain its uses to them. "Subscriber" asks: "Have the Virginia mountaineers the right to establish a code of justice, etc?" Well, if they establish it, I am afraid some of our people who are not Virginia mountaineers should find out how it was done. Maybe then more of our criminals would be brought to justice, and more of those who are brought in would not find it so easy to escape punishment.

Arthur Brisbane said the other day: "Human beings must be taught—you can not force them." Now, this is the meat in my contention against "outside interference." Before we tell those folks that they are wrong, barbarous, primitive and uncivilized and pile our money in there to make them do it our way, we should go in there and teach them our ways, convince them that we are right, and after convincing them, then, and then only, hold them to strict accountability for their actions according to our standards.

Vertical Unionism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: By way of explaining vertical unionism in your news review on Sunday, you said: "Under the proposed industrial set-up, reporters, typesetters, pressmen, all newspapermen would combine in a single union."

That statement is, to say the least, a distortion of the truth and tends to muddle a point which is likely to be of paramount importance for the next several years.

The choice of example was unfortunate. The objective of Mr. Lewis and other leaders in the movement he is sponsoring is the vertical unionization of works in mass production industries. And the newspaper cannot as yet be classified as a mass production industry, Mr. Hearst to the contrary notwithstanding.

Therefore, it is quite as inaccurate to say that Mr. Lewis would organize all reporters and all pressmen into the same union as it would be to say that he would combine the house-painters' and the roofers' locals.

In view of the increasing importance of labor policy, I am sure you agree that this major point should not be confused in our public prints. JOE M. CLARK.

"Sucker Bait."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt comments, in his speech, on the "wild speculation" prior to his election, but has nothing to say concerning the speculative torch that was lighted, after his election, when the gold standard was abandoned and the dollar devaluated.

At that time, when fear of inflation spread like a prairie fire across the country, people everywhere were urged to buy stocks "as a hedge against inflation." Immediately issues were "ballooned" skyward, only to suffer a disastrous break several months later.

As a matter of history the inflation scare proved the greatest "sucker bait" that was ever cast into Wall Street waters. Eagerly the people snapped up stocks, at ascending figures, only to see the market break wide open later on. Who was left "holding the bag" in this instance? The same John Public that held it after the 1929 crash. E. K. G.
Washington, Nov. 30.

Capital Street Cars.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noticed on the front page of the second section of The Post of November 29 complaints on the Capital Transit Co. I have been riding the cars of this company for over two years and have never found but one thing to complain about.

It is hard to find a dirty car on the lines. I have yet to find a single trainman who is discourteous or who has lack of training of personnel.

If the men on the cars or buses operated them dangerously the superintendents would know about them immediately after it happened, as there are plenty of people who run and tell them. These men have to make a living the same as anybody else. If a man makes a rough stop, the first thing the passengers think of is that he must be drunk. Rule G goes on the street railways the same as it does on steam roads.

I am not an employe of this company, but am simply taking their part when I think they are in the right. C. WILLIAM WITBECK.

The Post Impressionist

Wild West—Tame Spectators.

Post Office, Wednesday.

"ACCURACY" was Joseph Pulitzer's great word of warning to those who served under him on the New York World—no matter whether it was always heeded. It is still, and must remain, the one right word for news-chronicling, for history and biography—perhaps for that most romantic of literary forms, the so-called Literature of Science. But is it indispensable every otherwhere?

Our present case in point is the motion-picture called "Annie Oakley."

We went to see it a few days ago, partly to renew our memories of Buffalo Bill and Annie, partly in order that our companions (a young sportsman of fifteen and his eighteen months' younger duck-shooting sister) might see what they had missed by not being their father's brother and sister.

Well, the picture served the first of those purposes admirably. Wm. F. Cody wasn't a day older than when we'd seen him last, though perhaps a bit fuller in the face. And he was quite the "Colonel" of whom we first heard the authentic details when General Merrill poured into our boyish ears the story of how the United States'—and his—Fifth Cavalry revenged the death of dashing, but too daring, Custer.

Merrill's Cody: The Iowa-born Pony Express rider who learned the Great Plains by carrying the mails from St. Jo' to Sacramento—who gained the name of "Buffalo Bill" by fulfilling a contract to supply enough buffalo-meat to feed all the builders of the Kansas-Pacific Railroad. Here certainly was the best of Army scouts and guides against the Sioux and Cheyennes, the man who met mighty Chief Yellow Hand in single combat and slew him.

Our own Cody: He of a far later date, when the Wild West Show neared the entertainment-skies' western horizon, yet kept, for us, the glamour of its rising in '83 and of its five years' subsequent "European Tour Before All the Crowned Heads." William Frederick was soon to die in Denver and be buried in that tomb of solid rock blasted out of Colorado's Lookout Mountain—he was still Buffalo Bill.

Here in the picture, just as there in the tent, how gallantly he swung his pale and enormous hat, with what skill he brought his white horse to its knees in acknowledgement of the inevitable applause! "Ah," we told our companions, "you youngsters were born after the days of real romance!"

We weren't so sure of Sitting Bull, excellently though he performed. We thought that, after the tragedy at the junction of the Little and Big Horn Rivers, this chief and medicine-man fled to Canada—didn't return until '89—was then soon killed in the scrimmage following his arrest.

But what matter? Whether he was or wasn't in the Wild West Show, he belonged in the picture.

So did Annie Oakley—who certainly was in the Show. Indeed, we have long wondered whether there weren't several "Annies Oakleys" in it. The occasionally reliable Encyclopedia Britannica says: "Notable among women trap-shooters are Mrs. Frank Butler, the late Annie Oakley, . . . who achieved feats in trap-shooting which should last for years."

Long ago, for some peccadillo or other, there was arrested in St. Louis a woman who said she was "Annie Oakley," of the B. B. show. The original and impeccable Annie Oakley brought suit for libel against the newspapers which repeated this statement on their own authority. The arrested woman alleged that she, under the familiar name, had been substituted in the "Wild West" after the departure of the rightful Annie.

"However," said we to ourselves at the picture, "that question of name-ownership falls under the Pulitzer rule. Whoever else was 'Annie Oakley,' this Barbara Stanwyck is like enough to the Annie Oakley we saw in the Buffalo Bill Show—to all artistic intents and purposes, she is Annie."

* * *

So we directed our young guests' attention to the marksmanship of Miss Stanwyck.

"See," we said, "how marvelously she shoots!" . . .

"She chooses the smallest bottle for her mark . . .

"She rolls that tin-can along that table by plugging it with bullets . . .

"Look at her shooting a cigarette from the lips of her sweetheart . . .

"And now she'll shoot a cigarette from between the lips of the German Kronprinz! . . .

"That's just the way that the real Annie Oakley shot!"

Then came the calm choral comment of modern youth:

"If that's the way Miss Oakley shot, how did she ever hit anything? Barbara Stanwyck's aiming with both eyes open!"

Fair Enough

The Italian Scene.

Geneva, Dec. 3.

THERE were five submarines tied up inside the breakwater at Naples—three of them big, long boats, with high freeboard, the other two smaller, but each one mounting a gun with a big eye which looked dead at you as the big lonesome luxury liner Rex gentled herself up to her berth and began to unload.

Most of the 35 first-class passengers got off there after a strange voyage from New York, with 52,000 tons of boat beneath them and hundreds of servants to draw their baths and bring them thimbles of coffee and brandy in the lounge. The gala night after the Rex passed Gibraltar had been a ghastly flop, not because people were necessarily disinclined to get tight under favorable circumstances, but because there weren't enough of them to make a gala.

The table stewards came around that evening as the passengers were making their last weary strokes at the rare viands and exotic delicacies, passed out paper hats and Halloween horns, and poured a small drink of Italian champagne with the compliments of the captain, as they said, which was intended to prime the party.

• • • •

BUT we were an ill-assorted lot of Americans and Italians, including, of course, the inevitable American lady of abundant years, but girlish, who insists on speaking table d'hote French, blows smoke through her nose and prefers to live in the old world because they do things so much better over here.

There was a performance of uncommonly bad amateur vaudeville by members of the ship's company in the theater in the third class quarters and the gala fizzed out in three or four distant pairs sitting around the grand salon built for 300 and conversing in whispers like conspirators. Not a cork popped and by midnight the only people aboard were the deck force hosing down the promenade and the stewards gathering up the paper caps and horns to be returned to the ship's store for another gala, God alone knows when.

The party died for lack of numbers, for a party is not made of wine alone nor is it a prizefight which makes a battle of the century. Had I been the only spectator at the Tunney-Dempsey fights, I doubt that I would remember them at all. And if there was nobody to admire and cheer the young European officers in their Bird of Paradise uniforms, they might feel as ridiculous as the man wearing a paper cap and blowing a horn all by himself and decide to wear more sensible and manly clothes.

• • • •

THERE was a miscellaneous fleet of little war boats tied up near the subs in Naples, apparently old yachts, one with a torpedo slung from a crane at her stern and the whole lot of them hardly worth their paint, much less a listing in the naval force, except perhaps as patrols. The oply really professional warship in sight aside from the subs was a cruiser and she had such an untidy look on her decks in contrast to the clear, burnished aspect of the British ships at Gibraltar that but for her colors and absence of ship's crew she might have been mistaken for a Greek flagship.

A small freighter pried itself loose and went walking off to sea without a tug and with men crowding her decks. The lounge steward said she was a mule boat bound for the war, as they call the great emancipation project in unguarded moments. This would mean a few more shillings for the British government, which owns nearly half of Suez Canal and receives an annual dividend of 75 per cent on her original investment from tolls.

The Rex stood high above the landing at Naples and as soon as the planks were down there came a hurried clumping sound as a file of 60 Italian laborers from Canada and the United States rushed out of a hole in the ship's side, carrying their bundles like the immigrants who used to pour through Ellis Island. Probably out of jobs and homesick, anyway, they had volunteered for service as civilian laborers in Abyssinia among their own people, combining patrotism with the prospect of a pioneer's life and a pioneer's farm in a new country under their own flag.

• • • •

I HIRED a car from an aggressive young man, the son of an Italian father and an American mother, who spoke English well and remarked with ecstatic enthusiasm that his number had turned up and he would be going off to emancipate the slaves himself in a short time. He said that there was no ill feeling toward Americans in Italy, but when we passed a funeral a little later I remembered the adventure of the American musicians in Rome who had their ears punched off when they failed to lift their hats to the hearse.

I have made a conscious effort to temper my spiritual independence with an ingredient of tact in this, understanding they have censors in Italy and hoping to spend a few weeks in the country. Up to this moment I have not found my flycop and I am not even certain that my flycop has found me, although he might be the waiter, the concierge or the taximan.

Maybe it isn't true at all that they put a flycop on a visiting journalist. You can hear anything you want to hear on the outside and the only way to check up is to come and see.

'Zone' Complications

Panama Canal Raises Problems Between Natives And "Ditch-Diggers" Soon To Be Considered By Negotiators Of Treaty.

By Paul Vanorden Shaw.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Colon.

TWO peoples whose interests are perhaps more inextricably interlocked than those of any two other nations are now about to adopt a new modus vivendi. For many months negotiations between Panama and the United States have been carried on to revise the treaties which have prescribed hitherto the manner and means of their relationships. This has not been an easy task. Added to inevitable intricacies are social and sentimental obstacles to a free and fair understanding.

The accumulation of all these contacts, or rather, their distillation, appears in the treaties which regulate the diplomatic relationships of the two peoples. At once all the deficiencies in international law manifest themselves and negotiators are handicapped by the absence of norms and standards which can be adopted, adapted or imitated.

Furthmore, because of the military and naval importance of the Panama Canal, and because of the military and naval control over it, questions of defense, strategy and military needs loom up to confound the negotiater who wishes to promote understanding. Rule No. 1 of the War and Navy Departments in Washington seems to be that the canal is in imminent danger of being blown up at any minute and that every relationship between Panama and the United States must be based on the assumption that, wittingly or unwittingly, Panamanians and others may be in cahoots with enemies of the United States whose one purpose is to cut in two the "wasp-like waist" of the American empire. Even such movies as "Marie Galante" serve to popularize this notion at the same time that they serve notice that the American Intelligence Department is always on the job. It is often forgotten that one of the best protections for the canal on this score is the good will of the Panamanians themselves, who understand full well that their own security depends on the safety of the Canal Zone.

• • • •

THEN there are the many petty questions arising from a bilingual press, from stores and theaters in Panama that dislike the competition of the cheaper commissariat and issue commodities of the zone and army posts with, also, the free entertainment provided there. In the interests of truth it must be recorded that much of the howl on the score of this unfair competition arose not from Panamanians so much as from American proprietors and business men in Panama proper and what appeared at one time as an international incident was in reality a squabble between two groups of Americans.

As in the case of the Polish corridor here is an instance where the territory of one nation completely bisects the territory of another. No Panamanian, except by sea, can pass from the northern to the southern part of Panama without passing through United States territory, and to do so he must rely on means provided by the American Government such as, for example, ferries across the canal. Even the President of the isthmian nation must use an American-owned railroad to get from his capital city to Colon on the Atlantic side.

Nor is it easy to find two such distinct types of culture side by side as one finds in Panama. On one side of the fence is a hodge-podge of races, where the dominant and official culture is Spanish or Latin American. On the other is Main street housed in tropical homes and dressed in tropical garb. It is Main street to a T with all its faults and few of its redeeming features. The saving sense of humor which allows Main streeters at home to laugh at themselves is absent. The Zonite takes himself very seriously and he expects you to do the same.

THIRTY-TWO-YEAR-OLD Panama and the administration of the "good neighbor" policy have been at it to remove many of the obstacles which have made the relationships between their respective peoples and their governments anything but pleasant. In the course of years many things have been added to the debit side of the "understanding" column and ill will has been growing. Of necessity so intimate a relationship has been fraught with difficulties of a diplomatic and juridical character. When one nation is divided from the other only by an imaginary line, and when streets cross international boundaries without signs of markers, there are a multitude of complications arising from common traffic and police problems.

The peculiar relationships of the Panama Railroad to both the American and Panamanian sides offers also another whole set of thorny problems which have ramifications—questions of land, squabbles about an automobile road across the isthmus, rents and questions of jurisdiction in New Cristobal and elsewhere. The Panamanians claim, with some justice, that the United States violates not only its own treaties but some of the simplest demands of decency when it permits on its own grounds houses of ill-fame and gambling.

But deeper almost than all else is a sore subject which it is difficult to treat without treading on toes and without doing injustice to parties on both sides of the fence. It is claimed in some quarters that no matter what the terms of the new treaty may be the Panamanian Assembly will not accept them. Of course no treaty can ever be devised which would satisfy completely both the Panamanians and the Americans. The former are now influenced by a wave of nationalism so common in the post-1930 Latin-American world, and to the latter the canal has become as much of a nationalist fetish as the Constitution and the Monroe Doctrine. But behind Panama's attitude is an anti-Americanism which can be easily traced to certain facts of the Panamanian's contact with the typical American "Zonite."

• • • •

THE Zonite or "ditch digger," as even the military and naval men call him, is a Main Streeter who comes to an artificially and deliberately created tropical "hell-hole" to work for a fair wage. He has made work and living in Panama seem far worse than it is so as to receive pampered treatment from a benevolent Uncle Sam who has swallowed his line, hook and sinker. He pays practically nothing for a house far better than he ever had at home, 6 or 7 cents for cigarettes which other Americans buy for 15; 9 cents for gasoline which costs the American anywhere from 15 to 25 cents, and the Panamanian nearer 30 cents. He has two or more servants, belongs to clubs he could never crash into in the States, drives a nice car and leads the life of Reilly.

It goes to his head. He develops a superiority complex which he is at no bother to hide. He thinks of the Panamanians as "Spigs" and makes no effort to dissimulate the fact. He treats them with disdain, often adds racial prejudice to his parvenuism and makes himself a confounded nuisance to all and sundry. This is a fact attested to by "Zonite" Americans themselves, one of whom refers to his own compatriots as "stall-fed morons." But the irony of the situation is that these very critics of everything Panamanian often, after they have retired, move over into Panama proper and seek there to live out the rest of their lives. They like the climate and the life they have led.

The corollary, of course, is an inferiority complex on the part of the Panamanian who cannot live as does his American neighbor. He pays normal prices for his house, cigarettes and gasoline. He cannot afford a club and often even must forego necessities. He comes to resent the condescension in the American and therefore to hate everything American. No change in treaty will alter this situation. But it is real. It must be cured somehow.

Don't Mention It.

Jane In Japan.

ON THE middle of the first page of "The Tale of Benji," that long silvery novel which comes down to us out of the remoteness of medieval Japan, you will catch the hint of its English echo. A clause runs: "* * * as good an upbringing as generally falls to the lot of young ladies whose parents are alive and at the height of fortune"—and the intuition there flashes up. Very little that the Lady Murasaki writes thereafter but deepens the impression. Her work is not like that of the sentimentalist, Richardson, nor does it resemble several others which have been suggested (which comparisons will be dealt with somewhat severely in a moment)—Murasaki not Shikibu, that little, retiring lady of the Japanese court who was born in 978 and who died, we think, by 1031, writes with the pen of Jane Austen. Worlds apart though they were, these two women breathed the same language.

How so?—you may object, remembering—Jane's cloistered, country-town chapters on the one hand; considering on the other, for one example, the marked eroticism of Lady Murasaki's pages. And to that we will come as soon as a word of praise has been given to Arthur Waley for his sterling translation (1925-33) of the six books of this great story, and to the publishers for their clear and handsome presentation of it all in these two attractive volumes of "the Tale of Benji" (Houghton Mifflin, 2 vols. boxed, $5).

• • • •

WHEN you undertake to read 1,135 pages, you want to know what you are getting in for. So I must warn you of a disservice which you will find printed on the box, an excerpt of a review from the New York Times. The reviewer and I should not hesitate to mention his name if I knew it, says of "Genji:" "As robust as 'Tom Jones,' as discerning as 'Don Quixote,' as untrammeled as 'The Arabian Nights.'" Those phrases are admirable to the ear, but as shots at the spirit of "Genji" they are 40 miles wide.

There is nothing in the least "robust" about this work. I suspect the reviewer of trying to avoid saying right out that there is a vast deal of amorous intrigue in "Genji"—but the picture of Prince Genji, the hero, and his many loves, is wholy different from that of young lusty Tom.

And "discerning?" We can't argue about details. But the whole spirit of Cervantes, in "Don Quixote," was a keen if elliptical discernment of the sham of medieval chivalry. "Don Quixote" gave the death-stroke to that sham. And dear Lady Murasaki never once questions the courtly and ornamental structure of the society she describes.

And "untrammeled" has me entirely at a loss. If it refers to a boundless imagination, "The Arabian Nights" exhibits it, but not "Genji" at all. If it refers to any other sort of freedom from fetters or shackles, I cannot see that it applies to either work. Both lie in many and many a ring of nets.

No, no no!—we come back to Lady Murasaki and Jane Austen.

• • • •

FOR what we have in "Genji" is a long chronicle of the intimate life of a small group in a society of marked convention. Jane took the county-life of England; the Purple Lady ("murasaki" is Japanese for purple) took the nobles of the Japanese Imperial Household. And it is only with a bit less wit and salt and sharp differentiation of character that Lady Murasaki writes of her charmed and charming circle—emperors and princes and ladies-in-waiting, jealous mistresses and ambitious courtiers wise monks and gay roisterers, all in a golden age when people spoke in apt and poetic verses, danced at the festival of the Red Sparrow Court, dressed in panoply and made processions, wrote poems in elegant calligraphy on the spur of the moment, drank wine under the moon in the garden, observed a thousand strange and entrancing points of etiquette, and who were at heart in Lady Murasaki's gentle, shrewd, and marvelously flowing narrative, the very people we knew in Jane Austen.

"The Tale of Genji" is an old Japanese fan with the cermonial figures come to life, to a life we understand and share in with rare enjoyment. Not once in reading Lady Murasaki's pages will it be obvious to you that you are reading the oldest novel in the world.

Visit Paid D. C. by Head Of School Secretaries

Miss Louise Henderson, of Philadelphia, president of the National Association of School Secretaries, has come to Washington to meet some of the 35 local members of the association and to plan for a regional meeting February 22, it was reported last night by Miss M. Alvina Carroll, secretary to Washington's superintendent of schools.

The association, Miss Carroll added, now 2 years old, aims to raise the standard of work of its members, to consider means of improving their efficiency and to contribute service to the schools and the community. Affiliated with the National Education Association, it has 600 members, and Miss Carroll said "prospects for the future are bright."

Ship Firm, U.S. Void Contract On Mail Route

New Orleans-to-Colombia Agreement Cancelled by Mutual Consent.

Cancellation of the first ocean-mail contract since a special Senate committee turned a publicity spotlight on Government aids to shipping was announced yesterday by the Postoffice Department, but the cancellation was by "mutual consent."

The United Fruit Co. agreed to relinquish one of three contracts it holds with the Postoffice, Postmaster General James A. Farley disclosed. The contract covers ocean-mail route No. 41, from New Orleans, La., to Havana, Cuba, and Cristobal, Canal Zone to Cartagena and Puerto Colombia, Colombia.

Pointing out that the mail will be carried as usual, but on a "poundage" basis, rather than the recent subsidy arrangement, Farley said the cancellation will result in a saving of approximately $4,000,000 to the Government.

Company Paid $544,000.

"I am convinced that the contract on this route was not in the public interest, and that a substantial saving will result to the United States by its cancellation," the Postmaster General said. "This has been agreed to by the United Fruit Co. There has been paid to the company, under the contract, approximately $544,000."

Although the President's authority to cancel ocean mail contracts was extended by Congress until April, when Administration legislation proposing alternative subsidy aids failed of enactment, the President has made no use of this power, and there has been no intimation that he intends to do so.

Various direct ship subsidy proposals were laid before Congress last session, designed to supplant the present arrangement, and one, sponsored by Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, passed the Senate. It failed in the House, and the matter went over until next session.

Investigation Begun.

A Senate committee headed by Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), Alabama, began an investigation into ocean mail contracts in 1933. The following summer a Postoffice Department study of the $26,054,000 paid out to shipping lines the previous year in mail contracts was ordered by President Roosevelt, with a view to either "modification or cancellation."

With the exception of one contract negotiated in the Hoover Administration, and not carried out by the present regime, yesterday's "mutual consent" cancellation is the first yet consummated.

"The United Fruit Co. will continue to carry the mail and perform the service between New Orleans, Cuba, and the Canal Zone and Colombia at American poundage rates, which will be a small fraction of the contract rates," Farley said last night.

"The company assured me that its regular high-class service between the ports will be continued and will not be interrupted."

Serves Other Routes.

The United Fruit contract was executed on March 21, 1930, to run for a period of ten years from March 21, 1933, but it was indicated in one quarter that the United Fruit Co. was not anxious to retain it. Two new vessels were provided for in the contract, but extension of the time of building the ships was given to the contractor due to the unsettled state of merchant marine legislation. The two ships have never been constructed. The director of the United States Shipping Board Bureau was said to have consented to the cancellation.

Under United Fruit's other two contracts, which continue in effect, six ships have been built at a cost approximating $20,363,000, and these ships are now being operated over the routes contracted for. A Postoffice Department statement said no agreement was made as to these contracts with the company "on account of its claims for construction differential."

Postmaster General Farley's report to the President, following the department's investigation of foreign ocean mail contracts, disclosed that if mail carried over the route covered in the now canceled contract had been paid for at poundage rates, the amount received by United Fruit in the 1933 and 1934 fiscal years would have been only $32,667.99. Contract payments in the same period came to $268,837.50, the report said.

Although $544,000 in subsidy already has been paid by the Government under the contract, the company represents that it has spent $1,378,140 on reconditioning six ships operated over the route.

The Postoffice Department holds that construction requirements under the contract for two new ships are "faulty," in that they specify vessels of not less than 6,000 tons, whereas tonnage requirements for Class 4 vessels under the 1926 Merchant Marine act is 10,000 tons. Officials said the service is not over "an essential mail route."

Cancellation of the contract, Farley said, "will not affect American commerce."

$5,000,000 Coal Mine Center Threatened by Flood Waters

Johnston City, Ill., Cheers Workmen Seeking to Win Night Fight.

By the Associated Press.

Johnston City, Ill., Dec. 3.—The future of Johnston City as a coal mining center was in the balance tonight.

Two hundred men worked desperately to prevent Old Ben No. 18 Mine from being flooded by water from abandoned mines lying south of the city. The city's other mine—Franco No. 1—also was threatened.

Of the 200 workers, 170 are underground and in danger should an old fill give way suddenly and water flood the workings.

John Jones, safety engineer for Old Ben Corporation, said late today: "I don't know if it can be stopped. It all depends upon the work accomplished by the men tonight."

Water in the old workings is 50 to 100 feet higher than Old Ben 18.

Business was at a standstill. People gathered at the mine to hear reports of the progress of the work.

Roy Ligon, former mayor, and mine manager, declared it was the most serious problem Johnston City ever has faced.

"Work tonight means the very existence of the town," he said.

The Old Ben Mine employs 850 men; the Franco Mine has 550 on the payroll. Total wages of both mines last month were $106,000. Old Ben is valued at approximately $3,000,000; Franco at about $2,000,000.

U. S. Dedicates First Low-Cost HousingProject

Senator Wagner Calls Upon Private Enterprise to Shoulder Task.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 3.—A co-ordinated national housing program with private industry bearing the major expense was called for today by U. S. Senator Robert F. Wagner after Federal, State and city officials dedicated the Nation's first low-rent housing project built with Government aid.

Senator Wagner spoke at the luncheon of the National Public Housing Conference following dedication of "first houses" by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and others.

"First houses," renting at $6.05 a room, stands on a site formerly occupied by old-law tenements. Every room has a window and every apartment a bathroom. There are playrooms, ice boxes and modern kitchens in the fireproof brick buildings.

Social Value Cited.

Pointing to crime in city slums and deaths in "firetraps," Senator Wagner said:

"None of us would deny that when children on a large scale go astray, the injury that they can do to society is trivial compared to the injustice that society has perpetrated against them."

The Senator explained his housing bill to be brought before Congress. He said it provides for a Federal subsidy, but leaves the initiation and supervision of projects to localities.

"There is need of a co-ordinated housing program to assist individual effort in which private industry should bear the major part," he said.

At the dedication ceremony Mayor LaGuardia advanced the slogan, "A window in every room and sunshine in every window."

"Boondoggling Exhibit A."

Giving credit to President Roosevelt for the housing idea, the Mayor said:

"Compare this with the old system of relief. Yes, this is boondoggling Exhibit A and we're proud of it."

The crowd, made up mostly of neighboring slum dwellers, broke into cheers. "First houses" holds only 120 families.

Mrs. Roosevelt, both at the open-air meeting and the luncheon, urged a continuance of housing experiments.

"It may be a new departure for us," she said, "but we know that governments of other countries have done it for a long time successfully."

Later she said every person should learn to know what a slum is like. She suggested it would be the best way "to further this program."

Two D. C. Men Sought In Oil Deal Swindle

Oklahoma City, Dec. 3 (AP).—Fugitive notices asking arrest of two men, indicted with 12 others in an alleged $500,000 oil swindle involving Oklahoma and Texas lands, were issued today by Maurice Foster, Postal inspector here.

Thomas J. Wightman, 72, and his son, Charles Wightman, 44, both of Washington, are the two named in the notices. They are sought, Foster said, in the operation of oil royalty exchanges in New York and Washington. Indictments were returned November 1 by a District grand jury.

Lecture Is Postponed; Picture to Be Shown

A lecture by George M. Wright, of the National Park Service, which had been scheduled for tomorrow night in the Government Auditorium, Thirteenth street and Constitution avenue, has been postponed to December 19.

Earl A. Trager, chief of the Park Service's naturalist division, will present a motion-picture program on geology in the Auditorium at 8 p. m. tomorrow. This lecture will be sponsored by the Big Ten Alumni Association and the National Park Service.

Restraint Seen In New Italian Cabinet Report

2d Meeting in 4 Days Fails to Produce 'Blood and Thunder' Statements.

By the United Press.

Rome, Dec. 3.—The second Italian cabinet meeting in four days failed to produce a "blood and thunder" pronouncement from Premier Benito Mussolini, leading to belief among diplomats that Il Duce is treading lightly in order not to upset the delicate balance of European peace.

The restrained communique issued after today's two-hour session at the Palazzo Viminalle, like that of Saturday, appeared unusually significant in connection with Paris and London reports of renewed efforts to end the Italo-Ethiopian war before the proposed league oil embargo forces Italy to rash reprisal.

The cabinet, in which Il Duce holds eight of the 14 portfolios, dealt only with routine internal matters. No report on the ministries of foreign affairs, war, navy and interior was made. No date for the next cabinet meeting was set.

Restrained Attitude.

The restrained attitude was in keeping with the calmness of the press, which has ceased its bitter attacks upon Britain and other sanctionists, apparently on instruction of Mussolini, who is acting minister of propaganda.

Diplomats believe Rome is giving every encouragement to renewed efforts to compromise for peace in east Africa. Any solution which preserve Il Duce's "face" is believed assured of careful consideration.

The seven-page communique listed several minor decrees further strengthening the nation's resistance against League economic sanctions and new measures to prevent profiteering or hoarding by individuals or business firms, all providing penalties.

One decree creates an institute for research and exploitation of Italian metal mines. Another provides regulations for extraction of light oils from coal.

Independent of Imports.

All the measures were part of Mussolini's campaign to make Italy as nearly as possible independent of imports from other countries.

Diplomats were surprised by the absence of any reference to the international situation. Mussolini appeared to be leaning over backward to avoid upsetting the new peace efforts initiated by Premier Pierre Laval of France.

It was reported reliably that a governmental declaration on extension of sanctions to Italy's vital military needs might be made December 18 when the Fascist frand council meets.

The Italian restraint was in contrast with the recent attitude that extension of sanctions would mean war.

In another move to harden the nation against League measures, Il Duce today created a commission of five Parliamentary deputies—all leadng physicians or dietians—to outline a national food conservation program.

Visitors to Monument Decline in November

The number of Washington Monument visitors last month declined sharply in comparison with October's figures, according to a National Park Service report yesterday. A total of 35,161 persons went to the top in November, while the October figure was 53,263.

But the Government hastened to point out the number of visitors last month was more than 7,000 in excess of the total for November, 1934.

'Frisco Bridge Declared Greatest for 1,000 Years

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—The American Society of Mechanical Engineers was told tonight at the honor-night dinner that San Francisco has the biggest bridge that will be built for 1,000 years. C. H. Purcell, chief engineer of the administration that built the San Francisco Bay Bridge, concurred in an opinion of a Soviet engineer who said "the bridge not only is the greatest in the world, but will probably remain the greatest for 1,000 years because there is not left any body of water wider and deeper than San Francisco Bay where the traffic would justify the cost of building a structure of greater proportions." The bridge spans 4½ miles of navigable water.

New Lafayette Cocktail Room Seeking a Name

Offers Customers a Prize of $50 for Most Apt Title Suggested.

By Chanticleer.

A new cocktail room, styled in the intimate manner, is going nameless. And after all no cocktailery, particularly in such a noteworthy establishment as the Lafayette Hotel, should go without benefit of a distinctive name. So it is that Mr. Jefferson L. Ford, jr., president of the Lafayette, announces with no slight degree of pleasure a generous award for a fitting name for that hostelry's spanking new room.

Blanks on which suggestions may be made are obtainable at the hotel. The award, my fine cocktail room namers, is $50. While you're cogitating over the problem any time there, between 5 and 8 and between 10 and 1, you will be entertained with accordion and violin music and Christopher will show you how to draw six or seven aces out of a deck of cards or show you how to "pick out a card" and have it come up exactly the right number of spots.

Get in that suggestion for the new room before Friday. The contest closes then.

Venita has been doing a little work up at the Heigh-Ho. In case you don't know, Venita is a caricaturist. For several days she's been sitting on the balcony at the Heigh-Ho making caricatures of all the members of Pete Macia's' band. Yes, of Pete, too, and what a subject for a caricaturist. However, they do say that the one of Burras Williams is a wow. They'll all be on display in the main lobby in another day or two. Folks began asking for the Three Maids and Mike, heard at the Heigh-Ho last season—so Pete brings them back tonight.

That fellow Lew Fink is back at the La Paree. He's the "human vacuum cleaner" gentleman who puts little aches in your innards from laughing at his foolishness. As an expert in pantomime, Fink can take on all comers without much fear of serious competition. There's that wrestling match, for example. Backing up the show is a chorus of six gals . . . and featured are Villano and Loma in South American tangos. Emory Daugherty and his ork for the dancing.

Those who prefer a bit of cocktail in the Club Volga Boatman nook are being recognized by Matt Windsor. Every afternoon a few of the stars from the floor show upstairs drop down to entertain the ladies and gentlemen of the nook. That's between 3 and 6. And it's an old Russian custom. With a little persuasion Matt will play a solo or two at the organ.

Don and Doresse, featuring the Continental and the rhumba, are on view at Maryland Club Gardens this week. They've just come to these wintry precincts after a long tour of the West Indies and South America, doing their routines in European fashion. Fran, the Old Accordion Man, fills in with incidental music between dance groups by Jimmy Harris and the band.

Sasha Bartnovsky, who directs the band at the Russian Troika and plays piano there, is a strange figure to find turning out melody in a night club. He's held by many musicians to be the foremost authority in America on European and Oriental folk music. He has a decided talent for orchestrations, supplying many arrangements to the A. & P. Gypsies. And to top it off, he's a composer. Withal, Sasha knows the latest scat songs and—well, try to stump him with a request number. (Sasha, by the way, is a nickname for Alexander, in Russian.)

It's going to be "Movie Night" at the Shoreham Friday night—and in a big way. All in all, it sounds like one of the better innovations of the season. Movies actually will be made—of individuals as well as of the dancing. Stills will be developed for those wanting them. How screen tests are made will be demonstrated. An expert make-up man will show how the stars get ready for the camera's pitlyless eye. It all is being done with the assistance of skilled movie directors from New York flicker studios. Oh, yes, a prize goes to the deb who does the best imitation of a star. All of which is in addition to the regular floor show headed by Tom Barron and Jane Lane.

They're still talking about the "gentleman from Mississippi" at the Club Habana. He had been celebrating all evening and suddenly decided, as Bert Granoff began "Treasure Island," that he was the composer of that ditty. In fact he decided, as the composer, to sing a chorus with Bert. But no one seemed to co-operate, so he finally took the matter up with the 200-pound doorman. "I'm terribly sorry, suh," explained the doorman, "but it's agin the rules for me to sing." That was the last straw. And with a generous tip to the doorman he withdrew—leaving behind the mean little thought that possibly—just possibly—he really was the composer.

Yvonne Lane is highlighting the week at the Madrillon—with a versatile round of accomplishments—tap, acrobatic, contortion and control dancing. Johnny Barnes is held over. Johnny is something of a tap dancer himself. Mme. Delza features "Speak to Me of Love," in her native French, and Ann Sultana takes a lot of bows following her interpretative Spanish and Portuguese peasant dances. Leon Brusiloff, of the Manassas Brusiloffs, and his gang for the dancing.

Vera Miller—blond and with well-placed dimples—comes to Childs' Gingham Club this week. Vera is a toe tap artist. Don and Dolores remain for a second week in a ballroom routine and with Dolores featured in an Indian war dance (whoopee!). Phil Lynch and his orchestra for the dancing.

It's Parker Brothers and Lynn at the Dude Ranch this week. Lynn has devised a remarkable dance novelty—she dances on buckets in wooden shoes, a Dutch motif. Ann, you'll remember, was the little Hula Hula girl at the Dude Ranch not long ago. Which just goes to prove that love finds you one place or another.

On the Air Today

MONDAY night might well have been termed "Mexican night" on the airways. Programs from across the Rio Grande came booming into Washington with the strength and clarity of local stations. And not the least interesting was the nightly contribution of Dr. Richards, who sees all and cures all. Dr. Richards entertains from the Mexican station across the river from Eagle Pass, Tex.

If you want to know whether to change jobs, have your appendix removed, marry Jimmy or Joe; why Aunt Minnie has trouble with Uncle Tom, whether you will move out of town within the year—or any other little item of personal affairs, just write Dr. Richards and he'll give you an answer. All very amazing!

One's first wave of wonderment is concerned with the personal risk the "doctor" takes in giving such forthright answers. He minces no words in describing personalities (connected with the problems presented) in highly uncomplimentary language if he feels, apparently, that the situation warrants. Doubtless this is inspired as much in the interests of showmanship as anything else.

Ultimately, however, the seriousness of possible results following his easy advice gives way to a tongue-in-the-cheek attitude of receptivity. Obviously the "doctor" is expecting the intelligent listener to accept his act as a piece of sideshow artistry. Perhaps he has a macabre sense of humor which is gratified by advising Harriet to marry Jim, not Joe, having no way of determining with which boy she should begin married life. Perhaps he just figures Harriet will marry one or the other despite anything anyone would say.

The "doctor's" mail is received at Eagle Pass. Inasmuch as the United States Government has frowned on such programs as his within the boundaries of this country it was interesting to note that apparently, so long as the station's transmitter and studios were on Mexican soil, the postal address of a city within the continental confines of this country could be used.

A call to the offices of the Federal Communications Commission produced the interesting information that no action could be taken in the case of the "doctor's operations unless a charge of injury or fraud or some such were filed with the United States authorities. Interesting because it is prima facie evidence that no damage yet has been done in advising the public on matters of the heart, health and home. Shades of the old "Doc" Brinkley station.

The Washington radio public responded nobly to the announcement that the Corbin Hollow log school, down near Skyland, Va., would like to have a battery set. The first offer came from E. F. Mitchell, of the National Rifle Association, in the Barr building. I have notified R. Roy Brown, of the Shenandoah Park service, who called the school's case to my attention, that the set can be picked up at Mr. Mitchell's office. And I want to take this opportunity to thank others who offered battery sets. I just wish I could be on hand when some of those little hill-billies, who never have heard a radio in operation, hear their first program.

Bids Are Opened For Zoo Buildings

Elephants and Apes Will Get New Domiciles.

Bids for the construction of an elephant house, a house for great apes and small mammals and an addition to the bird house, all at National Zoological Park, were opened yesterday by the procurement division of the Treasury Department.

The structure, which will house the chimpanzee, orang-utan and small mammals, will have facilities for artificial moonlight, in deference to the nocturnal rodents, which will be among its inhabitants. Low bid, $257,000, was submitted by the George Hyman Construction Co.

The Zoo's three elephants and the hippopotami will be the principal occupants of the great pachyderm house, on which the low bidder was the Harwood-Nebel Construction Co., $280,600. Charles H. Tompkins Co. offered the lowest figure for construction of the birdhouse addition, $14,200.

All three projects, as well as the garage and machine shop on which bids were opened recently, will be built with PWA funds.

Basin to Get Holly Trees.

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital parks, yesterday announced he has recommended the award of contracts aggregating $15,000 for planting in the city's park system and the furnishing of holly trees, which will fringe the Tidal Basin.

Mrs. M'Arthur Called by Death In Manila Hotel

Mother of Former Chief of Staff Had Been Ill Two Months.

Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, sr., mother of the former chief of staff of the United States Army, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, died yesterday at Manila, P. I., the Associated Press reported.

The China Clipper, giant ocean air transport that recently completed an historic flight to the islands, carried a special medicine for Mrs. MacArthur. But the ship arrived too late for the medicine to benefit the 82-year-old woman, who was widely known in Army circles in the Capital.

Mrs. MacArthur had been ill in her hotel suite since she arrived in Manila two months ago to be with her son, who is military adviser of the commonwealth government of the Philippines.

Mrs. MacArthur was the former Mary Hardy. She was born in Norfolk, Va., in 1853. Her husband was the late Maj. Gen. Arthur MacArthur, former military governor of the Philippines.

Col. Gillem Rites To Be Held Today

Services to Take Place at Fort Myer Gate.

Funeral service for Col. Alvan C. Gillem, U. S. Army, retired, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today in Arlington Cemetery. Military honors will be rendered from the Fort Myer gate. Chaplain Ralph Delbert will officiate.

The following Cavalry officers will act as honorary pallbearers: Maj. Gen. Leon B. Kromer, chief of Cavalry; Cols. A. M. Miller, C. L. Scott, George Grunert; Lieut. Cols. H. M. Estes and R. E. Carmody.

Col. Gillem died in Chicago Friday. A native of Tennessee, he first saw service in the Spanish-American War. He was awarded the Silver Star decoration "for gallantry in action against hostile Villistas at Tomochic, Mexico, April 22, 1916." During the World War he served as a colonel of cavalry.

Col. Gillem's widow, Mrs. Jane Gillem, resides in Chicago, and a son, Lieut. Col. Alvan Gillem, jr., infantry, is stationed at Fort Benning, Ga.

Funeral Service Today For Centerville Student

Funeral services for Willie Cross, 17-year-old president of the junior class at Centerville (Va.) High School, who died Monday night of infantile paralysis, will be held at 1 p. m. today at the Centerville Episcopal Cemetery.

Willie, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard C. Cross, of Centerville, also was vice president of the high school student council. He is survived by his parents and three brothers—Cecil, of Alexandria, and Edward and James Cross, of near Centerville.

Mason Morris, Prominent Elk, Is Stricken Fatally on Street

Was a Brother-in-Law of Police Inspector Edward Kelly.

Mason Morris, 61, brother-in-law of Police Inspector Edward J. Kelly and an uncle of Precinct Detective John Baker, died of a heart attack yesterday while walking on G street northwest, between New Hampshire and Virginia avenues.

Mr. Morris had been employed by the Works Progress Administration as a foreman in charge of relief workers in the parks. He was a sheet metal worker by trade and a prominent member of the Washington local of the sheet metal workers union and of the Washington Lodge of Elks.

Members of the Elks lodge will hold special services for Mr. Morris at 8 o'clock tonight in the Gawler funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, where funeral services will be conducted tomorrow at 10 a. m. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Surviving, in addition to Mrs. Kelly, are his wife, Mrs. Bertha Morris; another sister, Mrs. Walter Watts; a brother, John A. Morris, and a niece, Mrs. Frank Gartside, all of Washington.

Mrs. Gilliland Is Dead at 84 In Montgomery

Watched With Lincoln as Jubal Early Tried to Raid Capital.

Mrs. Alice McChesney Gilliland, one of the oldest residents of Montgomery County, who remembered standnig with her father and President Lincoln watching the progress of Jubal Early's march on the city during the War Between the States, died late Monday at her home, 9105 Connecticut avenue, North Chevy Chase, Md. She was 84 years old.

Born in 1851, she was the daughter of John Henry and Mary Elizabeth McChesney. In her youth she attended the old Rockville and Brookville Academies. Until her marriage to James Cowden Gilliland in 1883, she lived in Washington, where her father conducted a general merchandise store on the site of the Brightwood Bank. She was one of the charter members of the Emory M. E. Church South in Brightwood, where she taught Sunday school as a young girl.

Surviving her are two daughters, Laura McChesney Gilliland, prominent in Democratic circles in the county and in the D. A. R., and Mary Elizabeth Gilliland; a sister, Mrs. Kate Swart, and a brother, John Henry McChesney, both of Washington.

Funeral services will be conducted at her home tomorrow at 11 a. m. by the Rev. Fred Kullman, pastor of the Warner Memorial Presbyterian Church, of which Mrs. Gilliland had been a member for 40 years. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Funeral Rites Today For W. R. Hunnicut

Funeral services for William R. Hunnicut, 77, employe of the National Electric & Supply Co., living at 332 Tenth street northeast, who died Sunday of a heart attack, will be held today at the Deal funeral home at 11 a. m., to be followed by burial in Alexandria.

Hunnicut, who came here in 1900 from Danville, Va., where he was born, is survived by his brother, J. P. Hunnicut; a sister, Mrs. Ellen Woodward, of Danville, and a niece, Mrs. John F. Mayhugh.

Chest Achievement On U. S. Honor Roll

D. C. Listed Among Those Breaking 1934 Record.

Washington was listed yesterday as among cities in which gifts to the Community Chest this year exceeded those of 1934. Allen T. Burns, executive vice president of Community Chests and Councils, Inc., declared early reports from 133 cities showed an average increase of 5 per cent.

With last-minute reports still to be received, Washington pledges to the chest this year were $1,720,000 or 6 per cent more than the $1,629,516 raised last year.

Herbert L. Willett, jr., chest director, pointed out the campaign here, despite the 6 per cent increase, fell $150,000 short of its goal. "This goal," he said, "was based on the minimum requirements of the 65 chest agencies. We know there are a lot of people who weren't reached in the campaign and we hope as many of them as possible will contribute yet so the clients of all our agencies will suffer as little hardship as possible."

John Griffith, Veteran of D. C. Theater, Dead

Former Manager of Noted Playhouses Will Be Buried Today.

Funeral services for John B. Griffith, 73, widely known in theatrical circles here for many years, will be held in Hysong's undertaking establishment today at 2 p. m., followed by burial in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mr. Griffith, superintendent of the old Kernan's Theater, died Monday at his home, 412 Tenth street, after a lingering illness. For a time he managed the old Chase's Theater, and later Keith's.

His life in the theater was from the gay 80's until 1911, those days and nights when the legitimate stage was the principal fountain of entertainment, and his acquaintance among the greats and near-greats of his period was wide.

Mr. Griffith founded the U. S. Storage Co., but many years ago sold his interest.

A native of Green Spring, Va., Mr. Griffith was a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, of Hiram Lodge of Masons, and of Bethlehem Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star.

Surviving Mr. Griffith are two sons, John A. and H. Ernst Griffith, both of Washington; a sister, Mrs. Henrietta Cooper, of Winchester, Va.; a brother, Newton Griffith, of Washington; 11 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Nobel Prizewinner Dies.

Paris, Dec. 9 (AP).—Prof. Charles Richet, French physiologist who won a Nobel prize in 1913, died today at the age of 85. M. Richet was a professor of medicine and a member of the French Academy of Medicine and the Academy of Sciences. He also was a commander of the Legion of Honor and the author of numerous books and plays.

Part of Shelter-Belt Doomed, Says Board

By the United Press.

An indirect slap at the once heralded shelter-belt of trees to prevent Midwest dust storms was contained in an appendix to the science advisory board report made public last night.

Dr. Isaiah Bowman, vice chairman of the board and president of Johns Hopkins University, said that tree plantings in the western part of the selected belt apparently were doomed to failure.

"The operations of tree planting in this zone will be limited by a number of factors, of which rainfall is one," Dr. Bowman said.

"Tree-plantings toward the eastern margin of the shelter-belt are more likely to succeed (if favorable sites are selected) and those near its western margin are more likely to fail. Some experimental plantings in the best sites near the western margin and even well beyond it show, however, that local success is possible on that margin."

Infant Japanese Prince Is Christened in Tokyo

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Tokyo (Wednesday), Dec. 4.—The infant son born to Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako last week today was named Masahito Yoshi No Miya.

Japan's baby prince, born at 7:57 a. m. November 28, was christened in strange Oriental ceremonies which date back to the mythical age of the Goddess of the Sun, Amaterasu Omikami. Tokyo was beflagged for the event and throngs crowded the great, park-like plaza in front of the moat-encircled Chiyoda Castle, imperial residence in the heart of the capital, this morning.

Last Rites Today For Henry Andrews

Kendall Firm Officer Was Killed by Automobile.

Funeral services for Henry W. Andrews, 67, of 3603 New Hampshire avenue northwest, will be held today at the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, at 3:30 p. m. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery. The Rev. Dr. Bernard Braskamp, pastor of Gunton Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, will officiate.

Mr. Andrews, a native of Washington, was vice president of the J. B. Kendall Co., iron product dealers, and was associated with that company for more than 50 years. He was killed by an automobile Monday.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Rose N. Andrews, a son John, and a daughter, Frances.

C. V. Ireton, Navy Clerk, Dies in His 81st Year

Charles V. Ireton, 80, retired stenographer of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, Navy Department, died Monday at his home at 1916 Seventeenth street northwest. He was born in Lancaster, Pa.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Cora May Ireton, and a daughter, Mrs. George C. Dewey, of Selby, Calif. Funeral services and interment will be at Mansfield, Pa.

A. V. Hogan Dies After Long Illness

Arthur V. Hogan, 53, life-long resident of Gaithersburg, Md., and employe of the local telephone exchange, died yesterday after a long illness in Georgetown Hospital. He was formerly employed at the First National Bank of Gaithersburg.

He is survived by his wife, manager of the telephone exchange, and Gaithersburg correspondent of The Washington Post, and by a daughter, Helen Hogan.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. from his residence. They will be conducted by Rev. John J. Callaghan, former pastor of St. Martin's Catholic Church in Gaithersburg. Burial will be in Forest Oak Cemetery.

Drive for Toys Begun for Poor Children Here

vidual appeals made directly to The Post.

New toys, used toys still serviceable, as well as donations of money—large or small—will be acceptable for The Post Toy and Doll Fund.

Every dollar sent in will be used completely for the purchase of toys, as all overhead charges in connection with assembling the toys will be borne by The Post.

Three Weeks Remain.

As only three weeks remain until Christmas, it is urged that all who wish to contribute Christmas joy to some child send in their gifts at once. The gift will be received at the office of The Post for the present.

Already appeals are coming to The Post from mothers and children whose homes in past years have been made happier.

Yesterday the forlorn mother of an 11-year-old girl called at The Post to request that her child's name be placed on the list of those who receive toys.

The mother said that her work brings only enough money for her and the girl to exist. There is nothing left over for Christmas.

Relief Money Unavailable.

Attention is called to the fact that none of the funds alloted to Washington organizations for welfare or relief work can be used for purchase of toys.

Thus the needy children of Washington must depend upon the hearts and purses of men, women and children more fortunately situated.

A canvass by social workers has indicated that more children than ever before must look to private aid for Christmas toys.

Boys and girls whose own Christmas gifts are assured are reminded that their toys and dolls of past Christmases will bring joy to others if they send them to The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund.

Adm. Tamm and Wife Honor Guests at Party

Counselor of Swedish Legation and Baroness Beck-Friis Entertain at Home for the Commander in Chief of Their Monarch's Navy.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

An informal cocktail party was given yesterday by the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Baroness Beck-Friis in honor of the former's brother-in-law and sister, Admiral and Baroness Tamm, who are spending some time in Washington before going to the West Coast. Admiral Tamm is commander in chief of the Royal Swedish Navy and will attend the fleet maneuvers when in California. The home of Baron and Baroness Beck-Friis on Thirty-fourth place is a hospitable house, and yesterday a bright fire burned in the hearth to welcome guests in from the cold. Baroness Beck-Friis wore an afternoon gown of black velvet simply made, and Baroness Tamm was also in black with a small hat of black velvet.

Miss Christine Beck-Friis, daughter of the hosts, was present in a black frock trimmed at neckline and wrists with sheer white.

Greets Old Friends.

Many of the guests had met the distinguished guests of honor before, and tall Admiral Tamm was delighted to greet again naval officers he had met during his visit here and some few he had known before.

The Acting Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Joseph K. Taussig were among those present, the admiral greeting friends on all sides and Mrs. Taussig wearing a smart black frock trimmed with touches of bright blue with a wide-brimmed hat to match. The Commandant of the Washington Navy Yard and Mrs. Joseph Defrees also were present, and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land.

Among naval attaches from various embassies and legations present were the Naval Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. F. C. Bradley, the latter in black because of the four weeks' official mourning for the sister of King George; the Assistant Naval Attache and Mrs. A. L. P. Mark-Wardlaw, the Italian Naval Attache and the Marchioness Sant' Orsola, the German Naval Attache, Rear Admiral Robert Wittoeft-Emden; diplomats in numbers including the Charge d'Affaires of Poland and Mme. Sokolowska, the latter in a gown of deep red crepe with a smart black hat; the Charge d'Affaires of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Mme. Skvirsky, the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, the latter wearing a frock of black embroidered in bright colors, and a small black hat trimmed with bright green.

Minister MacWhite Host.

The Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite, who entertained at dinner last evening in their apartment at the Shoreham; the Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Florescu, and the Financial Counselor of the Legation and Mme. Noncesco, the latter just returned from a week in New York; the Minister of Denmark, Mr. Otto Wadsted, who will go to New York shortly to meet Mme. Wadsted and their small son, Otto Gustavo, who have been lingering in Europe; the Minister of Iran and Mme. Djalal, just back from New York; the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph W. Close, the Minister of Norway and Mme Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Minister of Bulgaria and Mme. Petroff, the latter wearing black trimmed with bright red.

Mrs. Harold Sims, wife of the Attache of the British Embassy, was there in a gown of black velvet with an off-the-face hat of black; Mrs. F. Wilkinson Bunker, also in black, with a halo hat to match trimmed with Persian lamb; the Commandant of Bowling Field and Mrs. "Mike" Scanlon, who are so soon to leave for London, where the former will assume his duties as military attache, Mrs. Scanlon wearing a suit of wine colored woolen with an ascot scarf of white, red and black stripes and a felt hat to match the suit.

Mrs. Whitten in Black.

Mrs. Francis A. Whitten, wearing a black frock with a turban of Roman-striped velvet, and a swagger coat of dark mink; Mrs. C. C. Glover, jr., arriving very late, and being greeted as an early dinner guest, though she wore a frock of brown knitted silk with a beige blouse and a brown hat; Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, who will entertain at a dance next week for their debutante daughter, Miss Angelica Lloyd. Mrs. Lloyd wore a frock of black with a blouse of bright scarlet and a small black hat.

Others glimpsed were Miss Anne Randolph in a frock of steel lame and a black hat; Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Capt. W. W. Galbraith, the Agricultural Secretary of the Spanish Embassy and Senor de Echegarary, Maj. and Mrs. George Oakley Totten, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Norment, Mrs. William McClellan Ritter, and Mrs. Chester A. Snow, jr.

Perfume Lamp Is a Different Idea for Gift

Smart Tourist Bags of Fine Quality Featured in F Street Store.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

NO MATTER how impregnable your shopping armor is to bargains it's bound to give way a bit for the perfume lamps in a local store. They look like little gems! They're tiny cutglass things that glisten with a hundred colorful lights. A small indentation in the top is just large enough for a drop of perfume. As the globe inside (and it's a minute affair) heats the glass, the perfume slowly evaporates and waves of fragrance float about the room.

If you're a hostess who dreads the smell of stale cigarettes, or if you want to eclipse any intruding cooking smells, then do try the perfume lamp way. It works to a T. You'll enjoy the lamp, too. It gives out just the right amount of light to brighten up a dark and gloomy corner.

Here's an ideal suggestion for a Christmas gift that's different! Price, $1 and up.

Tourist Bags Featured.

FOR THOSE who plan to take brief trips during the holiday season, there are the extra specially smart tourist bags featured in an F street store. These are made of an excellent quality of moire and lined with a durable rubber. They are fitted with two jars and two bottles, and there's still room left over.

These are available in stripes and checks and a grand assortment of colors. Price? $1.

Quaint Vanity Cases.

LOOKING for all the world like old-fashioned ladies' watches are the vanity cases in a local store. They are decidedly quaint and have garbs of appeal for those who like lightweight, small and loose powder compacts.

Although they cost only 69 cents your initials are engraved free of charge.

If your Christmas list is still incomplete, then here's a grand inexpensive item that's sure of a hearty welcome from someone.

Scarf and Pin Sets.

ISN'T IT WONDERFUL all that a dollar can buy these days? For example—the scarf and pin sets, shown in a downtown store. The scarfs alone are quite irresistible, and plus the sporty wooden monogram pins that come with them—well, there's just no escaping!

Whatever color you need to brighten up your winter coat, you're sure to find it in a scarf. They're in a wide variety of new fall shades that will do wonders for your costume.

Boudoir Compacts.

THE BOUDOIR compacts are scarcely larger than the ordinary handbag variety, but they are made expressly for perching on your dressing table.

You open the top—it folds back—and there's a little round mirror. In the tray section, there are lipstick, rouge and powder!

These are ideal for the woman who has a small dressing table and hates to clutter it up with a variety of beautifiers.

They are very ornamental little things made in a dull silvery metal, cast in a charming and rich design.

Swiss Weather Prophets.

IT'S ALMOST as good as having the weather man right in your own home to have one of the Swiss weather prophets shown in the notions department of a local store.

These are quaint little cottages with a thatched roof. In one doorway you'll see Hansel and Gretel and in the other the wicked old witch. Along one side of the porch is a thermometer. When it's going to rain, Hansel and Gretel stay in the cottage, and the witch comes out. But when foul weather is going to give way to fair, out come the little boy and girl, and in goes the old lady.

VARIETY MENU for TODAY

Light Breakfast Is Unwise in Winter, Especially for Growing Child.

By Dorothea Duncan.

A LIGHT breakfast, especially in cold weather, is nutritionally unsound, for it does not offer enough nourishment to last through the morning. Toast, coffee and fruit juice may be sufficient for the adult in warm weather, especially if an adequate luncheon and dinner follows through the course of the day, but it is never enough for the growing child.

It is not necessary, however, always to serve a breakfast as heavy as the one suggested in today's menus. Where there are children it is wise to include at least cereal and toast, fruit and milk. Eggs may be worked into the dinner or luncheon meal more readily than cereal and are therefore placed on the optional list for breakfast.

Meat Once a Day.

Meat once a day is sufficient for persons on a normal diet. The rest of the protein necessary for the maintenence of the body is found in other sources—cheese, milk, eggs, etc. Bacon, however, with its sweet, smoky flavor is a favorite breakfast dish. Though a meat it contains far less protein than the other meats and is therefore frequently included at the breakfast table when eggs are served.

If you would have evenly browned, crisp slices of bacon try cooking then in the following manner: Simply place a single layer of bacon slices in a cool skillet, and let them cook slowly, turning frequently to insure even cooking. It is especially important that the bacon be cooked slowly, as a high temperature causes bacon fat to smoke, which is undesirable, since smoking fat is burning fat. It is also advisable to pour off the fat as it accumulates.

After bacon is removed from the frying pan, part of the fat is frequently used in preparing scrambled eggs, since they make such a desirable combination with bacon.

Wives Need Allowance, Says Budget Expert; Discord Prevention Stressed.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Money quarrels are the rock on which most marriages are wrecked, believes Mrs. Sonja Wallace, banking official here, who specializes in household-budget work.

Mrs. Wallace lays down two main rules—one for husbands and one for wives—in the avoidance of money disputes. "Don't be too gullible," she advises women. "Don't be too easily sold." To men she gives this warning: "Don't keep your hand only on the purse strings. Give your wives allowances."

Most families, Mrs. Wallace believes, have little idea of how to budget and handle money. They expend it on a hit-and-miss basis, and family discord results.

Besides knowng how to budget, every wife should have a knowledge of the value of goods, Mrs. Wallace maintains. This will prevent her wasting money on fake "bargains."

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

OUR PRESCRIPTION for most of the worries of running a house is to sit you down once in a while in the midst of the maelstrom and do a little crocheting or knitting. It's a great cure for nerves and jitters . . . and, incidentally, a way to get pretty things made for the house.

We don't think much of a good many afghans we've seen in our day, but there most certainly are some lovely designs to make now . . . really flowery dainty ones that fit deliciously into a charming bedroom. Or others more after the Indian motifs that will appeal to the men in the family. Even modern designs are shown in some of the afghan patterns, too.

For a room that's mostly in blues and pinks, for instance, an afghan with garden flowers in the pattern and some black in the ground gives a smart accent to the decorations. Or for a room in yellows and browns, try an afghan that is predominantly turquoise in color. One room we know about has white walls and a soft green rug . . . and the rest of the details repeat the white and green notes. A big afghan for the foot of the bed in predominantly coral tones is exactly the right note to pull the composition of the room together.

What a Woman Wears and Weaves in Peru

MRS. PAUL G. LEDIG,
who with her husband spent five years in "Llama Land" and brought back a rare collection of Peruvian arts and crafts, some native costumes, and a store of colorful memories that she has translated into talks given before numerous Washington audiences.

Peruvian Families' Thrift Impresses Mrs. Paul Ledig

Children Share Duties at Early Age, She Says on Return From 5-Year Stay; Arts, Crafts Go on View Tomorrow.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

COMMON TO PEOPLE in every nation is the travel-loving spirit that sends the intrepid to far points of the globe and glorifies the Lowell Thomases and the Richard Halliburtons to more care-shackled persons who must satisfy their curiosity vicariously.

But it was more than what the Germans call "wanderlust" and the Americans call "itching heels" that sent Mrs. Paul G. Ledig to Peru to live for five years. She went with her husband, who was in charge of the observatory of the Carnegie Institution.

What she and her husband brought back from that country is much more than a collection of souvenirs the transient wayfarer might buy; and what she reports of women and their ways in the country of the Andes is notably more than an ordinary series of traveler's tales.

An exhibit of Peruvian arts and crafts brought back by the Ledigs will open tomorrow afternoon at the National Museum, under the auspices of George Washington University and the Carnegie Institution.

Yesterday, however, busy as she was getting the exhibit ready, Mrs. Ledig found a few minutes to tell something of the women and children of Peru—their responsibilities and their importance in a country where the conflict between the new and old is so apparent.

In contrast to the average mother in the United States, who shields her daughter from hardships as long as possible, Peruvian women train their offspring to share duties at an early age. As she discussed this, Mrs. Ledig limited her comments largely to the Indians and the cholas (half breeds), emphasizing that what she said of the Indians was not generally true of the Spaniards in Peru.

"The typical Peruvian is, first of all, a skillful spinner," she explained. "Girls begin to learn how to spin when they are about 5. A year or two later, they are dependable workers at home and in the fields—helping to herd sheep, load the llamas, pick cotton, weave, cook, and take care of younger brothers and sisters."

She also pointed out that they begin carrying burdens slung across their backs almost as soon as they can walk. "The chief strength of the Peruvians seems to be in their backs," she continued. "Even the llama, the typical animal of Peru, carries its load like a saddle, not in panniers used with donkeys."

She further explained that the typical shawl worn by women is called the quepie (pronounced 'keep-ee' and used to keep everything) is tied under the chin and hangs like a bag at the back. "In this the Peruvian woman bears every type of burden from her baby to market products—painted gourds, pottery, bead work and wood carving."

There are, in fact, "three things from which the Indian woman is virtually inseparable: her hat (sometimes a Panama, less frequently, a felt formerly worn by her husband), her shawl and her baby," according to Mrs. Ledig. "The shawl is worn indoors and out," she said. "The Indian woman is equally attached to her skirts. If she lives far in the interior, she never changes her skirts until they are threadbare. She simply dons new ones over the old as fast as she can acquire them."

Discussing the arts and crafts of the cholos and the chunchos, (the latter live in the jungle) Mrs. Ledig said that like the aborigines of our own Southwest, the Indians of the Peruvian plateau are capable pottery makers "with an astounding appreciation of color and skill at design;" that they weave thousands of Panama hats each year; that knitted dolls are a great feature of some markets, while others specialize in selling painted gourds and intricately designed and woven blankets and scarfs with designs reminiscent of the ancient Inca arts; and that vases made by Peruvian silversmiths ("who are always men, never women") are models of beauty and rare craftsmanship.

While she declined to discuss at length the Spanish women of Peru, she did mention that many of them are demanding greater freedom and are beginning to take their places in the business and professional world; that there are numerous women teachers, stenographers and typists in the cities, and that in increasing numbers women are enrolling in the University of San Marcos, one of the oldest institutions in America, founded a century before Harvard.

Correspondent Would Consult a Psychiatrist if Means Would Permit.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Your column is certainly great. It must do all serious-minded readers worlds of good. I enjoy it thoroughly. You have occasionally suggested to correspondents that consultation with a psychiatrist might help them solve their problem. It has been my impression that psychiatrists in general are extremely expensive. Will you please tell me one whom I could consult without wrecking the family budget? Sincerely yours, V. S.

• • • •

DEAR V. S.: I regret not being able to give you the direct answer to your question, but it is not the policy of this column to recommend specific private practitioners to any correspondents. However, it is my understanding that all reputable medical men are sufficiently humanitarian to adjust their fees to suit the purses of deserving patients.

• • • •

Persons who need psychiatric counsel and are without means to pay for it are eligible to apply to the Washington Life Adjustment Center, 1410 Columbia road, northwest, for help. The telephone number there is ADams 7979.

• • • •

On the staff of this clinic are psychiatrists, neurologists, psychologists and psychiatric social workers of recognized standing in their various professions who give their services without remuneration other than the satisfaction they may derive from helping persons who are in need of their counsel. The person who can pay, and is willing to pay a modest fee for such services could no doubt obtain from this clinc the name of one or several peychiatrists who might be willing to take his case. M. H.

Children Provided For.

DEAR MISS HAYWORTH: Such a wonderful thing has happened to us through you . . . the answer to my children's need of warm clothing to keep them in school this winter. I feel that my family and I can never thank you enough for your kindness in printing my letter, which resulted in bringing us such happiness. Shortly after I wrote to you I was taken ill with such a severe cold that I had to be in bed more than a week and as I had not told my family I had written, I did not know the letter had been printed until today, when I received the wonderful response I speak of. I am much better now and am back at work again . . . I had to let you know how much you helped and how much it means to us . . . Sincerely yours,

RURAL READER.

DEAR RURAL READER: The simple dignity with which you stated your need was largely responsible for bringing the response which makes you and your family of seven children so happy. ". . . I like the way her letter reads," is the concluding statement in a letter I have from one of those who responded so promptly to your appeal. M. H.

Kind Readers Are Thanked.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I want to thank you for your aid in helping me secure a coat for a dependent woman invalid. As a result of your publishing my letter in your column November 8 I got just the coat she wanted and needless to say she is very, very grateful for the kindly interest displayed by so many nice people.

• • • •

I was unable to get in touch with some of the women whose names appeared on the list of volunteer contributors you mailed me, and I am wondering if it would be asking too much of you to print a little note of thanks in your column? It is indeed a pleasure to know there are so many kind-hearted people living in Washington and vicinity. Again thanking you and the others a thousand times, I am, sincerely yours, MRS. W.

• • • •

DEAR MRS. W.: Thank you for your letter. I wish to join with you and your beneficiary in expressing profound appreciation of the generous response warm-hearted readers accorded your published request for a winter wrap for the unfortunate woman who has lost husband, daughter, health and income.

• • • •

In furnishing you the list of telephone numbers or names of those kindly disposed persons who wished to alleviate her need, I had hoped each one would receive your assurance that his proffer had been duly forwarded, if not accepted. It is unfortunate you could not get in touch with all. Let's hope this acknowledgment will suffice. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Lung Abscess Menace Calls For Safeguard

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

SOME of us will take care of our colds. Others will not, and as a result there will probably be a sizable increase in the number of cases of influenza, pneumonia, and other types of lung infections. We must recognize also the possibility that inflammation of the pleura or of the lung itself may lead to the formation of abscesses. If pus collects between the two pleural layers we call the condition empyema. If it forms within the substance of the lung it is usually termed a lung abscess.

Following pneumonia the temperature may be normal for a few days, when there may be a characteristic rise—low in the morning and high in the late afternoon. Under such circumstances we may assume infection somewhere, possibly an abscess within the lung itself. If, in addition, the patient coughs up foul-smelling pus the diagnosis is practically certain. In order to locate the abscess accurately, however, a careful X-ray examination is essential.

Sometimes lung abscesses are confused with stretched spaces in the small bronchial tubes [bronchiectasis]. Dilated bronchi may develop after a long-standing irritation of the bronchial tubes, which is usually attended with a chronic cough. The walls of the tubes become weakened and stretching occurs in part as the result of pressure due to coughing. Later bacteria gain entrance to the deep areas of the lungs and abscesses may form.

Why do some patients develop lung abscesses? In the main it is a question of body resistance or the state of the health. But what constitutes good health? The answer is that those individuals who take good care of the body, who regard it at least as worthy of attention as an automobile, are usually better able to resist disease.

Bacteria enter the lungs and the intestinal tract largely through the mouth. If the mouth is dirty, filled with decayed teeth, or is bathed in pus as the result of pyorrhea; if tonsils are diseased, so many depots of bacteria are placed directly at the entrance to the lungs that they cannot fail to reach the delicate respiratory tissues.

Intemperance Among Women Is Disputed

Mrs. Mason, D. C. Board Member, Cites Openness of Cocktail Hour.

By Mal J. Stuart.*

DURING the last few years, women have been the scapegoats for the withering of social values, the decline of the family and the sweep of unemployment. "Cherchez la femme" has, in truth, become a cherished American maxim during a troublous period. Now it is whispered that if the country turns back to prohibition, it will be because women have abused the drinking privilege!

There are no statistics to prove that women drink more than men, or more than they did during pre-prohibition days. Tax returns on liquor for 1935 were over $70,000,000 less than in 1919, when men are reputed to have had a monopoly on the consumption of distilled spirits. Although operators of bars in the District insist there are three women to every man in their cocktail rooms, they cannot say three women drink more, or even as much, as two men.

The Alcohol Control Board of the District doesn't compile two sets of figures, one for men and one for women, in its yearly report on "arrests for intoxication." However, Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, the only woman member of that board, says that as far as she has been able to observe there hasn't been any trouble with women.

New Viewpoint on Drinking.

"Women aren't drinking more than they did before prohibition," she said. "They're just drinking in public where people can see them.

"Women drink in public because of a change in viewpoint on the whole scheme of life. It breeds good fellowship and a wholesome conviviality."

Vigorously she defended women from any charge of an intemperance that would impel the "repeal of repeal." "For prohibition is not temperance," she asserted. "You can't get reform by saying 'Thou shalt not.' You've got to do it by education. We're all after the goal of temperance. Women can take the lead, not only by maintaining moderation themselves, but by warning their children of the danger in excessive drinking."

Increase In Co-operation.

Mrs. Mason said she doesn't know much about the "social side of drinking," never being free to attend the cocktail hour, and concentrating more upon the fact-finding and judicial procedure that make up the activities of the A. C. Board. She noted that since its inception in February, 1934, there has been a marked decrease in the number of arrests for intoxication and an increase in public co-operation in enforcing a liberal liquor control law.

"The District of Columbia has one of the sanest liquor laws in the country," she said. "Conditions here have improved 100 per cent since repeal."

An ardent defender of the drinking privilege—she particularly noted that drinking is not one of the inalienable rights—Mrs. Mason was chosen member of the District board for the determination and competence she displayed in her drive for repeal, as chairman of the District Woman's National Prohibition Reform. She denied that she represents feminism in the problem of liquor control.

"We don't discriminate between men and women in any of our regulations," she said.

Hospital Drive In ArlingtonCo. Goes Over Top

Chance Buchanan Elected President of Civic Federation.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Reports made yesterday at the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Hospital Association by Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs, superintendent of the County Welfare Board, showing incomplete returns of $18,348.84 in the recent drive carried on jointly by the Hospital Association and Welfare Board, indicate the goal of $15,000 will be far exceeded. The meeting was held in the Lyon Park Community House, with Mrs. J. C. Boss, president, presiding.

Of the funds reported, $2,037.50 represents cash going to hospital fund, $1,996.42 cash to the welfare fund, $4,540.25 pledges to the hospital fund, $2,274.67 pledged to the welfare fund, and $500 received from the schools which is yet to be divided. In addition to the above amounts, the following special gifts are included to hospital fund from the following persons and organizations: Dr. J. Ed Payne, $1,000; Julius Marcey, $1,000; Dr. S. T. Noland, $1,000; Dr. W. C. Welburn, $1,000; Thomas J. Crack, $500; Arlington County Business and Professional Woman's Club, $500, and the Arlington County Monarch Club, $1,000, making the grand total for the hospital of $10,540.25. Dr. John Gilligan pledges to fit out the operating room.

Dr. Oscar Wilkinson, of Washington, the principal speaker, stressed the point that in the management of a small hospital the greatest care must be exercised to see to it that the business staff is most sufficient.

Mrs. Joseph C. Boss, of Clarendon, was unanimously re-elected president. Other officers elected are Mrs. Edward T. Fenwick, of East Falls Church, vice president; Mrs. Edith Rose, of Lyon Park, secretary; Mrs. Robert Livingstone, of Lyon Village, treasurer, and Mrs. C. K. Lewis, corresponding secretary.

I. Chance Buchanan last night was elected president of the Arlington County Civic Federation at a meeting in the Lyon Park Community House. Others elected were Mrs. Florence E. Cannon, vice president, and Mrs. L. C. McNamar, treasurer.

Arthur Orr, Charles R. Fenwick, Mrs. Jesse Roberts, Dr. Victor E. Meyers and J. C. McClellan were named to the executive committee.

With more than 75 persons attending, the Young Men's Class of the Community Methodist Church at Aurora Heights, Arlington County, last night held its annual banquet with parents as guests. H. S. Omohundro, teacher of the class, acted as toastmaster.

The entertainment included music by the Virginia Male Quartet, a demonstration of memory by M. B. Woody, of Washington; Wilbur Hall, "the boy who eats fire," and George Wagner, radio artist, better known as "Uncle George."

The Old Dominion Kennel Club will hold the second puppy match of the season at the Falls Church town hall Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Puppies of all sizes, colors, sex and age from three to twelve months may be entered. The fee will be 50 cents for the first and 25 cents for each additional pup. Persons who contemplate the purchase of a pup as a Christmas gift will have an opportunity at the conclusion of the match.

Judge Harry Hunt 3d, will judge all sporting dogs. Miss Marie Louise Welch, of Baltimore, will judge all hounds. The terriers will be judged by Mrs. R. H. Johnston, of Washington, Mrs. Frank Downing, of Baltimore, will judge the toy breeds, and William Philips, of Washington, the bulldogs.

A musical program directed by Mrs. J. Forney Donaldson, director of music in the Arlington County schools, will feature the monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Robert E. Lee School at Leeway tonight, in the school auditorium.

The Arlington Volunteer Fire Department will elect officers for the new year at its meeting tonight in the firemen's hall.

The Woman's Club of Lyon Village meets tonight at the home of Mrs. F. M. Lewis, 1520 North Highland street.

Montgomery County to Foster Meeting to Solve Road Deficits

Maryland's 'In the Red' Localities Invited to Conference at Rockville With Roads Commission Officials; Hearing to Be Held on Zoning.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
1111 Oak Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone, Shepherd 2363.

Maryland's "in-the-red" counties will be invited to attend a conference Monday at Rockville to discuss plans for straightening out their difficulties with the Maryland State roads commission.

The Montgomery County commissioners yesterday directed Ira C. Whitacre, clerk of the board, to write to the county commissioners of other counties which, like Montgomery, have overdrafts with the roads commission and are consequently in the same position of being without any State help for road maintenance.

The matter was brought to a head in a letter from the roads commission informing the commissioners that no further road work will be done in Montgomery County until the county deficit is paid. A letter from the Calvert County commissioners asking co-operation also was received.

An agreement had been reached between the county commissioners and the roads commission whereby part of the county share of the gasoline tax would be devoted to retiring the deficit and the remainder to road maintenance. This was abrogated by the new order received by the county commissioners at their meeting yesterday.

The commissioners took no action on the deficit situation yesterday other than to direct Mr. Whitacre to ask Dr. Homer E. Tabler, chairman of the State Roads Commission, to confirm in writing an agreement in which the State Roads Commission agrees to refrain from any work chargeable to the county unless it is approved by the county commissioners.

Under the present set-up the roads commission goes ahead with the road maintenance and construction and then sends the bill to the county. This chiefly was the cause of the deficit, which amounts to approximately $245,757.66. The county road maintenance and debt service requires approximately $71,000 a year.

Hearing on mandamus proceedings filed by attorneys for E. L. Smith, owner of the lots near the Montgomery Blair High School which have been the focus of a controversy between the owner and the county board of education, seeking to force the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission to approve a building permit for stores on the lots, will be held this morning before Judge Charles W. Woodward, in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville.

The Smith attorneys, Frederick Stohlman, Albert M. Bouic and George A. Cassidy, jr., contend that the planning commission has no right to refuse to approve the permits which have been issued by the county building inspector.

J. Bond Smith and Walter W. Dawson, counsel for the Park and Planning Commission, contend that a change in rezoning from commercial to residential is in the process of being consummated and that the approval should be withheld until the action of the county commissioners regarding the rezoning is announced.

The board of education, the parent-teacher association of the school and sundry civic organizations, including the Montgomery County Civic Federation, adopted resolutions asking that the lots be rezoned to residential.

The park and planning commission, after a stormy hearing, voted to ask the county commissioners to rezone the property to residential. The county commissioners will hold a public hearing Friday on the rezoning.

Campaign against the sales tax was inaugurated by the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce. The chamber pledged itself to a "drastic anti-sales tax policy" and to fight any effort to re-enact the gross receipts tax or adoption of a sales tax for financing unemployment relief.

The chamber also voted to work for change of the new electric light poles on Wisconsin avenue from large wooden poles to smaller poles which would look more like steel poles. A committee was named to work for reduction in basic gas and telephone rates in the county.

Maj. Philander D. Poston was unanimously re-elected president of the Silver Spring Chamber of Commerce last night. Other officers chosen were Julius P. Stadler, vice president; Horace J. Donnelly, jr., secretary, and Winship I. Green, treasurer.

As delegates to the Montgomery County Civic Federation the chamber elected J. Donald Clagett, Maj. E. Brooke Lee and Mr. Stadler, with Mr. Donnelly, Maj. Poston and Louis A. Yost, jr., as alternatese.

World peace is one of the main issues of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the general federation,, told a meeting Saturday of the Takoma Park Women's Club at the Takoma Fire Hall, Carroll avenue.

Greetings from the guests of honor who were presidents of various women's clubs were given by Mrs. Perry O. Huff, president of the Junior Women's Club; Mrs. Frank M. Headley, State president of the Maryland federation; Mrs. S. M. Deffinbaugh, president of the Silver Spring Women's Improvement Club; Mrs. Mary D. Dawson, president of the Home Interest Club of Forest Glen; Mrs. Charles Zeller, president of the Current Comment Club. Work on the close conservation movement was described by Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, before she introduced Mrs. Lawson.

Eleven groups of the Woman's Society of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church will meet today at various homes. Mrs. E. V. Crittendon is president of the society. Following is a list of the groups and their meeting places:

Matheson group, 10:30 a. m., Mrs. W. R. Mattoon, 101 Cedar avenue; Duff group, 11 a. m., Mrs. L. H. Dennis, 9 Cleveland avenue; Knox group, 12 noon, Mrs William Stuart, 212 Carroll street, covered-dish luncheon; Makemie group, 12 noon, Mrs. R. G. Sherburne, 215 Albany avenue, covered-dish luncheon; Calvin group, 12:15 p. m., Mrs. A. W. Harned, 5 Columbia avenue, covered-dish luncheon; Drummond group, 1 p. m., Mrs. C. B. McGrew, 7127 Chestnut street; Witherspoon group, 1 p. m., Mrs. E. E. Eastep, 11 Ash avenue, covered-dish luncheon; Whitman group, 1 p. m., Mrs. Joseph B. Allen, 49 Elm avenue; Dickinson group, 1:30 p. m., Mrs. E. F. Ladd, 121 Willow avenue, and Livingstone group, 1:30 p. m., Mrs. W. W. Stockberger, 529 Cedar street.

Suit for $25,000 damages was filed against John F. Dickinson, 7 Charles street, Alta Vista, Md., by June L. Slaughter.

The suit charges that the plaintiff was permanently injured and disfigured about the head and body when the automobile operated by Dickinson ran off the road, striking a fence and a tree, causing the plaintiff to be thrown violently against the metal and glass of the car.

The plaintiff charges that the defendant was operating in a negligent manner and at an excessive rate of speed. The plaintiff is represented by Attorney Stedman Prescott, of Rockville, Md.

The annual gift bazaar will be held by the Woman's Guild of Christ Episcopal Church, Kensington, today from 2 to 6 p. m. in the parish hall. Mrs. Robert L. Lewis is chairman.

The following will have charge of the different tables: Mrs. E. H. Harrison, Mrs. Clarence A. Skinner and Mrs. James E. Malcolm, linen; Mrs. Joseph Richardson Baker and Mrs. Harry W. Wanner, miscellaneous; Mrs. Eugene Jones and Mrs. Warren Price, candies; Mrs. Edward Parker and Mrs. Harry D. Appleby, aprons, and Miss Martha Zimmerman and Mrs. Willard Warthen, children's table. Mrs. James E. Lamb and Mrs. Raymond Hughes, posters. Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. E. A. Farrell will serve tea.

Prince Georges Council Names Dr. Patterson

Experiment Station Head Chosen President of Community Group.

Dr. H. J. Patterson, director of the University of Maryland Experiment Station, was elected president of the Prince Georges (Md.) Community Council at the annual winter session of the organization held yesterday at Upper Marlboro High School.

Other officers chosen are Miss Ethel Regan, county home demonstration agent, vice president, and Mrs. Charles E. Janes, re-elected secretary-treasurer. William A. Duvall is the retiring president.

Plans of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission for developing new parks in the county were told by Irving C. Root, chief engineer of the commission. He stressed need of new legislation by the Maryland General Assembly for making available land and funds for an adequate park system.

Dump Law Aired.

Dr. Frank B. Bomberger, president of the Baltimore Bank for Cooperatives, discussed "Financing the Farm Business," while T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, explained how the public dump law passed by the last session of the Legislature is functioning, pointing out the difficulties of setting up disposal plants because of neighborhood protest and the cost of acquiring sites.

Reports of service club activities were made by Walter L. Green, president of the Exchange Club; John S. White, president of the Kiwanis Club, and H. C. yrd, president of the Rotary Club.

The county Red Cross program was explained in six speeches, including a report on the current membership campaign by Chairman John S. White. Other talks were made by Miss Ethel Regan and J. F. Armstrong on "Red Cross Gerdens;" Mrs. James Severe , on "Distribution of Garments;" Mrs. Claude Gilbert, on "War Veteran Relief;" Miss Maude Gibbs, on "Junior Red Cross," and H. L. Leonard, on "First-Aid Relief Activities."

Relief Plan Outlined.

Mrs. J. Enos Ray, chairman of the county welfare board, told how the relief situation will be dealt with following the withdrawal of Federal funds. Other phases of county work were discussed by Miss Regan, whose topic was "Home Service;" P. E. Clark, county agricultural agent, on "Agriculture;" Miss Agnes Duvall, county nurse, on "Social Service," and Dr. H. B. Hooton, county health officer, on "Health Service."

A talk on "Fire Protection for the Home" was made by W. R. Beattie, president of the Prince Georges County Volunteer Firemen's Association.

Luncheon was served by ladies of Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church, while a musical program was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Irving Nielson. Approximately 100 persons attended the session.

Senator George L. Radcliffe of Maryland will be "tapped" at College Park next Monday for membership in the University of Maryland Chapter of Omicron Delta Kappa, national honorary leadership fraternity.

Senator Radcliffe, who graduated from the university law school in 1903, also will deliver the address at the ceremonies in the gym-armory.

"Jonrney's End," by R. C. Sheriff, will be presented by the University of Maryland Footlight Club tonight, tomorrow night and Friday night. Leading parts will be taken by Frederic J. Haskins, jr., Chevy Chase, Md.; Samuel Leishear, 209 Eleventh street southwest; William Johnson, Baltimore, and Joel Hutton, College Park.

Preparations have been completed for the turkey dinner to be served by the Men's Club, of Pinkney Memorial Protestant Episcopal Church, Hyattsville, tomorrow at 5 p. m., in the parish hall. G. Hodges Carr is chairman of the arrangements committee.

The Decatur Heights Community Club will meet tonight in the home of Mrs. Wilbur Barton, when a Christmas party will be held.

State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, of Prince Georges County, president of the Maryland Senate, will be the principal speaker at the meeting of the Twenty-first District Democratic Club today at 8 p. m. in the Branchville fire hall. Ned Waters is chairman of the program committee.

Perry Boswell, president of the Board of County Commissioners, and all other officials of the board were re-elected at yesterday's reorganization meeting.

James S. Heal was renamed clerk to the board, with Henry St. James L. Briscoe, deputy clerk, and Miss Catherine Ridgely, secretary. Ogle Marbury was appointed attorney for another term.

3 Are Indicted By U. S. Jurors For Jail Break

P.-T. A. Training School Opens 2-Day Session at Alexandria.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.

Indictments charging conspiracy, attempt to cause a riot, and escape jail, were returned yesterday in the United States Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, Judge Luther B. Way presiding. It is alleged that Oscar Hurst, Lee Snyder and Ernest M. Wells, on November 22, conspired to break jail at Norfolk. The attempted jail break was frustrated, and the men indicted under a Federal statute.

Indictments charging violation of the internal revenue liquor laws were returned against John H. Harley, of Fairfax County; Jack Scaggs Mann, of Loudoun; Levi Collins, W. L. O'Bryant and W. L. Henning. Anthony De Bono, alias Thomas Daniel Bandello, of Norfolk, and Harry Robinson were indicted for an alleged violation of the Harrison narcotic act.

The Parent-Teacher Training School, or Institute, opened its two-day session yesterday in the auditorium of the old high school building, with Mrs. Charles E. Roe, field secretary of the Parent-Teacher Congress, as superior, and Mrs. Wayland C. Kidd, president of the local Parent-Teacher Association council, presiding.

The meeting was opened with invocation by the Rev. R. C. Masterson, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, and Mrs. Albert M. Briggs and Mrs. Joseph Hoeft sang a duet, with Mrs. D. C. Book as accompanist. An address of welcome was delivered by T. C. Williams, superintendent of schools.

Mrs. Roe, the principal speaker, urged members to study the printed manual, adapt its suggestions to local needs and adopt them in their by-laws. She also explained two large charts which were displayed, and stated that busy mothers who gave time to the P.-T. A. become finer parents because of their membership. Group life and working together is important, she explained. She also paid tribute to the work of the standing committee on child welfare and the summer round-up of preschool children. This health committee, aiding the child to prepare for school and also the home and education committee, are of great value to both the children and the P.-T. A., she said. In concluding, she said that social welfare service, as given by the P.-T. A., is not philanthropy or charity, but is from the viewpoint of the welfare of the child.

At the afternoon session the topic was "Parent Education," by Mrs. Roe, and "Study Groups," by Miss Clara Pitts, supervisor of elementary education. The discussion was followed by the question box.

The program today will include program planning, by Mrs. Buell and Mrs. Frank Jones, and the District Congress. In the afternoon Miss Ruth Bottomly, summer round-up secretary, will explain her work.

Prof. Armistead Dobie, dean of the law school of the University of Virginia, will address the members of the Alexandria Bar Association at a banquet to be served in the George Mason Hotel at 6:30 p. m. today. He is regarded as one of the outstanding law authorities of the country, is the author of several legal text books, and recently served on President Roosevelt's commission to promulgate new rules of procedure in connection with common law cases in the United States district courts.

Members of the Arlington and Fairfax bar associations have been invited to attend, and other special guests will include Judge Luther B. Way, of the United States Court for the Eastern District of Virginia. John Barton Phillips, president of the local association, will preside, with Joseph M. Pancoast as secretary.

At the January meeting of the association it is planned to have a talk by G. O'Conor Goolrick, president of the State Bar Association, of Fredericksburg.

The feature of the Kiwanis ladies' night in the George Mason Hotel was a marriage ceremony, with Kiwanian Elliott F. Hoffman as the blushing bride, Walter Pierpont as the groom, Everett Hellmuoth as the minister, Frank Myers as best man, Roger Sullivan as maid of honor, Harry Kennedy and St. Clair Shelton as bridesmaid, Charles Seabloom and Herman Dietz as ushers, Charles Dare as the bride's mother, Tom Chauncey as a flower girl, T. J. Scott as the bride's father and Bill May as a disappointed suitor.

The Harmony Boys, composed of Kiwanians Irving Diener, Frank Myers, Dave Book, St. Clair Shelton, Wilmer Scott and Charles Slagle, rendered several selections. Solos were by Mrs. Evelyn Sheridan, Senorita Roselmira Colonno, Senora Aurelio de Alfar and Frank Eastman. Other features were a comic reading by Everett Hellmuth and a song by Bill May.

President Robert W. Eaves presided, and Harry Kennedy, general chairman, acted as master of ceremonies. Mrs. Elva Book was at the piano.

Charles M. Kennedy, of Baltimore, field director of the Loyal Order of Moose, last night outlined the child welfare work of that organization, at a meeting held in the Virginia Public Service auditorium, sponsored by Virginia Lodge, No. 1076, of Alexandria. The speaker outlined the accomplishments for the orphan children during the last year of the Order of Moose throughout the country.

Takoma Park Council Is Urged To Relinquish Charter of Town

Present Government Held 'Luxury,' Control by County Sought.

Abolishment of the town charter and relinquishment of government to the county were recommended as the town council of Takoma Park, Md., met last night to receive proposals for amending the charter.

The suggestion came from H. P. Ware, who told the council he believed the town government an "expensive luxury."

Recommendations for amending the town's charter came from the Community League of Takoma Park, which suggested changes in qualifications of voters, and the Young Democrats Club of Takoma Park, which presented sweeping proposals, among which was one to divide the town into wards.

The council will act upon the proposals and submit them to the special session of the State Legislature meeting in January.

F. O. Sanders, Once Road Officer, Dies

Coroner Blames Death on Heart Attack.

F. O. Sanders, 65, former supervisor of transportation for the West Virginia road commission, fell dead in the 300 block Ninth street northwest yesterday.

Sanders, who lives in Huntington, W. Va., had come to Washington to interview officials of the Department of Justice about setting up a fingerprinting bureau in West Virginia.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald announced after an examination of the body that Sanders had been stricken with a heart attack and had died almost instantly.

Sanders, a Republican, was succeeded as transportation supervisor by James P. Tierney, of Clarksburg, in 1933, and returned to Huntington to resume his law practice.

Kappel Held Slayer Of Elizabeth Lynch

Coroner's Jury Rejects Alibi in Shooting of Woman.

Stories Differ on Time He Departed From Death Scene.

WILLIAM ("DUTCH") KAPPEL.

A lengthy alibi story tracing the movements of William A. ("Dutch") Kappel, suspect in the mysterious slaying of Elizabeth Lynch, 34-year-old telephone operator, from 5 p. m. last Tuesday until nearly 7 a. m. Wednesday, failed to impress a coroner's jury yesterday.

He was ordered held on a first-degree murder charge and was committed to the District Jail pending grand jury action.

Miss Lynch, a bullet through her left cheek, was found a week ago today lying beneath a kitchen table in her home, 918 Fourth street northeast. A gun lay at her feet and her body rested on fragments of a broken chair.

Kappel's Story Disputed.

Through Charles Ford, defense attorney, Kappel presented his story, insisting he was not at the Fourth street house when Miss Lynch was killed. The story was marred, however, by differing testimony of numerous witnesses.

During the two-hour inquest, Kappel chewed nervously on his fingernails. He shifted in his chair and conferred hurriedly with his attorney when jurors repeatedly questioned apparent discrepancies in time.

It was testified that Kappel himself found Miss Lynch's body and summoned police. He entered the darkened kitchen shortly after 6 a. m. last Wednesday, stumbled over the smashed chair and, when he switched on a light, saw the woman sprawled beneath a table, the jurors were informed.

Together Earlier, Jury Told.

Several hours earlier, the jury was told, Kappel and Miss Lynch had been together at a restaurant in the 1200 block New York avenue northwest. Kappel's story, as related by Detective Sergt. John Dalglish, of the homicide squad, was:

About 5 p. m. on Tuesday of last week, he (Kappel) went to the New York avenue restaurant. A short time later he was joined by Miss Lynch. Kappel was called out and asked a friend, Leo Cullen, newspaper pressman, of the 700 block Fourth street northeast, to sit with Miss Lynch.

Kappel returned and the three remained there, drinking and talking. During the evening there was a "slight" altercation between Kappel and Miss Lynch. It involved "another woman." About 11:30 p. m., Kappel took Miss Lynch home. He returned to the restaurant, according to the story, and remained until closing time at 2 a. m.

Then, with Cullen and several other men, Kappel drove to a night club in nearby Maryland. It was closed. They returned and went to a "club" at Thirteenth and I streets northwest. There they remained until nearly 6 a. m. Cullen and Kappel took a taxi and went home.

Sothern Supports Story.

It was then that Kappel found the body. He ran from the house and called Cullen, who was entering his own home two blocks away.

Cullen, who was arrested with Kappel, but later released, took the witness stand to corroborate Kappel's defense story, testifying that it was "about 12:15 a. m." when the latter returned to the restaurant after taking Miss Lynch home.

That time also was verified by Denny Sothern, former National League baseball player, who runs the New York avenue restaurant. He said that Kappel "took a snooze" when he returned.

According to Detective Dalglish, however, Cullen had previously told police that Kappel didn't return to the cafe until "close to 1 a. m."

A taxi driver, identified only as "Robey," is said to have told Dalglish that he picked Kappel up at Fourth and H streets northeast about 12:30 a. m. The cab driver did not appear as a witness, but his testimony was given by Dalglish.

The detective quoted "Robey" as saying that he was "certain of the time" because at midnight he was eating and after that took a friend home. It was on the return trip, while cruising down H street, that Kappel hailed his taxi, the cabman reputedly told police.

"Heated" Quarrel Denied.

Kappel insisted that his argument with Miss Lynch never became "heated." He said that when he left her in front of the Fourth street house (where he also was a roomer), he told her that he was going back downtown and have a few more drinks." He then walked to Fourth and H streets and hailed a taxi.

Sergt. Robert Frazier, of the Ninth Precinct, however, testified that Kappel had told him earlier that Miss Lynch refused to let him in the house and slammed the door in his face.

Dalglish declared that there were evidences of a struggle in the Lynch kitchen. Parts of the broken chair were strewn about the room, with one piece in a bowl on the kitchen sink.

Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, who performed an autopsy, said Miss Lynch's body bore "multiple bruises on the legs and arms."

The jury held that Miss Lynch was killed by a bullet from a gun "held in the hand or hands of Kappel."

Relief Families May Feel New Cut, Allen Says

Further Slash Expected Unless More Money Is Made Available.

District relief expenditures which Commissioner George E. Allen ordered cut 25 per cent during December are to be cut again next month unless additional money is made available from Federal or some other sources, Commissioner Allen said yesterday.

Horizontal cuts of 10 per cent in relief payments already have become effective. Others are to be made during the month so that all relief budgets will be reduced a flat 25 per cent under the orders of the commissioner, who is relief and works administrator for the District. The same slash is to be made in administration expenses.

Even with these cuts, it is estimated expenditures will total $278,000 this month. This is $112,000 more than the $166,666 monthly budget for local relief. Congress appropriated $2,000,000 out of District revenues for relief this fiscal year. When Federal funds were withdrawn, the Commissioners ordered relief expenditures each month cut to one-twelfth of the appropriation.

This program is to be adhered to, Commissioner Allen reiterated, and reductions in relief payments and the administrative staff will be made until total expenses are brought within that figure, unless other than District funds are made available. The excess expenditures this month are expected to be met with surplus funds and another advance of $100,000 from FERA. There is hope that more Federal money will be advanced to meet needs in succeeding months, but there is no assurance this will be done, it was said.

Part of the burden of caring for 10,500 applicants for relief will be eased during the month by assignment of 3,000 women to WPA projects and others, men and women, to white collar jobs for which approval of Federal authorities is expected.

Relief needs are to be discussed by a committee representing the Monday Evening Club and the Council of Social Agencies who are to confer with the Commissioners at 11:15 a. m. Friday.

Old Divorce Law Status Questioned

Dismissal of several hundred suits brought under the District's former divorce law was seen as a possibility yesterday when Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of District Supreme Court, was asked to dismiss a suit brought under this law on grounds that the present divorce law repealed the old.

Attorney Raymond A. Neudecker, representing Mrs. Edna Douglas, of Lancaster, Va., being sued by her husband, Joseph W. Douglas, of the first block of Todd street northeast, on grounds of desertion, asked Justice Wheat to dismiss the case. The suit was filed in September, 1934, and came to trial yesterday.

Justice Wheat took Neudecker's plea under advisement and said he would rule upon it today. If he dismisses the case it will mean that all suits pending under the old law will be void.

Roberts Hits Gas Rate Cuts As Promotion

People's Counsel Says Small Consumer Does Not Benefit.

Utility Official Defends Proposed Schedule at P. U. C. Hearing.

New gas rates proposed by the Washington and Georgetown companies were attacked by William A. Roberts, people's counsel, as "too promotional" at a Public Utilities Commission hearing yesterday.

Roberts conducted a lengthy cross-examination of E. J. Boothby, vice president and general manager of the companies, who finally lost his low-voiced, unemotional manner in defending the proposed rates.

"The rates we proposed are not, in my opinion, as promotional as they should be," he declared.

Roberts developed that the average consumer who has been paying $3.71 a month for 4,500 cubic feet of gas a month would have his bill cut only to $3.66 under the proposed new rates. Under the old rates, before the 8.5 per cent discount was applied, the same consumer would have paid $4.07.

Large Consumers Benefit.

Of the $167,120 by which the domestic schedule would be reduced below the current 8.5 per cent discount rate, Boothby testified $80,155, or 48 per cent, would go to consumers using more than 10,000 cubic feet of gas a month.

Consumers at the 4,000-foot level will get a reduction of 1.48 per cent a month below the current discounted charge; consumers using between 4,000 and 10,000 feet a month will get a reduction of 3.93 per cent in their bills. On the whole domestic schedule the estimated reduction will be 4.10 per cent. Consumers using more than 10,000 feet will get a reduction of 15.5 per cent.

The average bill is 3,500 cubic feet, including small apartment users. Mr. Boothby said that under the old rates the monthly bill for 3,000 feet would have been $2.80; under the 8.5 per cent discount it would be $2.58, and under the proposed rates it will be $1.51. "That means a reduction of 5 cents a month in the bills of the largest class of consumers," Roberts said.

Riley E. Elgin, chairman of the commission, asked how the companies could afford to sell gas at 40 cents when it charged subsidiaries 53 cents. Boothby said there was an actual difference in cost of distribution. Roberts said the rate charged subsidiaries was too high.

Boothby said a consumer using 4,000 feet would pay $3.21 under the lowest industrial rate. He admitted a consumer could get 2,000,000 feet for $800.

Boothby Defends Rates.

"Were you not, in revising the domestic schedule, controlled entirely by promotional and competitive consideration?" Roberts asked.

"No," Boothby insisted. "The rates we propose are not as promotional as they should be and I would like to see them. In preparing this schedule of reduced rates we desired to pass along part of this reduction to all consumers except those using so little they paid the minimum charge."

"What is the benefit of a sliding scale or any other arrangement to the small consumer if he doesn't get a reduction in his gas rate?" Roberts persisted.

"In preparing this new schedule," Boothby said, "we had to take up some of the changes which should have been made in 1932 when the 8.5 per cent discount went into effect. The horizontal cut in rates then made was unjust, improper and stands in the way of a proper readjustment of rates.

Boothby insisted the company must have the benefit of promotional rates to induce greater use of gas which is meeting increasing competition from other fuels.

All Lost Except Pluck, He Just KeepsA-Trying

Veteran, Out of Work a Year, Walks Street With 'Job Wanted' Sign.

An empty stomach—with no food in sight—yesterday inspired Lowry Hall, 41-year-old jack-of-all-trades, to use his ingenuity.

He walked up and down E street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets northwest with the following penciled sign dangling from a cord around his neck:

LOWRY HALL.

"Work, please! Any kind. Anywhere."

"Have you a trade?" a reporter asked.

"I know a little bit about painting, carpentering and electricity," he responded.

As an afterthought he added: "What I'd really like to do is work on a farm. You see, I was born and raised on a North Carolina farm."

Hall said he was cut off the relief rolls last winter. He displayed shrapnel wounds in his left wrist and right ankle, but explained he could not get a pension because he did not have a 25 per cent disability.

"I just decided I would wear this sign until I get a job or get arrested. I haven't had more than a day or two of work since last winter.

"Last night I slept in a truck on a parking lot. I haven't had anything to eat all day except a half a bag of peanuts a man gave me.

"Now that I've sold everything I have—my gloves, my other suit, my fountain pen and pencil—I can't even be sure of a cup of coffee and a bowl of beans a day. Boy, I sure am losing weight. Do you think someone will give me a job?"

The reporter didn't know, but learned Hall can be reached through friends at 1444 N street northwest.

Big Haul!

2 Machines Weighing 150 Lbs. Stolen From Job.

An electric motor and a gasoline engine were reported stolen from a construction job in the 3900 block of Chesapeake street northwest yesterday, Vinton Dove, foreman, said the two machines weighed about 150 pounds and are valued at $465.

"I don't see how the thieves ever got away with them," Dove said. "I'm glad they left the steam shovel."

Traffic Death Toll for Year Grows to 108

Woman Injured in May Is Dead of Resultant Blood Clot.

Washingtonian Killed in Auto Collision at Fort Wayne.

For the sixth consecutive day a name was added to the growing list of persons who have perished in the city's traffic this year.

Last night the list contained 108 names. The addition was Mrs. Lottie Davis, 65, of 138 Adams street northwest, injured in an accident last May.

Yesterday at Fort Wayne, Ind., a Washingtonian, Richard Reddington, 55, was killed in a car collision, the Associated Press reported. His wife suffered a fractured arm.

Blood Clot Fatal.

Mrs. Davis died Sunday at Sibley Hospital. Authorities did not learn of her death until yesterday, as it had been first called "natural causes."

It was on May 20 that Mrs. Davis was struck by a delivery truck near her home. Both her hips were fractured and several ribs and her collar bone broken.

The immediate cause of her death was the clogging of her heart with a blood clot, District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said. He attributed it to the accident.

An inquest will be held at which the driver of the car, George Bamberger, of the 1300 block of Perry place northwest, will appear, Dr. MacDonald said.

Car-Bus Crash Victim.

Charles Finnell, 40, of 38 Longfellow street northeast, was removed to Emergency Hospital with a possible fracture of the skull about 5:30 p. m. after the car in which he was riding collided with a Capital Transit Co. bus.

After the accident, which occurred at Michigan avenue and Harewood road northeast, Finnell's car caromed across the road and into a telephone pole.

The bus, empty except for the driver, Paul N. Koenning, 23, of 1403 F street northeast, hurtled through a fence and into the grounds of the Soldier's Home. Koenning was unhurt.

Mrs. Ada Forrester, 52, of 1367½ L street, southeast, was seriously injured last night when she was knocked down while crossing Pennsylvania avenue at Eighth street southeast, by a car operated by John C. Meeks, 26, of 1508 D street southeast.

Taken to Casualty Hospital, she was treated for a fractured collar bone, a posible fractured skull and cuts on the face.

Children's Hospital To Get D. C. Loan

$100,000 PWA Grant Will Provide Heating Plant.

A contract governing the expenditure and repayment of $100,000 loaned from Public Works funds was signed by the District Commissioners yesterday. The money is to be used for the building of a new heating plant for Children's Hospital. The Commissioners were authorized to borrow it at the last session of Congress. The hospital is not required to repay the money.

Under an agreement worked out with hospital officers subsequent to Congressional action, it was agreed that the District would receive credit for the amount of money used in sending poor children to the hospital. Cost of their care would be charged against the $100,000 given the hospital, which is a private institution.

The contract signed yesterday contains the same provisions as others have had, requiring all contracts and expenditures to be submitted to Secretary Ickes for approval.

Police in Time to Save Cat at Least One Life

Police at the Second Precinct Station yesterday named this kitten "Elects to Forfeit" after it had lost half a dozen lives in the station's furnace.

Officers Find a Mascot in Furnace, Almost Ready to Roast.

A kitten lost a full half dozen of his lives yesterday at the Second Precinct Station.

Perhaps that is the reason the policemen named him "Elects to Forfeit," with his adoption after the rescue.

The kitten, about three months in this world, was found crying as it clung to a ledge in the steam boiler of the station. He was between the fire bed and the outer wall of the furnace—inches from the burning coals.

All was quiet at the station until the room echoed with the wailing.

The policemen looked around.

"It's the wind," said Private Fred J. Haage. But the mewing continued.

It was coming from the heat register, a precinct detective determined by deduction. The mewing was traced to the furnace and there Elects to Forfeit was found.

The policemen removed two plates from the furnace to rescue the kitten, which had crept into the furnace through a fresh air tube which opens on an alley.

Spare the Rod, But Don't Spoil The Child, Psychiatrist's Advice

Welfare Leaders Are Told Parents' Example Is Most Important.

If you have a "problem child" who refuses to eat his mashed turnips or is afraid of sleeping in the dark, don't try to cure him with harsh words or a razor strop or any other show of force, advises Dr. Leo Kanner.

And it will help to steer clear of such descriptives as problem child, nervous, hysterical, neurasthenic, Oedipus-complex-ridden and other fancy terms, he said yesterday in an address before the Child Guidance Conference at the Washington Hotel.

A parent who may be skeptical of his child-rearing theories—although he refuses to call them theories—may be interested to know that Dr. Kanner, besides being associate professor of psychiatry at the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, is the father of a son and a daughter. He practices upon them what he preaches.

Possessing many years of experience in the diagnosis and treatment of children's personality difficulties, Dr. Kanner cited one case history after another.

Dr. Kanner told of his success in treatment of boys and girls who stuttered, were too shy or too bold, had morbid fears of policemen and peddlers, defied their teachers and had night tantrums.

How to handle them?

First, said the psychiatrist, try to get a clear and simple account of the difficulty. Perhaps Johnny's tonsils should come out, or his trouble is largely environmental or he is not in the proper school grade.

"Above all, let us remember that after all there is hardly a child who goes through the first two decades of life without at any time displaying any of the things that go into textbooks of children's personality disorders," Dr. Kanner.

Second, set a good example around the house.

"How can we blame the children for being afraid of thunderstorms if mother shrieks and shivers every time she sees a flash of lightning or hears the sound of thunder?" he asked. "How can we blame a child for impatience and restlessness if father displays the same traits?"

Dry Blames D. C. Repeal On Congress

Speaker Says 'Hysterical Adolescents' Forced Liquor Laws.

Drunken Driver Menace Laid to Easy Purchase of Alcohol.

Repeal was forced on the District by a Congress which acted like "hysterical adolescents," D. Stewart Patterson, of Baltimore, said last night at a meeting at the Ninth Street Christian Church sponsored by the United Dry Forces of the District.

"It is all very easy for these men and women to enact legislation for our city," he continued, "and then hurry back to their own communities, leaving behind the deplorable conditions their silly actions make possible."

At the Clarendon Methodist Church at Clarendon, Va., Dr. J. Raymond Schmidt, secretary of the National Civic League, told Arlington County Post No. 13, Allied Youth, that the ease with which alcohol is secured today has made the drunken driver the chief menace of the highways.

Dr. Schmidt told the group that none of the promises made by repeal advocates of temperance, no saloons, a balanced budget, no bootleggers, have been kept.

Patterson, who is president of the Methodist Lay Council of Baltimore, said "people in the District must put sentiment aside . . . return to liquor is but the entering wedge for the return of other things . . . already a member of our local board is pleading for legalized gambling . . . Add legalized vice and you have the age-old triumvirate."

Doctor's Kin Gets $267,000 Estate

Provision Made to Start Home for Girls.

Mrs. Minta G. Howe, widow of Dr. Orwin E. Howe, 434 Park road northwest, will receive one-half the income of her husband's $267,000 estate, it was shown in the District Supreme Court yesterday when a petition was filed for the probate of his will.

The other half of the income is to go to the three children, Percy L. Howe, Winfield, Kans.; Charles S. Howe, Berlin, Md., and Mrs. Dora I. Hays, Portland, Oreg.

The will directed that after the death of the widow and the children the estate is to be held in trust by the Second National Bank and is to be turned over to a corporation to be known as the "Dr. O. E. Howe Home for Unfortunate Girls." Part of the money is to be used for construction of the home and the balance as an operating fund, the home to be built on a Prince Georges County (Md.) farm owned by the physician. Attorneys E. F. and S. F. Colladay and Mrs. Mabel M. Sakis represented the estate and Mrs. Howe.

Von Sternberg Has Achieved a Masterpiece of Power in "Crime and Punishment"

Filmization of Potent Tale Is A Tense Play

To Open Tomorrow Night; Keith's Strong Lineup; Chat of Playhouses.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Columbia Pictures' filmization of Dostoievski's masterpiece, "Crime and Punishment," emerges upon the screen one of the most perfect coalitions of acting, directing and photography the cinema ever has produced.

Josef von Sternberg—painter, sculptor, photographer, musician and expert on lighting—frequently has been upbraided for stylizing his motion picture productions beyond all semblance of drama.

This column was among the most vehement in its denunciation of the ridiculous lengths to which he carried the "symbolism" of his photographic trickery in "The Scarlet Empress," in which a dramatic biography was completely smothered by the pompous arrogance of the director's lust for "interpretative art."

Our only complaint against the Von Sternberg treatment of the Marlene Dietrich vehicle—which might have been one of the great pictures of its season, even outdistancing Elisabeth Bergner's earlier "Catherine the Great," treating in more simple terms of the same colorful subject matter—was that it did not interpret and was not art.

No such charge, however, can be lodged against this mercurial talent for direction and "significant" photography as it is revealed in "Crime and Punishment."

Is Vitally Eloquent.

In this tremendously gripping drama of psychology of criminality, previewed yesterday afternoon in the Warner Brothers private projection room in the Earle Theater Building, there have been fused, with an illuminating and vital eloquence, the most expensive qualities of fine acting, matchless timing of both speech and movement and the inspired use of light and shadow as an indispensable factor in the painting of character.

There is no inclination at the moment to anticipate Friday morning's formal review of this incomparably fine picture by particularizing as among the members of a cast in which the director evidently succeeded in assembling precisely the players he wished for the various roles to be performed; by detailing the development of a grim and absorbing story or outlining the mental and physical climaxes in which the play abounds, but there is an urgent determination to emphasize this use that Von Sternberg has made of light and shade.

Creates His Own Color.

When "Crime and Punishment" is attentively viewed by those in attendance at tomorrow night's premiere in the Metropolitan Theater, and at later presentations, it will be noted inevitably that the figures reflective of the criminal aspects of the powerful tale are cast in shadow, while a bright and illuminating light shines full upon those reformative and retributive personages in the progress of the play who are to bring about its ultimate climax and momentary denouement.

Intermediate dramatic values are correspondingly expressed in tonal gradations of black and white that form a perfect index to the character of the action and the persons engaged in it.

Von Sternberg here has done with light and shade what Guonod did in "Faust" with thematic music.

By some miracle of camera angles and lens adjustment he has achieved a vivid realism in every foot of the film that causes every pictured object to stand out with the sharpness of outline of a bas-relief.

A stanch advocate of natural-color photography, as an aid to realistic effect and a closer approach to actuality on the screen, is compelled to admit that "Crime and Punishment" could not have been enhanced one iota in pictorial or dramatic impressiveness by a natural-color treatment.

Josef von Sternberg has created his own color by the sheer wizardry of a master's manipulation of the simple ingredients of highlights and shadows.

And, as the saying goes, Columbia has gone and done it again!

When Ed Sullivan, writer of The Post's "Broadway" column, comes to town on Friday to headline the stage bill at Loew's Fox Theater, he will be feted by Division Manager Carter Barron of Loew's, Inc., at a two-hour interlude of between-shows shop talk. Now is that a welcome, I ask you? Yes or no, I have documentary evidence of the imminence of the friendly throat-slitting in the form of a Western-Union invitation to whet my snickersnee, reading approximately as follows:

"Columnists, they say, try to break one another and not break bread with each other. We'd like to disprove this popular misconception by having you join with other Capital columnists in a salute to Ed Sullivan, noted New York writer, in suite so-and-so at Hotel Carlton between 4 and 6 Friday afternoon. There will be loads of columnistic inspiration, so won't you assent to be inspired? Regards. CARTER BARRON."

Thanks a lot, Carter, but Friday, as you know, is a terrifically busy day in this department, what with the new shows opening, Sunday make-up, art, banners, cutlines and the like. Would it be all right if I sent a boy up with a note of greeting to Mr. Sullivan and an empty thermos bottle, or something, for my share of the inspiration?

Who Remembers?

The play is not a musical show, but a famous American drama. It nevertheless falls out that Terpsichore, Muse of the Dance, is being wooed—with considerable difficulty—by the Columbia Players in the preparation of their next production, Susan Glaspell's "Inheritors."

The second act is set in a Midwestern college in the year 1920 and two of the young college students are called upon to "go into their dance"—that dance, supposedly, the very latest thing known to 1920.

The Columbians' difficulty lies in the determination of just what was the latest dance in 1920? That year, falling between the Vernon Castles and the Charleston, is a blank as far as the Columbia historians are concerned.

So the Columbia Players are offering two complimentary tickets for the performance to the first contributor of an authentic answer to their problem.

Replies should be addressed to Mr. Robert Miller, president of the Columbia Players, 3216 Thirteenth street northwest.

In the meantime, Peggy Gusack, who was only 3 years old in 1920, and Richard Kreuzburg, who isn't committing himself, are dancing away at the polka, the schottische, the Lindy-hop or the rhumba, depending upon their mood, at rehearsals!

Miss Gusack insists she doesn't remember those old dances so very well.

Harking back to that "Crime and Punishment" preview yesterday afternoon, those new orchestra chairs that have supplanted the old wicker easy chairs, formerly in use in the Warner projection room, are not so bad. They are great, sprawling, softly upholstered affairs that would make theater-going a pleasure in any playhouse. So when they preview pictures a little less continuously and grippingly interesting than Columbia's celluloid translation of the Dostoievski business, we probably can get caught up on that lost sleep about as usual!

They had us scared there for a minute, though!

What and When at Keith's.

The impression having got abroad that Josephine Hutchinson, George Houston, Helen Westley, John Halliday and the other members of the fine cast in "The Melody Lingers On" would be seen on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater beginning tomorrow, it is now definitely announced by Manager Hardie Meakin that the change of bill will occur on the accepted opening day of Friday.

"Annie Oakley," with Barbara Stanwyck and Preston Foster, will be continued on the Keith screen today and tomorrow.

Incidentally—and quite so—an especially strong line-up of features seems to be impending on Fifteenth street.

Following "The Melody Lingers On," on Friday, December 13, Gene Raymond will occupy the screen at Keith's in a new film version of George M. Cohan's mystery-comedy of "Seven Keys to Baldpate." In this subject Washington will get one of its first glimpses of Margaret Callahan, a young actress who has been gaining some attention in the trade and public prints.

Beginning on Friday, December 20, Edmund Lowe will be the pictured star in "The Great Impersonation" for a run of five days only.

Your Xmas Present.

On Christmas Day, which is by way of being a Wednesday this year, Mr. Meakin will break out one of his most important bookings of the season—Katharine Hepburn in "Sylvia Scarlet," in which she is supported by two able and popular leading men in the handsome persons of Brian Aherne and Cary Grant. Mr. Aherne, it will be recalled, just scored one of his greatest screen successes with Joan Crawford in "I Live My Life." Miss Hepburn, of course, quite rehabilitated herself in popular estimation by the excellence of her work with Fred MacMurray and Fred Stone in "Alice Adams." "Sylvia Scarlet" reputedly improves upon that engaging release.

After Miss Hepburn's engagement, RKO-Keith's screen will reflect the local debut of Lily Pons, the French coloratura, in "I Dream Too Much," a subject that permits a fine display of her voice and has Henry Fonda, of "The Farmer Takes a Wife" and "Way Down East," as leading man.

And after Mlle. Pons, Irene Dunne in "The Magnificent Obsession." In this subject, the star of "Roberta" (and Jerome Kern wrote the music for "I Dream Too Much," too) is supported by Robert Taylor, Charles Butterworth, Betty Furness, Sara Haden, Ralph Morgan, Henry Armetta and others of like note.

Happy New Year!

Departing from his long succession of impersonations of distinguished figures of history to assume the role of a lovable, old vagabond who salvages the fortunes of a widow and daughter who had done him a kindness in return for a small chore, George Arliss has scored one of his substantial local hits on the screen of the Belasco Theater in "Mr. Hobo." This second of his starring vehicles under the banner of Gaumont British enters its second week on Lafayette Square today. It will continue the chief feature of the bill for another full seven-day period—and perhaps a third, if business holds as it has so far—according to announcement made yesterday by Manager Thoman, of the Belasco. Worth seeing.

The Loewdown.

Charles "Chic" Sale, master of a hundred characterizations and, in the old days of the two-a-day, one of vaudeville's greatest drawing cards, achieves probably his greatest triumph in the role of Abraham Lincoln in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's two-reel picturization of "The Perfect Tribute"—the silence that followed the delivery of that poetic classic in prose, the Gettysburg Address.

"The Perfect Tribute" will be shown as foremost of the bill's supplementary features at Loew's Palace, beginning Friday. The major screen feature, of all things, is "Thanks a Million," a musical with Dick Powell and scores more with whom Lincoln hardly would have expected to be teamed!

On Saturday morning at 8:45, Loew's Fox Theater, in co-operation with Radio Station WRC, will conduct a Christmas doll parade. The proceedings will be "aired" by Gordon Hitenmark, the station's "Time Keeper."

Bring Doll and Take Air.

All kiddies are requested to bring their old dolls to the Fox. Each child donating a doll to this Yuletide enterprise will be permitted to say a word or two over the air. These dolls, as goes without saying, will be "doctored" and redressed and added to the Christmas happiness of the less fortunates who otherwise might have a less cheerful day.

Reverting momentarily to that "Thanks a Million" item, opening at the Palace day after tomorrow, Fred Allen makes his debut in the picture as a featured comedian in full-length subjects on the screen. Others from the air waves who have been pressed into duty in the film are Dick Powell, Rubinoff and his violin, Paul Whiteman and his orchestra, Ramona and the Yacht Club Boys.

Quite a raid!

So that tiny, little, black fluffball in the book department of Woodward & Lothorp's yesterday afternoon was Fifi, the acting Pomeranian, that supplies the whiskers for Billy Gaxton when he needs a disguise in "Anything Goes," at the National!

Fifi was in charge of her stage custodian, Florence Earle, who plays the role of Mrs. Frick in the musical comedy. Fifi probably was shopping for a few Xmas copies of "The Call of the Wild," after having seen Buck in the film version of the story with Clark Gable and Loretta Young!

Anyhow, she is a swell little soup retriever and actress and is said to know her stage cue as well as any member of the company. She also enjoyed all that stroking under the chin the ladies in the book department showered upon her.

These actresses!

Word-to-the-Wise Note.

To get the best effect of Fifi's performance on the stage, it should be viewed, of course, from seat K-9!

"Home Town Folks Make Good, Etc."

Formerly residents of this city at 1413 Newton street northwest, these three young people, two brothers and a sister, were "discovered" not so long ago through their broadcasts from Station WRC. They are Wayne, Alice and Fred Winstead, billed as The Winstead Trio, with Benny Davis and his "Star Dust Revue of 1936," currently providing the stage entertainment at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater. It was Benny who discovered them during a previous visit to town and promptly put them on the "big time," where they have made good ever since.

Watching Them Make Pictures

Hollywood, Dec. 3.

JOHN FORD is directing "Prisoner of Shark Island," with Warner Baxter and Gloria Stuart. It is a love sequence. Calling for fine, clear photography, Director Ford gives the order that there is to be no smoking on the set. And when Director Ford issues this command, he doesn't realize that he is holding a pipe in his mouth.

Director Ford seldom directs a great scene in a flicker without clenching a pipe between his teeth. When the sequence is tense, he breaks the stem of the pipe. He knew that "The Informer" was an excellent picture by the number of pipes he destroyed while directing. That was a great picture for pipe smoking, for with the manufactured fog being used continually on the set, a little smoke was additional atmosphere.

But now he has given the order and he, too, must obey it. It's amusing to see Director Ford sneaking behind part of the scenery to grab a quick smoke.

• • • •

On the stage of "Follow the Fleet," the sailors are acting for Director Mark Sandrich. On another sound stage, Fred Astaire is dancing with Hermes Pan, and a man sits at a piano playing a song over and over. Astaire is trying to improvise some new steps for a dance routine. He listens to the music. Then his feet try to speak it. Pan watches and expresses an opinion. Astaire and Pan dance together. Astaire works all afternoon on this dance. It's hard work to make something look easy.

• • • •

EDDIE CANTOR and Gordon Jones are doing an eating sequence in "Strike Me Pink." It is Jones who does the eating, Cantor helping to serve the food. On the stage, for an eating scene, they may serve prop food, but the movies go in for real food and only the best. There is a chef from the Vendome on the set, and he stands over a steam table on wheels tending to a dozen steaks.

Director Norman Taurog has Jones start eating a steak. The scene isn't just right. It has to be played again. A new steak is rushed into the scene and onto the plate. Gordon Jones eats. Then another steak acts in the close-up. Gordon Jones still eats. Another steak makes its movie debut, and Jones continues to eat steak. When Director Taurog finally has filmed the scene from all the necessary angles, Jones has eaten seven steaks. The day's shooting is over, and walking off the set, Jones say to Cantor: "Do you belive those steaks will spoil my appetite? My wife has a big dinner waiting, and she'll be angry if I don't eat."

• • • •

The scene is on an outdoor set at Paramount representing a street in a Klondike camp. Outside the entrance of a saloon, a woman missionary, wearing a blue dress and a blue bonnet fashioned after the Salvation Army uniform is preaching to miners and saloon hostesses. The woman is telling them about sin and how to avoid it.

The missionary lass in the blue bonnet is Mae West.

Anyway, you'll agree it's Mae West, but a little different Mae West. Could it be that a censor wrote this part for her?

• • • •

CLARK GABLE is now at work in the flicker, "Wife vs. Secretary." There are columnists and fan writers, who would have you believe that Gable's stock will falter at the box office because of his marital trouble. Gable doesn't appear concerned. But this is an old-fashioned idea.

• • • •

A divorce doesn't hurt at the box office these days. The movie fans have come to expect such things; even when they read about it they don't become as excited as they once did.

If anything should have hurt a star at the box office, it was Jean Harlow's statement when she asked for a divorce from Hal Rosson. Miss Harlow claimed that Mr. Rosson read a book in bed. But the public still believes in Jean Harlow.

There is only one thing that really hurts a star at the box office—and that's a bad picture.

I'll Betcha

New York, Dec. 3.

BILLY ROSE bet $350,000 on "Jumbo," but it was't his dough. He's grossed back, in two weeks and a half, about $150,000.

• • • •

Paramount bet $100,000 on the stage hit "Sailor, Beware," spent $50,000 more trying to get it by the censors, and lost. M.-G.-M. bet $250,000 on a story called "Soviet" and lost. It's still on the shelf. Warners bet $133,000 on five New York stage shows this season and got five flops. But "Boy Meets Girl," a $15,000 bet, will recoup all losses, and "Three Men on a Horse" is still paying profits.

• • • •

I'll betcha don't know the name of the biggest bettor in the country. In one day he's bet as high as $75,000 on the race tracks of the country. He's Tom Pendergast, Kansas City political big shot, and he'll bet as much as $80,000 on a single race.

• • • •

Jock Whitney bet $1,200,000 on the first full-length technicolor picture, "Becky Sharp," but he coppered the bet. Technicolor stock spurted up to 26 and his Wall street profits protected the cost of the flicker. But Peter Arno didn't do "Here Comes the Bride" in technicolor. Angel Jock lost $100,000 on it.

• • • •

Sam Goldwyn is the nerviest of Hollywood gamblers. He spent $250,000 in an advertising campaign for Anna Sten, and didn't squawk when his judgment was proved wrong. And they kid him about his dialect!

• • • •

Harry F. Sinclair used to bet 'em high, wide and handsome. He bet $50,000 at Saratoga in 1924 on My Play. The horse lost by a nose to Bud Fisher's nag, Mr. Mutt, in the running of the Saratoga Cup. Sinclair didn't even turn a hair as his $50,000 went up the flue.

• • • •

Waverell Harriman won a $100,000 bet on Chance Play in 1927; Jack Phillips, the discredited Queens sewer king, won $75,000 in a single bet on Black Maria, at Aqueduct. Frank Keeney and Coley Madden won the biggest bet at local tracks. Keeney won $130,000 on a nag called Lombardo at Aqueduct. Madden won $130,000 on St. John at Empire City.

• • • •

In Florida, on Sundays, you'll find most of these big players taking a busman's holiday—betting on the cock fights at Orlando. They have to keep in action.

• • • •

Mrs. Deering Howe, the former Polly Brooks, Washington, D. C., society girl, is the luckiest of race horse owners. She wanted to own a racing stable, but her husband, a Wall streeter, said she could have only one horse. So she bought a colt at Saratoga for $2,500, and to josh her hubby, she named him Only One. In about 30 races, Only One finished out of the money perhaps three times and won about $50,000. So her husband let her buy another hoss. She named the second colt Twice.

Max Kalik is one of the five big bookmakers of the land. The other four are Peter Blong, Tom Shaw, Johnny Ferrone and Benny Davis. In Kalik's book, you can bet a horse to finish fourth.

• • • •

Ed Wynn bet $150,000 of his own money on "Laugh, Parade." His performance in that musical earned him his first radio contract that grossed him $250,000.

• • • •

See Ed Sullivan in person on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater all week, starting Friday.

Postlude . . . .

By Ray C. B. Brown

Violin recital by Jan Kubelik (Rafael Kubelik, accompanist) in Shoreham Hotel yesterday afternoon. Program: Sonata in E major (Handel), Gavotte and Praeludium for violin alone (Bach), Concerto No. 4 in B flat major (Kubelik), Havanaise (Saint-Saens), Burleska (Suk), Polonaise in A major (Vieniavski), "Le Streghe" (Paganini).

Why Jan Kubelik, who is only 55, should seem to resemble more than any of his contemporaries the great violinists of a tradition beyond our century it is difficult to say. But there is in his mien and manner an aura of those virtuosi who were in their day regarded as magicians as well as musicians. Perhaps one imagines this likeness because in him an uncanny skill with fingers and bow has outlived the poesy of youth, because the dexterity and speed of his playing have a vitality of their own apparently detached from interpretative impulse.

An impersonality of style permeates his readings, whether of Bach or Handel or Paganini; he treats them all on a par as writers of compositions for an instrument whose secrets of technique he has so completely mastered that they are a second nature to him. His very tone is impersonal, as though he were concentrated on making abstract music. This may be all in one's fancy, yet the impression of aloofness persists. One remembers not a poet singing, but the embodiment of virtuosity performing.

The composition to which one looked forward with the greatest interest was Kubelik's fourth concerto, which was given its first hearing in Washington. While it contains material considerably engrossing, it also demonstrates his detachment from his epoch, for it might well have been composed at the height of the romantic period. Bristling with technical difficulties, it is a concerto for the expert only; embued with a rhetorical spirit no longer in the mode, it is retrospective music.

The first movement, a trifle too long, is rhapsodic in character and its themes have a distinct flolk flavor. In the second movement, Quasi una Ballatta, the voice is that of Byron and the hands are those of Kubelik. The final rondo is highly spirited and dashing, with more than a suggestion of Lisztian diablerie.

One's feeling that in Kubelik one is hearing consummate virtuosity from which living poetry is withdrawn was emphasized in the concluding show pieces. The Vieniavski polonaise was cold, for all its ardor of movement, and in "Le Streghe" the wizardry of Paganni's fingering was foremost in execution, with the result that the tonal purity suffered, particularly in the double-stopped harmonics. In fact, Kubelik's tone throughout the recital was subject to sudden roughness and to disconcerting, if infinitesimal, lapses in pitch.

Louisiana State-T.C.U. Game Arranged for New Orleans Jan. 1

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

MISTER ALAN GOULD, general sports editor of the Associated Press, is calling the class to order again. Once a year, when the heat of competition subsides and the dull season sets in, we guys who toil for papers affiliated with the A. P. are quizzed by Mister Gould as to our impressions of the outstanding this-or-that that has happened since Mister Gould's last quiz about a year ago.

POVICH.

Armed with our reactions, Mister Gould thereupon writes some powerful pieces during the holiday season lapse in competition that give the Nation's fans a backward look at the high spots of the fading year. Currently, Mister Gould is propounding to us seven questions, which, what with columns coming tough these days, this department is pleased to detail along with my own impressions.

Mister Gould talking: (1). "Who, in your opinion, were the three outstanding performers among men in any sport, amateur or professional, listed in the order of preference?"

Well, now, that's easy. Right off the bat I give you Jesse Owens, Joe Louis and Andy Pilney. If there was any feat to surpass Owens' smashing of three world's track and field records and his tying of a fourth on the same day, as he did last summer, it escaped me. The Ohio State Negro ran the 200 meters faster than it had ever been run before; he skimmed the low hurdles better than they had ever been skimmed before; he broad-jumped farther than any man in the world had been able to jump, and he tied the 100-meter dash record on the same afternoon.

After Owens, another Negro, Joe Louis, comes first. Any guy who, unknown a year ago, could knock out Primo Carnera and Max Baer within the period of three months rates some kind of an award. Number 3 in the individual heroism line during the past year, to my way of thinking, was Andy Pilney, the Notre Dame back, who almost single-handedly led the Irish to the two final-period touchdowns that wiped out Ohio State's lead before 90,000 at Columbus.

AND now, Gould is querying again: "(2). Who, in your opinion, were the three outstanding individual performers among women in any sport?"

Well, I'm thinking of Glenna Collett Vare, who came out of three years' retirement from the links to regain the United States women's title which she last won in 1930; of Helen Wills Moody, who emerged from an enforced retirement two years ago to win the women's tennis championship of the world at Wimbledon after being 1 point away from defeat at the hands of Helen Jacobs in the second set, and of Katherine Rawls, who won four United States swimming championships in one night.

"(3). What, in your opinion, were the three outstanding teams in any sport, amateur or professional?"

Quick, now, let me see—The Chicago Cubs, Southern Methodist's football team and the Detroit Tigers. I like the Cubs for the way they put together 21 straight victories to win the National League pennant at a time when everybody except the Cubs thought they were hopelessly out of it; I like Southern Methodist because they dared to gamble and won with a pass on fourth down against Texas Christian when failure might have cost 'em the Rose Bowl invitation, and I like the Tigers because, with their big shot, Hank Greenberg, out of the line-up after the first two games of the World Series, they won three out of the next four and the series from the Cubs.

"(4). What, in your opinion, were the three leading comebacks in individual competition among either men or women, amateur or professional?"

That's easy. No. 1 comeback: Jimmy Braddock, who, on the relief rolls a year ago, found the courage to resume a ring campaign that saw him win the world's title from Max Baer despite the 10-to-1 odds against him. No. 2 comeback: Glenna Collett. No. 3 comeback: Coach Matty Bell, of Southern Methodist, who two years ago was out of a job after being fired by Texas U.

THE curious Mister Gould is still asking questions: "(5). What, in your opinion, were the three most surprising results in any sport, team or individual (apart from any answer included in previous topic)?"

If he's really asking me, why (1) Southern Methodist's invitation to represent the "East" in the Rose Bowl; (2) The failure of either the Giants or the Cardinals to win the National League pennant, and (3) The fear that Max Baer carried into the ring with him against Joe Louis.

That man still wants to know: "(6). What were the principal trends or changes in sport, if any?"

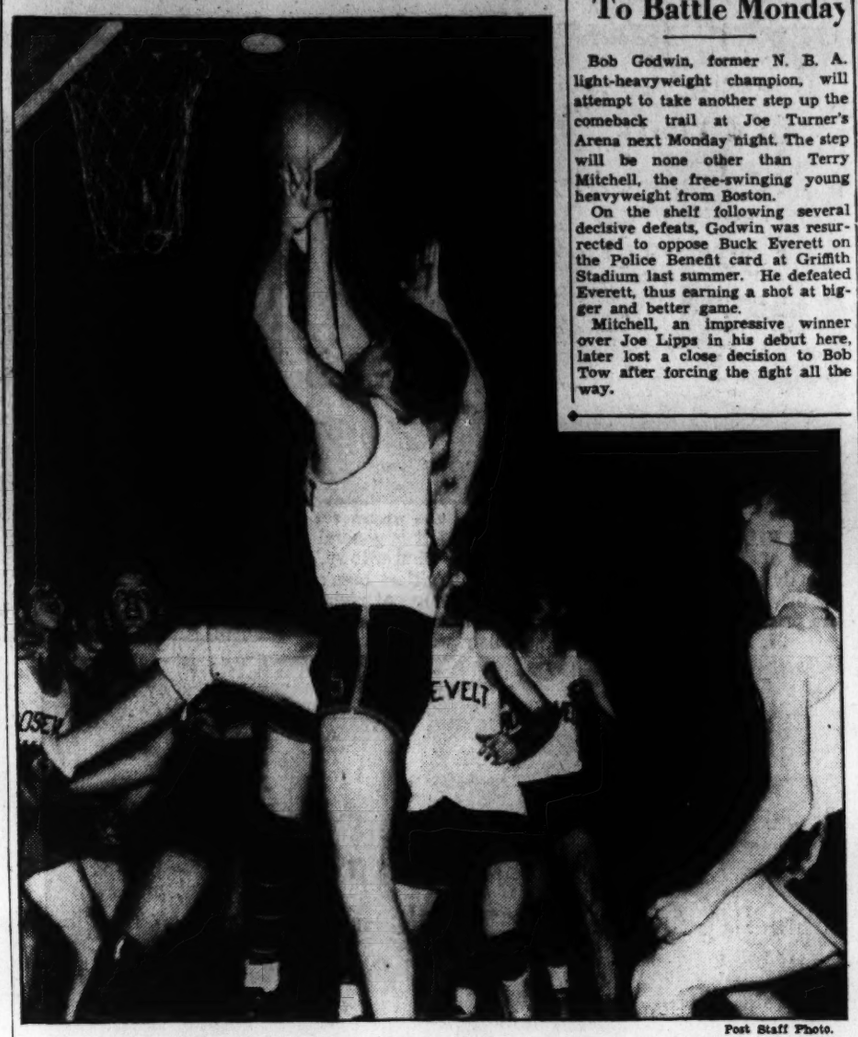
I'd say the surprising domination of Negroes in track and field and their rise in the prize ring; the liberal use of the lateral pass in football and pro football's growing grip on the imagination of the public.

And now: "(7). What was the oddest happening in competition?"

Well, it wasn't exactly competition, but it was as close to it as any guy could comfortably come, so I nominate as the oddest occurrence the uninvited presence of the fan who lined up on the Dartmouth side against Princeton in Palmer Stadium a few Saturday's ago. The incident will stand forever as a new high in fan interest.

Class dismissed.

Two Points for Roosevelt



Post Staff Photo.

Spiro Kolius, high-scoring forward of the Roosevelt High School quintet, overcomes a slight bit of interference from a Bethesda-Chevy Chase High guard to score a field goal in the third quarter. Roosevelt won, 24 to 21, with Kolius scoring 8 points.

Roosevelt Five Wins Opener, 24 to 21

3 Points in Last Minute Beat Bethesda Team; Kolius Is Leader.

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE high school basket ball season and Coach Herman Littman's new court regime at Roosevelt High opened simultaneously yesterday, with the Rough Riders booming along to an impressive 24-to-21 victory over Bethesda-Chevy Chase High at the Roosevelt gym.

With one minute to play the teams were tied at 21-21, Bethesda-Chevy Chase having pulled up from a 4-point deficit on a sleeper shot by its flashy Bob Harris and a fast one-hander by Ray Stone. Frank Lozupone, long-shot ace of the Montgomery County champions, missed one of his specialty shots, however, and Roosevelt took the lead when Ed Thompson sank a free toss after being fouled by Woody Putnam, burly Bethesda-Chevy Chase guard.

Kolius Sinks Goal.

The Marylanders, a fast-passing combination, quickly took the offensive and were bent for what appeared to be a basket when big Frances Beamer, Roosevelt's football star, broke it up and fired a pass to Capt. Harry Silverman far down the floor. Silverman, in turn, passed to Spiro Kolius, high scorer for the day, and the other Roosevelt grid star sank the two-pointer which put the game away in the closing moments.

Littman, former New York University flash, had reason to contemplate with satisfaction the first product of his coaching efforts. Passing and shooting with a zip, zest and accuracy hardly consistent with customary early-season form, Roosevelt proceeded to defeat one of the strongest teams of the Washington area, a team good enough last year to be invited to the Washington and Lee tournament and advance to the semifinals of that schoolboy classic.

Lack Sustained Drive.

Three of last season's first-stringers were again in uniform for the Marylanders but they lacked the sustained scoring drive to turn back the veteran Rough Riders.

Godwin, Mitchell To Battle Monday

Bob Godwin, former N. B. A. light-heavyweight champion, will attempt to take another step up the comeback trail at Joe Turner's Arena next Monday night. The step will be none other than Terry Mitchell, the free-swinging young heavyweight from Boston.

On the shelf following several decisive defeats, Godwin was resurrected to oppose Buck Everett on the Police Benefit card at Griffith Stadium last summer. He defeated Everett, thus earning a shot at bigger and better game.

Mitchell, an impressive winner over Joe Lipps in his debut here, later lost a close decision to Bob Tow after forcing the fight all the way.

'Schmeling to K. O. Braddock For Title, Beat Louis'—Jacobs

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Joe Jacobs, that master of syntax and self-expression, took a couple of deep pulls on a ferocious-looking stogie and the glowing tip made heavyweight boxing picture stand out like a neon sign.

This is how it looks to the yussel mussel:

His client, Max Schmeling—due here Thursday from Germany—first will chase Braddock off the throne in June (with a short right-hand punch) and then meet Louis in September in a contest that will draw the biggest gates of all time, $2,000,000.

Joe isn't sure about that figure. It may go even higher.

"There's just no telling," shrugged the black uhlan's mentor, "what a Schmeling-Louis fight will draw, after Schmeling's knocked out James J. Braddock. To my way of thinking, that's what will happen."

The black-haired former champion, 29 years old and in brilliant condition, according to his manager, will precipitate a fight as soon as his ship pulls into quarantine.

The battle, Jacobs thinks, will be between Mike Jacobs, impresario of the Twentieth Century Club—which has the Brown Bomber sewed up, lock, stock and barrel—and James Joy Johnston, Madison Square Garden's "boy bandit," in control of the fighting destinies of Champion Braddock.

"Max ain't going to talk no business there on the boat," opines his manager. "They'll just say 'hello'

Texas Eleven Faces Dixie Champion

L. S. U. Unbeaten Since Opener; Rivals Also Lost Only One,

Conference's Approval Seen Likely for Louisiana.

By the United Press.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 3.—Texas Christian and Louisiana State Universities have received formal invitation to play in New Orleans' New Years Day "Sugar Bowl" game, it was announced tonight.

Texas Christian University officials have accepted the offer. Louisiana State also has agreed, making its acceptance provisional on approval of Southeastern Conference officials.

Both teams were defeated once during the season, L. S. U. by Rice in its first game and T. C. U. by Southern Methodist last week.

The announcement was made by Warren V. Miller, president of the Midwinter Sports Association, sponsors of the game.

Stadium Seats 36,000.

The game will be played in Tulane Stadium, which seats 36,000. A sports carnival will precede the game.

Miller said the invitation to T. C. U. was extended to Athletic Director L. C. Wright, who was reached by telephone at Texline, Tex. He was en route with his team to California where T. C. U. closes its season Saturday against Santa Clara University.

Officials here were of the opinion that the Southeastern Conference's permission for Louisiana State to engage in the post-season game would be a mere formality. The Southwest Conference, of which T. C. U. is a member, last year voted blanket approval of such conferences.

Fordham, N. Y. U. Decline.

New York, Dec. 3 (U.P.).—Both New York University and Fordham have declined to play in post-season Southern football games, it was revealed today.

Fordham had received a "feeler" for a game in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans and N. Y. U. one for the Orange Bowl at Miami.

Jack Coffee, Fordham graduate manager of athletics, said:

"While appreciating the consideration shown Fordham University, the Very Rev. Aloisius J. Hogan, president, has informed the committee (Sugar Bowl) that he does not approve of Fordham's participation."

Miami Seeks Villanova.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 3 (U.P.).—Officials arranging a North-South football game here for New Years Day struggled through negotiations today without success.

It appeared the committee was favoring Vanderbilt against Villanova. Both schools have expressed interest.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—College football turnstiles, registering a steady upturn since the depression "low" of 1932, clicked off substantial increases in attendance for the 1935 season. The gains ranged as high as 40 per cent in some noteworthy instances, but the increase for the country as a whole probably did not exceed 10 per cent.

According to figures obtained in a Nation-wide Associated Press poll, 29 out of 47 major colleges enjoyed increased attendance. The remaining 18 either reported decreases or that they were "about even" with 1934. A policy of secrecy concerning attendance was revealed at several institutions, including Columbia.

The gains generally were more marked along the Eastern seaboard during one of the sport's most exciting seasons, but the Middle West and Far West also contributed heavily to the attendance figures. The South counted its biggest football crowd of all time when 46,880 saw Duke upset North Carolina at Durham on November 16. A record Rocky Mountain crowd of 25,-

Stanford Wins 5 Places on Star Team

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 3.—Stanford University's Rose Bowl-bound football team placed five players on the Associated Press' All-Pacific Coast varsity eleven for 1935.

Selections were the consensus of 71 sports writers, coaches and officials accounting for the heaviest balloting since the first mythical team was picked in 1925.

James ("Monk") Moscrip, Stanford's field-goal-kicking end, climaxed seasonal play by making the team for the third successive year, an achievement no other player has accomplished.

Two of his teammates, Fullback Bobby Grayson and Tackle Bob Reynolds, were named for the second straight time, and two others, Guard Larry Rouble and Center Wes Muller, earned places to complete a Stanford landslide of All-Star roles.

Mahoney Receives Anti-Nazi 'Mandate'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 3.—A resolution calling upon American athletes to refuse to participate in the 1936 Olympic Games in Germany and upon the Amateur Athletic Union to register its vote in favor of American non-participation at its annual convention this week, was presented at a public meeting sponsored by the Committee on Fair Play in Sports tonight.

The resolution, presented by George Gordon Battle, chairman of the committee, and accepted by Jeremiah T. Mahoney, A. A. U. president, as "a mandate to the Amateur Athletic Union," strongly condemned the action of the American Olympic committee and of Gen. Charles H. Sherrill, of Chicago, in supporting American participation.

"Last December, when I accepted the presidency of the A. A. U. with reluctance," Mahoney said, "it was my intention to relinquish the office at the end of the year. Today I am ready to make any personal sacrifice to insure the winning of this fight for clean and honorable and democratic sports."

Braddock Quits Tour; Is Reported Injured

Phoenix, Ariz., Dec. 3 (A.P.).—James J. Braddock, world's heavyweight boxing champion, left by train today for New York, abandoning an exhibition tour through the Southwest.

It was reported here Braddock was suffering from an injured ligament, but the champion and his party were already en route and could not be reached immediately.

Maryland Betting Far Exceeds 1934

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Dec. 3.—Betting at the four major race tracks in Maryland during the season just closed exceeded the 1934 total by $1,893,180.

Figures submitted to the State racing commission today showed that the betting total for Pimlico, Havre de Grace, Laurel and Bowie this year was $27,200,977. Last year it was $25,307,797.

The figures by tracks:

Havre de Grace, this year $6,687,329, last year $5,977,416; Laurel, this yera $6,134,470, last year $5,566,149; Pimlico, this year $7,892,683, last year $7,578,500; Bowie, this year $6,486,495, last year $6,185,732.

The State levies a tax of 1 per cent on betting, $6,000 per day on tracks and 15 per cent on net revenue of the tracks.

Informed by Mack Of Sale, Says Foxx

How Many Times Do You Light the Same Cigar?

Absorbed in conversation—intent upon something else—many a smoker forgets his cigar for the moment, only to find it out when he turns to the cigar again.

But not with El Producto! El Producto holds its fire—sure sign of Quality. It is not uncommon for an El Producto smoker to lay aside his cigar for five—or even ten minutes—and find it still burning when ready to resume.

That is due to choice expensive tobaccos, in the first place, and the way the filler leaves are arranged to aid free burning. Just a little point in Quality cigar making, but an indication of just how magnificently El Producto provides for every phase of real enjoyment in cigar smoking.

You'll find the uncopyable El Producto blend both in slender, streamline shapes and full-bodied perfecto sizes. 10c to 25c.

Favors Princeton Over Minnesota; Powers Says, 'No!'

Technically, the two teams of the East and West, the University of Leland Stanford, and the University of Southern Methodist, will have it out for the national football championship in Pasadena on New Year's Day. But what they are talking about back East here, and what everyone would really like to know is who would win what a great many suspect is the real football championship of the country, if Princeton and Minnesota were to hook up in a game. Such a game seems to be a physical impossibility, although that seems silly. The public has been supporting Princeton and Minnesota all year and the schools could well afford to give the public a treat in return. But they can't stop all the talk. The only relief seems to be for Paul Gallico to take the Princeton side, and Jimmy Powers the Minnesota side. Both are special correspondents of The Post.

Gallico says:

It seems like a considerable crust for a gentleman with my season's selections to be picking Princeton to beat a team I have never seen, Minnesota, but then I have had my moments. Let's take figures first—Princeton scored 256 points and had 32 scored against her. Princeton's goal line was crossed five times. Minnesota scored 194, and had 46 piled up on the debit side, yielding seven touchdowns. All right, the opposition was entirely different, but I don't think that Minnesota had a much tougher schedule in her own league than did Princeton. And it should be mentioned in fairness to Minnesota that Princeton played one more game than did Minnesota. But there was no undue strength in the Midwest outside of Notre Dame and Ohio State which were not on Minnesota's schedule.

Lou Little, probably the best football mind in the East, thinks that Princeton would win on speed and brains. If two teams are alike in strength, the faster team will win. We all saw what speed in football could do in the Ohio State-Notre Dame, and Southern Methodist-Texas Christian games. The team that gets off the mark the fastest will pick up 2 yards right then and there on every other play, or 4 yards in a series of four downs. There has rarely been such a set of fine backs assembled on one team, or as fast and versatile, as Sandbach, Jack White, Gary Levan, Paul Pauk, Pep Constable and Homer Spoffard. Add to that the best end I have seen in many years, Gil, Lea and an All-America guard, John Weller and you have a team that can go places under any conditions.

But the thing that sold me once and for all on Princeton was seeing the team go to town and score four touchdowns against an unbeaten, untied team, under the foulest weather conditions in which ever two major teams hooked up. It was the kind of day where a fumble or a blocked kick was enough to decide the issue, but on that greasy field Princeton scored FOUR times on straight football, and came from behind to do it.

Powers says:

Nuts to all this fancy stuff. Football is a game where a lotta big geezers stand up and butt each other over the landscape. I agree that Princeton is smart and fast, but Minnesota is also smart and fast and when those big Swedes slip that clutch into low they grind out first downs like sausages. Roscoe, Beise, Uram and Levoir would plow those amazed Princetons smack back over their own goal line. I mean it. Minnesota murders a team—especially in the last quarter. The enemy then is so groggy you can't catch those Gopher backs with motorcycles. Look at the record. While the Tigers were feeding on such softies as Cornell, Navy, Harvard, Lehigh, Yale and Rutgers, those sod busters out West were colliding with Nebraska, Purdue, Iowa, Northwestern and Michigan, all Tarzans. I think Minnesota would win by two touchdowns. I'd bet the bankroll on it.

Of course, a chappie must watch himself to see that his hometown rah-rah blood pressure doesn't blow a fuse. But giving this Minnesota-Princeton game a fish eye I still can't see the Tigers. The Big Ten plays better ball than the Ivy League; the squads are bigger; more money is spent on 'em; the teams are often perilously close to being pros from stem to stern. Minnesota is ideally situated geographically. It drains off, without competition, the best young athletes flourishing on the vast prairies. Minnesota is undefeated and untied in two years—and that isn't an accident. Minnesota turned out the best power plunger ever to sink his noodle into a professional line—Bronco Nagurski. And then there was Stan Kostka, and now it's Beise and those All-American linemen of '35, Wilkinson and Widseth. They're good.

Minnesota is coldly efficient. Don't let anyone tell you the club is beefy and brainless. It mixes power and deception. Ask Jock Sutherland at Pitt. Ask Noble Kizer at Purdue. Ask Harry Kipke at Michigan. Ask any coach or scout whose bread and butter doesn't come from a pay roll in the East. They'll tell you Minnesota has the toughest bunch of hombres they've ever seen come clumping out of a dressing room door. Princeton might score in the first half, but in the second that vicious blocking, tackling and pounding would slow 'em down and make 'em look like something dropped into a hamburger grinder. And you ought to see Roscoe and Uram juggle that ball. In their last game Roscoe took the kick-off, zigzagged to his 45, flipped the leather over his shoulder to Uram, who skipped 55 yards for a touchdown.

$75,000 in Prizes Lures Nation's Best Stars Into Tourneys.

By the United Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Prominent professionals from all sections were moving south tonight to join the golfing caravan which starts trekking over winter's "golden trail" Thursday at Orlando, Fla.

With the tournament business booming again and with approximately $75,000 expected to be offered in prize money along the route—from Nassau, Bahamas, to Catalina Island—the trail should be golden indeed for linksmen who turn in good seasons.

Eighteen tourneys already are slated, studding the calendar between now and mid-April, and three or four others are expected to be scheduled to fill in during the somewhat sterile month of February. These February meetings may be held in Phoenix, Houston, San Antonio and New Orleans.

Cream of the Crop.

The cream of the crop of America's low-scoring professionals will make the journey, including such well known linksmen as Sam Parks, National Open champion and head pro at the Miami-Biltmore; Johnny Revolta, P. G. A. champion; Gene Sarazan, Billy Burke, Craig Wood, Paul Runyan, Horton Smith, Denny Shute, Dick Metz, Ky Lafoon and Harry Cooper.

A field of 118 is entered in the $2,000 Orlando Open which begins Thursday and runs for three days.

Topping the program is the $10,000 Miami-Biltmore Open December 14-17.

Another big event is the $5,000 Masters' Open at Augusta, Ga., April 2-5—the only tournament in which Bobby Jones, retired "Grand Slam," plays each year.

Here are the other tournaments:

December 9-11—$2,000 Sarasota Open.
December 20-22—$5,000 British Colonial Open at Nassau.
December 27-30—$4,000 Pasadena Open.
January 3-5—$2,500 Miami Open.
January 3-5—$3,000 Riverside Open.
January 7-8—$2,000 Palm Springs Open.
January 10-12—$5,000 Los Angeles Open.
January 16-19—$3,000 Sacramento Open.
January 23-26—$4,500 San Francisco Open.
January 28-31—$5,000 Catalina Open.
February 29-March 1—West Coast Open at Bellair.
March 5-8—Miami Four-ball.
March 12-15—St. Augustine Amateur-Pro Best-ball.
March 18-21—$3,500 Charleston Open.
March 24-26—North and South, Pinehurst.
April 10-13—$4,000 Atlanta Open (tentative).

Colleges Report Attendance Rise

660 saw Colorado beat Denver on Thanksgiving Day.

Notre Dame, with its best team in five years, proved the country's biggest drawing card by a big margin. The Irish helped attract 483,018 fans in nine games. This represented a big jump over their 1934 mark of 357,000 for eight contests.

Navy Outdraws Army.

For the first time on record Navy outdrew Army. The Midshipmen played before 399,000 in nine games, while the Cadets attracted 354,000 in the same number of engagements. Last year the figures were 325,000 for Army and 309,000 for Navy.

Princeton, thanks to the interest in its unbeaten campaign, showed a tremendous increase. The Tigers drew 306,000 in nine games, as compared with 175,000 in eight contests a year ago. Yale also registered a substantial gain, with 362,000 for nine games, 100,000 more than the Elis attracted in eight contests last year.

California's Golden Bears displaced Southern California as the Pacific Coast's No. 1 drawing card. Attendance at ten games in which the Bears participated was estimated at 394,000.

Ohio State and Minnesota were rivals for attendance honors in the Big Ten, with the Bucks enjoying a slight margin, thanks to the capacity crowd of 81,018 that paid to see the Notre Dame thriller at Columbus.

RIVERS J. MORRELL.

Guard Formerly Attended Southern California.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 3.—Naval Academy athletic authorities announced today that Midshipman Rivers J. Morrell, jr., of Los Angeles, Calif., right guard of the Navy football team, has been elected captain for 1936.

Morrell, who succeeds Midshipman Louis B. Robertshaw, of Haverford, Pa., this year's captain and center, formerly attended the University of Southern California before entering the academy.

The new football leader, Navy's outstanding guard, who won his "N" star in 1934 against Army, is 21, stands 5 feet 11 inches and weighs 183 pounds.

Race Tightened In Columbia Pin Loop

THE race for the pennant in the Columbia Heights League was tightened considerably last night at the Arcadia when the pace-setting Hessick Coal team dropped the odd game to the Highway Engineers. The Coalmen's advantage dropped to two games over Arcadia and Highway, who are tied for second honors.

"Doc" Parks, whose consistent shooting has featured the rise of the Arcadia team, spilled the maples for a 155 game to put his team in the running with two wins over Logan Motor Co. Paul Harrison's 393 set was tops for the night. Team game and set laurels were annexed by Arcadia with 627 and 1,766, respectively. Other results were Ambassador Laundry's clean sweep over Vincent Barbers and Bovello Plumbers' odd-game decision over Gallegher & Huguley. "Red" Megaw's sensational average of 129-16 was not menaced by Eddie Espey when the latter faltered with a 323 set.

Though winning the second half of its intercity match with the John Marshall Statesmen, of Richmond, the Recreation team of Washington failed to equal the Southerners' total pinfall by 14 pins. The Statesmen's 42-pin lead accumulated in the first meeting on their home alleys was too much for the local team.

Keller Memorial carried away the honors in the Ladies' Lutheran League last night at Arcadia, topping the team scoring with a 449-game and 1,313 set. Vogel's 116 game and H. Wertman's 297 set were the best individual efforts.

Devitt's Rival Beaten Once In 2 Years

Fork Union Has Defeated All Other Prep Foes; Stars in Duel.

THE prestige of Ford Union Military Academy, the Virginia Prep School championship football team which will meet Devitt Prep at Richmond Saturday, was enhanced several degrees yesterday when it was learned that the Kaydets have lost but one prep school game in two years, a 6-to-0 conflict to Staunton Military in 1933.

The Virginians have an individual star whose record appears of a quality akin to that of Devitt's famous Adam Zinkievich. The Fork Union wonder, Quarterback Phil DeMurrio, runs, kicks and passes with equal facility and has been the chief offensive strength of the careening cadets all season.

With Zinkievich romping around in a Devitt uniform and DeMurrio loose in behalf of the Fork Union cause, a merry individual feud as well as team battle is more or less promised.

After losing its first game to the William and Mary Freshmen, 6 to 0, Fork Union proceeded to beat National Farm School, 26 to 0; Woodberry Forest, 12 to 0; Hampden-Sydney's "B" team, 24 to 7; Augusta Military, 27 to 0; Fishburne's championship-bound eleven, 18 to 13 and Hargrave Military, 20 to 6. Staunton tied the Forkers and Naval Training School, a team playing a college schedule, turned in a 24 to 0 win over the schoolboys.

Schmeling to Beat Braddock, Is Claim and I'll get ahold of him to talk things over here in my office.

"I sent for him to come here. There was a lot of bunk, stories he would never come here and stuff like that. Mike Jacobs give out a statement how he's going over to talk to Schmeling about a Louis match. All right, so he don't have to go: I'll bring him here."

The kussell says he already has two offers, one from Jacobs for a Louis-Schmeling battle in June and another from the Garden for a Braddock-Schmeling championship bout at the same time. Schmeling can't make both dates.

"I want that Braddock fight first. I think he'll knock him out. I seen Mr. Schmeling against Neusel and Hamas and I figure he'll be the only champion who ever won the title back. He 'rooned' that Neusel; That's why he was no good here against Carnera.

"And Mr. Hamas! He damn near killed him. There's a question if he'll ever fight again. After Schmeling took him in eight rounds in Hamburg in March, Hamas went to a sanitarium in Berlin for four weeks. In all them fights he showed as good a form as when he knocked out Stribling and Risko.

"I saw every one of his fights over there. I went over every time and I know. He's had more fights in the last two years than he's done in the last five. May, 1934, he fought Paulino in Barcelona; he gave him a terrible licking. They called the fight a draw, but Max won 11 out of the 12 rounds. He beat him again in Berlin this July."

Joe isn't worried about Louis and asserts his fighter isn't either.

"Of all the heavies, and that takes in Louis, too," he said, "Schmeling is the only one who has still got a punch. He's the only one who's got a chance to lick Louis, the one punch, that short right hand. He's got the thing he can do it with. And he's the one guy to give him the damndest fight of his life.

"He's one guy who ain't afraid of this Bomber, either, He's got plenty of guts, too."

Schmeling will remain here a fortnight and then return to his $100,000 home on the outskirts of Berlin to spend Christmas with his bride, the German actress, Anny Ondra. He'll see the Louis-Uzcudun fight here December 13. "I figure it's a good chance for him to size up Louis; he's never seen him"—and return to Germany until the summer.

Danno Opposes Mr. Donovan First Time

It'll Be Case of Irish Whip Against the Irish Flip Tomorrow Night.

By George Considine.

WHAT happens when an Irish Whip meets an Irish Flip will be disclosed to the hoped-for satisfaction of all tomorrow night at Joe Turner's newly launched arena as Danno O'Mahoney risks his world wrestling championship against Jack Donovan. It will mark the first time that the erring sons of Erin have crossed paths.

Even though they might sound alike and look alike in print, there is quite a difference in the execution of the Whip and the Flip, but the respective fortes of O'Mahoney and Donovan do have something in common. To begin with, the successful execution of either weapon is physically impossible—a point which, in wrestling, is very much in their favor.

Take Leisurely Stroll.

Let us first scrutinize the Irish Whip. After the match has worn 23 minutes off the prescribed 27. O'Mahoney and his opponents get up and stretch in a manner reminiscent of the home team's half of the seventh inning. Well, done with their stretching, O'Mahoney and his opponent shoot each other a sidelong glance and leisurely stroll toward each other.

The Irish Whip is now almost in full stride. Opponent genially extends right hand, which O'Mahoney takes with his right hand. The boys then take the first few steps of a minuet, moving back and forth across the ring. O'Mahoney turns his back on his opponent, drops to a half-sitting position and the opponent either jumps or is thrown over O'Mahoney's right shoulder, thus allowing the customers to go home and get some sleep.

Gets Kittenish.

The Irish Flip, however, comes to pass as follows: Donovan gets kittenish when the crowd gets restless and rides Piggy Backy. Opponent doesn't like Piggy Backy half as much as Railroad Man, so he gets down on hands and knees at the same time keeping his head between Donovan's legs. With Donovan leading and the opponent pushing, the gents frolic around the ring. It is a beautiful picture.

That might go on for 5 or 6 minutes, depending upon the mood of the artists. Everybody laughs for a while but the game gets on the nerves before long. After complete boredom has set in, Donovan stands on his hands and holds his opponent perpendicular to the mat. Both men somersault, Donovan succeeding in pinning his own shoulders. In the confusion the referee awards the verdict to Donovan.

Class dismissed. Here comes the keeper.

5 From Stanford On All-Star Team

to retain All-America honors gained last year, polled the heaviest vote. Seventy of 71 pickers named him for the backfield.

For the second successive season, University of Southern California, once predominant in the All-Star selections, failed to place a man on the first team.

This year's eleven also was marked by the absence of players from non-Pacific Coast Conference members, notably St. Mary's, Santa Clara, Gonzaga and Loyola.

One of the highlights of the season was the comeback of Larry Lutz, University of California tackle, who placed with a commanding vote. He made the 1933 team as a sophomore but was out-shadowed last year.

The 1935 team embraces weight and speed in the line, with a versatile, hard-charging set of backs. Quarterback Goddard, of Washington State; Halfbacks Cheshire, of the University of California at Los Angeles, and Haines, of Washington, and Fullback Grayson, are sharp passers as well as outstanding ball carriers. Goddard is a good punter.

Paul Menton to Speak At Cage Clinic Tonight

Interpretation of the 1935 basketball rules will be made tonight by Paul Menton, well-known Eastern official and sports writer, who will be the principal speaker at the opening session of a basketball clinic to be held at the Central Y. M. C. A. The meeting will begin at 8 o'clock.

Catholic University's varsity court team will help demonstrate plays affected by revisions in the rules. All local high school and college coaches are expected to attend.

Make Links Easier for Duffer, Says Designer, Capital Visitor

Post Staff Photo.
Arthur W. Tillinghast (right) and Mel Shorey, East Potomac Park golf professional.

By Dave Herman.

ARTHUR W. TILLINGHAST, one of the most famous golf architects in the country, designer of more than 500 courses, thinks golf should be made more pleasureable for the average player.

Here yesterday as ambassador of good will for the National Professional Golf Association, the 60-year-old silver-haired envoy declared that the duffer has been punished by severe and tightly trapped courses, and that "something is going to be done about it."

As doctor of the P. G. A. Course Clinic, a title created a few months ago by President George Jacobus, Tillinghast is making a Coast-to-Coast tour of clubs in an effort to bring about more harmony between professionals, greenkeepers and golf officials, and sell them on the idea of modernizing the courses to make them more attractive for the 100, 110 or 120 shooter.

"We feel we have been for many years treeing the wrong coon," he said. "Instead of camping on the trail of these unfortunates who top and slice, we should have been laying snares for those who knock around in par figures or better.

"A slice is punishment itself, and there is no reason for all these sand pits to add insult to injury," Tillinghast added. "American clubs are spending too much money to keep up what I call the 'golfers' headache.'"

Tillinghast said that crack professionals will excuse a faulty layout, but never the greens. "Therefore, I say no course is better than its greens," the P. G. A. doctor stated.

He continued:

"The real value of the hole is expressed by the greens and their contour. Eliminate the traps and hazards and a premium would be placed on accuracy to the green.

"The tendency now is toward smaller greens, and these are ever dangerous to the golfer under pressure.

"A definite program for standardizing courses has been formulated by the P. G. A. In it we hope to prevent unnecessary expenditure on courses, to eliminate some of the hazards that constitute a menace to the ordinary player."

Tillinghast, who constructed 10 courses where national championships have been held—among these Baltusrol, where the 1936 National Open will be staged; Five Farms, Fresh Meadow, Winged Foot and Ridgewood—said the day will come when all rough will be abolished.

Speaking of bunkers and sand traps, Tillinghast said:

"There are too many senseless traps in this country. Over in Scotland sand pits were products of nature—sand blown."

Yesterday he discussed the modernizing course plans with George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring; Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam, and Mel Shorey, of East Potomac, secretary of the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. In the spring he will return here for a gigantic get-together of the Middle Atlantic course clinic.

Practice Begun By G. W. High Girls Team

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Dec. 3.—George Washington High School's girls basket ball team will make its debut on Saturday, December 14, opposing the girls team of Lee-Jackson High, officials announced today. The game will be played in preliminary to the George Washington boys game with Washington-Lee High, which also is their opening game. The games will inaugurate the use of the new high school gymnasium here.

The girls got down to serious practice today. Twenty-four players comprise the squad at present, but this number will be cut to 12 before the opening game. Only four letter winners are back from last season's team, but several reserves are among the squad. The letter winners are Capt. Elizabeth Shaw, Gertrude Smith, Grace Mosher and Louise Rose. Two positions are open on the first team for Helen Smith, Marion Hicks, and Betty Miller are the leading candidates.

Roosevelt Quintet Wins Opener, 24-21

The young Roosevelt coach used 10 men, 6 of whom were lettermen last season.

The Rough Riders spotted their guests a 6-to-1 lead in the early going before finally hitting their stride to take a 10-to-8 lead by the close of the first half. Two baskets by Capt. Harry Silverman and a couple of fouls by Spiro Kolius, high-scorer of the day, pulled Roosevelt up from a 6-to-3 deficit at the end of the first quarter. While Roosevelt had been held scoreless from the floor in the first period, Bethesda-Chevy was held to one basket in the second, a long shot by Frank Lozupone.

A basket by Putnam again tied the count at the start of the second half but Roosevelt took the lead on a free shot by Thompson and was leading, 16 to 14, at the start of the last quarter. Kolius counting twice from the floor in the third period and Thompson once.

The teams will meet again January 27 at Bethesda.

Terror Passes Dangerous to Maryland

Terps' Star Backs Hope to Stop Westerners in Last Game Saturday.

WESTERN MARYLAND'S potent passing attack or Maryland's horde of backfield stars may decide the issue when the two tangle Saturday at Baltimore in their final game of the season, but if the meeting evolves into a test of lines the Terrors will have a decided edge in all but three positions.

Maryland, with capable Lou Ennis and Vic Willis at the flanks, can match the prowess of Lou Lassahn and Stan Benjamin, and its sophomore center, Frank DeArmey, will at least be equal to Bill Reith. But at guards and tackles the Terps are poor seconds.

Both Terror ends are adept pass receivers and with either out of the fray their team's chances of winning will suffer immeasurably. On defense they are human octopi, coming in fast to break up interference and giving the secondary a clear path for tackles. Big and rugged, they can go 60 minutes without breathing hard, and, most important of all, they have a winning complex.

Good on Defense.

Ennie probably isn't as good at snagging passes as either Western Maryland lad but defensively he might be able to show them a thing or two about position play. Willis is just as good defensively and better on the offensive. Both have proved their value in previous games.

DeArmey's play has been sensational for a rookie stepping into the regular line-up in mid-season. Since replacing Bill Andorka, who was declared ineligible more than a month ago, the Windber, Pa., sophomore has exceeded the most optimistic expectations of his coaches. It was a difficult task he faced, that of substituting for one of the best pivot men in the conference, but he has done well and seems to be improving with each game.

At guard, Maryland's Ed Minion and Bill Wolfe do not appear to be as strong as Tony Ortenzi and Ed McPherson, and Maryland's tackles have been notably weak this season while the Terrors are well fortified in this department. Stalfort, Callahan and Birkland have been the weakest links in the line.

Western Maryland's tackles, Capt. Nick Campofreda and Ferdy Fortham looked like All-Americans against Georgetown last week, and a repetition of that game is all they need to punch holes in Maryland's forward wall.

McAboy, Ex-Maryland Boxer Now on Staff, Saw Ringmen Eating Free—and Joined Them

By Lewis F. Atchison.

LITTLE TOMMY TUCKER sang for his supper, according to fable, but being no crooner it devolved upon Lyman McAboy to fight for his, and glove throwing produced the same gratifying results.

Now an assistant boxing coach in charge of freshmen at the University of Maryland, McAboy is enjoying a life of luxury as compared with the three previous years when he rose from the obscurity of ordinary campus life to become one of the most formidable middle weights in the Southern Conference.

A champion's crown never graced his brow, although he came so close to winning two it earned for him the sobriquet of hard luck champ among his fellow boxers. But he had a champion's spirit and he was recognized at the university as the best at his weight even though fate conspired to prevent him from achieving that distinction.

McAboy went to Maryland as an ordinary day-hop, boasting only a small reputation as a sandlot ballplayer. He had never donned a pair of padded mitts before entering the university and had not participated in more than the usual number of street fights that every youngster is entitled to. He was ill-equipped for a ring career.

But he noticed that members of the boxing team were fed at a training table, and most important of all—free of charge. That was inducement enough to turn his thoughts toward boxing.

He won the unofficial championship of Sigma Nu fraternity house in official style before reporting to Coach "Jazz" Harmony, and was a regular member of the Terp squad almost as soon as he stepped into the ring.

LYMAN McABOY.

In 1933 an aching tooth had to be removed the night before his first conference tournament bout, and prevented him from fighting, and in 1934 a gash over his eye hampered him in a championship bout with Stewart of Virginia, and he lost the nod. Last winter he and Al Mann, of Duke, reached the finals. McAboy had a broken hand and Mann a bad cut over the eye. Mann had decided to forfeit when he saw Mac report at the infirmary for treatment, so he continued in the lists and won without throwing a punch, as it was Mac who eventually had to forfeit.

Coaching the freshmen isn't a bad occupation, McAboy admitted yesterday, but it has its drawbacks. The team, for instance, must work out in the armory until after football when the gridmen's quarters will be given it. A few days ago Mac was intently showing his 115-pounder how to hit 'em in the brisket when the Girls Glee Club marched in and unceremoniously began to rehearse.

Practice the following day was interrupted by the drilling of an R. O. T. C. company, and the day after that the school band marched in for a rehearsal. Next a group of physical education students strung a net across the floor for a set of indoor tennis.

Mac stood up under the strain fairly well, but the greatest blow of all occurred when a group of wrestlers appeared on the scene and appropriated half of the boxing mat for their practice.

Worthington Wins Feature at Charles Town

Sullivan Up As Gelding Triumphs

Beats Lativich By Head, Pays $7.40 Mutuel; $104 Double.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN RACE TRACK, W. Va., Dec. 3.—Worthington, giant son of Wrack, returned to his favorite race track today after only fair success on the mile ovals, and ran away with the feature race. The gelding was only credited with a head margiin in the charts, but the old fellow was kidding his opposition most of the way. With Jockey Jimmie Sullivan, the Washington boy, in the saddle, Worthington was there in the few most important jumps and the $7.40 mutuel was as pleasing as if he had scored by a city block.

In the battle to the wire Lativich fought it out courageously, but could not resist the closing rush of the gelding owned by Miss Rhoda Christmas, of Upper Marlboro, Md. Four lengths away from the front runners came Little Argo to take third money in the field of seven.

A crowd of 2,500 watched the interesting program and betting was only a shade below opening day. Daily double stock rose abruptly and those who invested the usual $2 in Mazyniata and Lodorus cashed to the extent of $104.

Rides Confident Race.

To return to the feature, Jockey Sullivan rode a very confident race on Worthington, winner of four purses here last summer. At the break Little Argo bounded to the front and Sullivan took in wraps on Worthington. Even when Little Argo gave way to Lativich as the pace setter, Sullivan still held tight reins on Worthington. However, once straightened out in the stretch, Sullivan went to the drive and Worthington responded with the rush that wore down Lativich.

Paul Junior, a favorite ridden by Ray Booker, the diminutive colored boy, won going away in the first race over the sprint course, 120 feet more than 6 furlongs. The son of Sun Edwin had a margin of a half-length on Gay Lass, a fast finisher. Third money went to Kathleen F.

Sammy Palumbo and the horse Mazyniata teamed to take the second race at a $21.20 mutuel. The ancient mare, a daughter of Mayne, was hustled to the front at the break and made every post a winning one, to have plenty of daylight to spare on Grace Bunting, the odds-on favorite, at the wire.

Lodorus, a popular filly on the smaller tracks, made a show of her field in the third race, winning as Jockey Willie Hilly pleased. Kept out of trouble while within striking distance of the leaders, Lodorus cut through on the rail entering the stretch and merely toyed with her opposition thereafter. Trylubria was second and Ardawn third. Lodorus paid $9.

Tell It, owned by Mrs. A. W. Getz, hopped to the front in the first hundred yards and made every post a winning one for the remainder of the fourth race. Capably ridden by Jockey J. Leonard, Tell It paid $5.40 in the role of favorite.

Tuyleries Star surprised with a victory in the sixth race at a $20.40 mutuel. Ridden by Palumbo, Tuyleries Star bore out in the stretch drive with Scout On, but the stewards failed to allow Jockey Sullivan's claim of a foul.

The largest individual mutuel of the meeting came in the day's finale. Vennie H. led all the way to pay $77.80.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PAUL, JR., $3.00, $2.40, $2.20; GAY LASS, $8.80, $6.20; KATHLEEN F., $3.20.

PAUL, JR., outrun for the first half-mile, improved his position on the outside, came strongly when straightened into the home stretch and was up in the last 20 yards. GAY LASS, slow to gain full stride, circled her field and finished in determined fashion. KATHLEEN F. went prominently in the early racing, responded to strong pressure and fought it out willingly. JUSTA FLIGHT had a lot taken out of him racing TRUTHFULLY into defeat and she weakened nearing the finish. TRUTHFULLY tired after a half-mile. LAURA V. ran out badly at the first turn and was eliminated.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 1:58. Off at 2:00. Winner, A. H. Utterback's b. m. (a), by Mayne—Juniata. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:15, 1:18 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAZYNIATA, $21.20, $4.80, $3.40; GRACE BUNTING, $2.20, $2.20; TUNEFUL, $4.60.

MAZYNIATA sprinted into command going to the first turn, went along under slight reserve while setting the pace, then came out nicely when shaken up for the final drive. GRACE BUNTING followed in closest attendance of the winner from the start, but was held safe when the final test came. TUNEFUL forced in here on the outside to better her position, finished with excellent courage after going into a forward position. HARD CHASE began quickly. She fell back leaving the back stretch, then came with a belated rush in the late stages. JILTED weakened. HURDY GURDY lost ground.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:24. Off at 2:25½. Winner, Mrs. H. Hutchison's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LODORUS, $9.00, $4.60, $3.60; TRYLUBRIA, $4.40, $4.00; ARDAWN, $3.00.

LODORUS moved up steadily after settling in her stride on the back stretch, secured racing room on the inside of the leaders to take command nearing the home stretch then held TRYLUBRIA safe at the close. TRYLUBRIA, hustled from the start, held on with good courage after forcing the pace. ARDAWN was hard ridden for the entire trip. COAT TAILS closed gamely after trailing his field. DOUBTLESS was unable to enter contention at any stage. RED WARRIOR showed good speed for five furlongs, then tired badly. RUNNING WATER was done early.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:49. Off at 2:51½. Winner, Mrs. A. W. Getz' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TELL IT, $5.40, $3.00, $2.80; NEVER IDOL $12.40, $4.40; FLAGEOLET, $2.60.

TELL IT outran his field to the first turn, drew into an easy lead when straightened into the back stretch, then held sway for the balance of the trip. NEVER IDOL worked her way up steadily on the outside after reaching the back stretch, came gamely in the final drive and outstayed FLAGEOLET. Latter, chased alone in closest pursuit of the pacemaker, could not gain when hard pushed and failed to stall off NEVER IDOL. BONNIE CAIN could not improve his position at any stage. MARGE lacked speed and was never a factor. BLACK DREAMS began tiring after three furlongs. JUSTA GLOW had brief early speed.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:17. Off at 3:17½. Winner, R. Christmas' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WORTHINGTON, $7.40, $5.20, $4.40; LATIVICH, $11.20, $5.80; LITTLE ARGO, $3.20.

WORTHINGTON, rated forwardly for the first six furlongs, went to the outside when engaging the leaders withstood a hard drive willingly and was up in the last few strides. LATIVICH was hurried into contention soon after the start, disposed of LITTLE ARGO midway of the back stretch, saved ground, but failed to withstand the winner. LITTLE ARGO relinquished command after six furlongs, saved ground, and held on gamely under severe urging. DEARZIN went well placed, but could not improve his position when the real test came. DUNAIR could not reach contention. WISHING STAR raced far back.

SIXTH RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:48. Winner, Mrs. E. L. Bull's ch. f. (2), by Searock—Black Wand. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49 1-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:22 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TUYLERIES STAR, $20.40, $7.60, $4.60; SCOUT ON, $3.80, $3.20; LADY NYMPH, $3.40.

TUYLERIES STAR, kept in close pursuit of the leaders after avoiding crowding at the first turn, took command entering the home stretch, held on courageously under a drive, but carried SCOUT ON out all during the closing furlong. SCOUT ON worked his way up on the outside, challenged strongly midway of the stretch drive, but was carried out by the winner approaching the finish while Palumbo was shaking his whip in front of him. Sullivan made a claim of foul that was not allowed. LADY NYMPH closed with good speed after settling in her stride. SURRY had speed for a half-mile, then tired. FAIRIO lacked speed after breaking fast. LADY WINDSOR was outrun. CADZIE stopped early.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixth miles. Purse $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:13. Off at 4:14. Winner, F. Headley's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—VENNIE H., $77.80, $26.40, $15.40; HOT CAKE, $9.40, $6.40; PORPHYRY, $5.00.

VENNIE H. took command at once, went along under steadying restraint, saved ground and had speed in reserve at the end. HOT CAKE raced in nearest pursuit of the winner made repeated efforts in the last half-mile and came with good energy at the close. PORPHYRY secured racing room on the inside to enter a contending position, but failed to rally seriously when the final drive came. MONDEY raced forwardly but was unable to threaten during the final test. BUNTINO went into the first flight midway of the back stretch, but failed to menace thereafter. TENLESS weakened early.

Bloody But Unbowed

with Bill Bennings.

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 3.

Dear Al:

I wish to report that the closing mutuel bell, which worried the customers no end last summer, has ceased to clang for a quarter of an hour. Instead of starting the "final warning" to the bettors when the horses first reach the track, the bell is now held in reserve and does its stuff only for the final minute. While congratulating the track on that feature, I must give the palm to the mutuel department for the approximate odds. Seldom during the two days has a price been a point off between the odds displayed and those paid. In this respect, Charles Town tops Bowie, Laurel and Havre de Grace. The days of padded prices here seem, and I repeat seem, to be a thing of the past. I heard a pretty fair one this morning. Two colored stable boys with their teeth chattering were watching a horse galloping around the track. One said, "Who dat horse?" The other answered, "Dat's Only One." "You know that ain't no Only One, the stake horse," his friend replied. And the other boy came back with "He is the onlyest one on the track, ain't he?" And in closing, I might assure you that today was not a "midsummer night's dream" in them thar mountains,

BILL.

First Race—Povel, a well-bred juvenile, may show a lot of speed if allowed to see action in this field of maidens. Has worked well, Clocker Mike tells me. Fashion Queen was educated on the big courses and will never meet cheaper company. Gentleman comes to me as a possible surprise after some brisk trials.

Second Race—Radiator and Sundrops should battle it out in this field. The former gets the call, but it will take good riding to beat Sundrops, a winner here opening day. Pordina to take care of the others.

Third Race—Small Change has enough early speed to be a real threat in this abbreviated race. Comes from a barn full of sharp horses that run honestly. Stool Pigeon has been rested and may make an excellent showing at the first asking. Cantersine and Ada Wan will not be far out of it.

Fourth Race—Mucho Gusto is last on the list here and probably will not be in action. However, if sent to the post this one should take the measure of Jinnee. The latter won impressively here yesterday. Postponement and Our Ship are as sharp as hands can make them and must be respected.

Fifth Race—Master Lad, off Bowie form, should have no trouble with this opposition. Booker will ride. Furled Flag ran a powerful race yesterday and would be a factor here. Corner Boy and Billowy Wave deserve consideration.

Sixth Race—Guardian Angel went in the air at the break in that last effort. With Palumbo to ride, this might be the big surprise of the day. Browbeaten and Spear for the place and show awards.

Seventh Race—Golden Play showed an excellent opening day race and likes the track. Helen Bab is supposed to be a good thing, but I will have to see her in action before placing her on top. Dojo closed briskly last out and is dangerous.

Best bet—Master Lad.

Three Games Tonight In Heurich Cage Loop

Featuring the Delaware & Hudson-St. Mary's Celtics game at 7:30, three more Heurich Amateur League court tussles are on tap tonight in the brewery game.

At 8:30, Olmstead Grill and Acacia Insurance quints are paired and at 9:30, the curfew game, will bring together Coffey Sales and Bovello Plumbers.

AAA Program Spurs Cotton To Brisk Rise

Futures Close 12 to 34 Points Higher With Active Buying.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 3.—Announcement of the Administration's cotton program for 1936 was followed by active buying of cotton today. Prices advanced 12 to 34 points.

The first rush of buying on the Washington news was stimulated by the higher Liverpool cables, and there was active buying here from abroad as well as domestic trade sources.

After showing net gains of about 16 to 30 points, demand slackened somewhat and there were reactions of several points, but the buying continued, particularly in the late months which reached the best prices of the day in the late trading.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was firmer on increased covering and Southern buying today prompted the firmness of cotton, lard and crude oil and the rally in stocks. Final prices were 8 to 11 points higher. Sales, 53 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; December and January closed 10.77, March 10.81, May 10.80, July 10.82.

Foreign Bonds Rise During November

New York, Dec. 3.—Representative foreign bonds rose 0.26 per cent during November, according to the Foreign Bond Associates index of 50 representative issues, which appreciated from 57.18 on October 31 to 57.33 on November 30.

The 16 South American issues rose 2.68 per cent. The 30 European issues in the index fell 0.56 per cent and the 4 Australasian issues fell 0.52 per cent during the month.

Business Failures Rise.

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Commercial failures in the United States during the week ended November 28 numbered 229 compared with 196 in the preceding week and 201 in the same week last year, according to reports to Dun & Bradstreet.

Daily Oil Output Declines in Week

By the Associated Press.

Tulsa, Okla., Dec. 3.—Daily average crude oil production in the United States for the week ended November 30 was 2,836,808 barrels, a decline of 24,809 from the previous week, the Oil and Gas Journal reports.

Oklahoma and California accounted for the bulk of the decline, with virtually all other sections of the country unchanged.

Oklahoma production dropped 14,650 barrels to 484,725, and California output was 664,000 barrels, a drop of 10,000 barrels for the week.

East Texas also was down, dropping 7,000 barrels, but the remainder of the State made up the difference and Texas production was down 409 barrels to 1,085,251.

Louisiana was up slightly, increasing 555 barrels to 160,871; Kansas, up 1,650 barrels to 154,775; Eastern States, including Michigan, up 45 to 155,156.

The Rocky Mountain area was down 1,950 barrels to 111,420.

Banker Sees Recovery Here, Further Upturn

Real Prosperity Awaits New Construction, Says J. Stewart Baker.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 3.—J. Stewart Baker, chairman of the board of the Bank of the Manhattan Co., said today in his annual report to stockholders that a general improvement in business conditions had taken place and he looked for further expansion.

"The return to really prosperous times must wait on the revival of the demand for new construction, new machinery and new equipment," he said. "This will not come until businessmen feel that the laws under which they operate are not subject to violent changes and until the corporate securities market, upon which they must depend for the money to pay for plant expansion, is available to them without expensive and burdensome restrictions.

"Always, common sense, individual initiative and inherent energy have asserted themselves and the people of the United States have moved forward with renewed vigor to create, to manufacture and to distribute. There is no doubt that they will do so again."

Mr. Baker estimated that the bank earned $3,733,000 in 1935, which would compare with $4,950,000 earned last year. He said that the Manhattan had brought its foreign investment, much of which is of German origin, down to a "relatively small" amount, which was listed as $7,800,000 as of November 31, against $10,347,000 as of January 1 this year.

This was the first 1935 annual meeting of a large New York bank, most of which are held in January.

B. & O. Freight Heavy in November

Baltimore, Dec. 3.—Carloading on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for November totaled 175,616, of which 113,989 cars were loaded on line and 61,627 received from connections. It was the best November since 1931.

Compared with November, 1934, when the total was 160,132 comprising 106,790 cars loaded on line and 53,342 received from connections, there was an increase of 15,484 loads. Although November's total was below October, which had 203,508 cars loaded, October was exceptional in having the best total for any month since August, 1933.

Buying Surge in Final Trading Carries Stocks Up 1 to 4 Points

Railroad Shares As a Group Reach a New High for the Year; Bond Market Reflects Strength of Stocks.

By Frank MacMillen,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Dec. 3.—A last-hour burst of buying, which left the ticker behind the market, drove stocks up for net gains of 1 to 4 points today. The late demand, which came on the heels of a movement which had been quietly higher, was attributed in brokerage circles partly to reports that peace moves were under way looking to settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. It was also remarked that the market recently may have been oversold.

Grist for the trading mill had been considered generally favorable, and, under the leadership of the rails, metals and specialties, prices had ruled moderately higher up to the arrival of the reported attempts at liquidation of foreign hostilities.

At this juncture, financial observers said, shorts scrambled to cover and sold-out longs made haste to replace commitments they had sold recently owing to fears of a widening conflict.

Sharpest Rise Since May.

Measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks, the market advanced 1.1 to 55.1. The rise equaled that of November 23, and was the best since May 8, when it was 1.2. Transactions totaled 1,941,920 shares against 1,565,380 Monday.

The average of 15 rail shares was up 1 point to 29.8, a new high for the year. Analysts said the accumulation was attributable to the best October net operating income in five years and to the opinion that the outlook for industrial improvement after the turn of the year will bring heavier movement of freight.

Preliminary estimates of loadings last week indicated, however, that the official report to be issued Friday will register a substantial decline from the preceding week owing to inclusion of the Thanksgiving holiday.

Gains of a point or more were scored by the following Rails: Baltimore & Ohio at 23¼, Delaware & & Hudson at 38¼, Illinois Central at 20⅝, and New York Central at 28½. Norfolk & Western was up 5¾ on limited volume to 208, a new 1935 high.

Specialties ran up 1 to 2 or more points: Celanese to 29¼, Checker Cab to 19¼, Cluett-Peabody to 32 and Crown Cork to 46.

The buying of metals was put down by some to a mild revival of inflation talk. American Metal at 31, American Smelting at 61⅜, and McIntyre Porcupine at 39⅞, had gains of 1 to more than 2 points.

Radio B Pfd. Up 5.

Radio "B" preferred shot up 5 points to 86¾, other prominent issues with gains of 1 to 3 or more points were Allied Chemical at 163¾, American Can at 140, American Telephone at 157⅛, Bethelehem Steel at 48½, Chrysler at 84, International Nickel at 43½, Phillips Petroleum at 36¼ and United States Steel at 47⅝.

Estimates of a good holiday trade attracted buying to the store shares, and gains of 1 to 2 or more points were made by Macy at 54, Sears Roebuck at 68¾ and Montgomery Ward at 39¼.

Case led the farm equipments with a gain of 4¾ to 101¾. Caterpillar Tractor rose 2⅛ to 56½ and International Harvester 2 points to 62.

The oversubscription of the new United States Treasury issues gave a fillip to the bond market. Medium-priced rails were in demand.

The French franc ruled lower in foreign exchange dealings on reports that the Chamber of Deputies had suspended session today owing to a political dispute. It closed down .00⅜ of a cent at 6.58¾ cents. The pound sterling was up ½ of a cent at $4.93¼.

Wheat futures closed unchanged to ⅜ of a cent a bushel higher, corn was down ⅜ of a cent to ⅛ of a cent higher. Cotton finished with advances of 60 cents to $1.70 a bale in response to the announcement of the AAA acreage program.

Brokers' Loans Gain $53,691,568 in Month

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Aggregate collateral borrowings of New York Stock Exchange members on November 30 were $846,113,137, an increase of $53,691,568 compared with the October 31 total of $792,421,569, the exchange reported today.

World Gold Output Higher in October

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—World production of gold in October amounted to 2,258,000 fine ounces, against 2,200,000 in September, the American Bureau of Metals Statistics Co. reports.

In the United States the output was 369,000 ounces, compared with 352,000 in September; Canada, 305,000, against 281,000; South Africa, 932,000, against 899,000.

Bond Interest Is Defaulted By Cotton Belt

5 St. Louis Southwestern Issues Have Coupons Due January 1.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 3.—Directors of the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co. (Cotton Belt) voted today to omit the payment of interest due January 1, 1936, on five bond issues. It was estimated that interest payments would exceed $490,000. After the meeting the directors issued the following statement:

"In view of the estimated cash position of the St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co. on December 31, 1935, based upon estimated receipts and disbursements for current operation and maintenance, the board of directors today voted to omit the payment of interest due January 1, 1936, on the following bond issues issued or guaranteed by the company:

"Second mortgage gold income 4s due 1989;

First terminal and unifying mortgage 5s due 1952;

General and refunding mortgage 5s due 1990;

Central Arkansas & Eastern 5s due 1940;

Stephenville North & South Texas 5s due 1940.

"Further examination and study of the financial requirements of the company will be continued by the board of directors, to be reviewed at a meetings to be held later in the month."

So. Pac. Holds Control.

The decision of the cotton belt broad to omit January 1 interest payments was regarded in Wall street as confirming recent reports that Southern Pacific, the Parent property, was disinclined to advance any new funds to the smaller road.

Southern Pacific has a $24,000,000 investment in the cotton belt represented by an 87 per cent ownership of the latter's common and preferred stock.

Acquisition of the cotton belt completed in 1932 was in fulfillment of Southern Pacific's desire for more outlets to the Gulf and additional trackage in Texas. The road operates about 1,786 miles in Texas, Arkansas, Missouri, Illinois and Louisiana with main terminals at Fort Worth and Dallas, Tex.

Alabama Road Omits Dividend on Common

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—The regular semi-annual dividend of $1.50 on the preferred stock of the Alabama Great Southern Railroad Co. was announced today, but the company took no dividend action on the common stock, on which a dividend of $2 was paid a year ago.

Southern Railway holds a majority of both classes of Alabama Great Southern stock.

Int. Nickel Co. Plans $6,000,000 Addition

New York, Dec. 3 (AP).—Robert C. Stanley, president of International Nickel Co. of Canada, Ltd., said today his company has decided to increase its reserve capacity and would construct an addition to the Copper Cliff Smelter at a cost of approximately $3,000,000.

The work will be completed in about one year, he said.

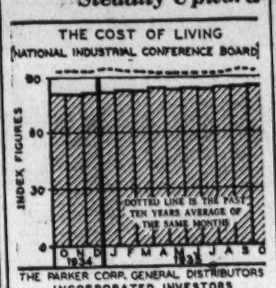
Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Dec. 3 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agr.).—Most all grades of domestic wools had some call, but sales on the whole were more scattered than during most of November. Depleted supplies accounted for some of the spotty activity. At the same time demand for several days lacked the keenness apparent only a few weeks ago. Prices were firm at recently quoted levels. Sales were noted on fairly choice combings 56s, 70s blood and 48s, 50s blood Ohio and similar fleeces at mostly around 39 cents in the grease.

Living Costs Climb Steadily Upward



Boston, Mass., Dec. 3.—The cost of living is steadily climbing upward. According to the National Industrial Conference Board's figures every $10 spent for living necessities in October of last year required $10.35 in October this year. But living costs are still 17 per cent less than October, 1929.

Rally in Wheat Offsets Losses

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 3.—Helped by a reduction of unofficial estimates of the Argentine exportable surplus, wheat late today more than overcame earlier losses in price. Private cables figured Argentina's probable exportable surplus of wheat this season as totaling 55,000,000 to 65,000,000 bushels. The new figures are 10,000,000 to 20,000,000 bushels under previous trade estimates.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅜ higher; May, 96⅝@96¾; corn, ¾ off to ⅛ up; May, 58¼@58⅜; oats unchanged to ¼ higher and provisions showing 2 cents to 10 cents advance.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 3.—A quietly cheerful trend prevailed on the stock exchange today. Government stocks advanced one to two points on the announcement that a new treasury issue of £300,000,000 would be offered to the public. Industrials, foreign bonds, oils and gold mining shares were better, but rubber issues eased. The market closed firm.

Paris—Following trader's optimistic view that the Laval cabinet would survive the chamber of deputies debate on political organizations, prices on the bourse held firm today. Issues of international issues, industrials and bank shares advanced slightly. The closing was firm.

Berlin—The tone of the boerse continued generally cheerful today and prices closed steady.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

A slight drop in leading gold currencies was the principal feature of foreign exchange trading yesterday.

The French franc declined .00¼ of a cent to 6.56¼ cents at New York and Swiss francs were .02 of a cent lower at 67.76 cents. The British pound sterling was ¼ of a cent higher at $4.93.

In Paris the dollar was only slightly changed at 6.588 cents to the franc and in London the American unit was a little lower at 4.93⅛ to the pound.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY

Well Jo, there you are. Did you hear that phone talk with Hartford? He finally admitted that he too, like Monty, noticed someone following him lately.
I wish I could remember where I saw that man who Mr. Eldorado has now as a guard.
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. 12-4

Well I'm not worried about this plot thickening. Hartford can take care of himself, and if anybody busts me in the head they'd better put all my lights out on the first jolt...or else.
I know I've seen him. But where? Where?

I'll bet those red-hots who tried to get that pocketbook you found, heard about us going on the yacht trip and want to get Hartford, the heir, in their clutches before...
Oh George, why let Oakdale's imagination get you so excited?

I'll admit someone has been following Mr. Eldorado. You can believe him. The more I think of his guard... the moment I saw him I realized.. I'd seen him before.... let me think...
The more I think of this treasure....it's million dollar stuff. I'm going to call up old Hartford again. Hello...

Orchestra to Accompany Bristol 'Messiah' Chorus

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., Dec. 3.—A 21-piece orchestra of stringed instruments will accompany the vested chorus of more than a hundred voices when Handel's oratoria, "The Messiah," is presented here December 15.

While this is the third annual performance of the oratorio by a local chorus under the direction of Prof. DeWitt Miller, of Sullins College, it is the first year an orchestra of any size has been assembled to accompany the voices. The orchestra will be made up from Sullins, Virginia Intermont and King colleges.

Gas Strike Expected.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., Dec. 3.—Another chapter in the endeavors of Davis Elkins and associates to produce natural gas in commercial quantities in lower Southwest Virginia may be written this week. Drillers on the third Davis Elkins well in Scott county, twelve miles from Bristol, anticipate striking gas before the end of the week. Early last week they had reached a depth of 3,102 feet.
